Hydro Talk Bar Protested

The second procedural dispute in the legislature in two days touched off a heated row between the government members and the opposition Friday.

Defiance of a ruling by Deputy Speaker Herb Bruch by Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) and a walk-out by all but two of the NDP and Liberal MLAs highlighted the argument.

Thursday a vote supported by all but one of the government members upheld a previous ruling that members could not discuss B.C Hydro and transit rates.

FREEDOM STIFLED

Opposition members charged Friday that the ruling and the vote stifled their freedom of speech in the legislature and challenged the decisions.

Macdonald, speaking in the budget debate, announced he would speak on hydro rates and started to say that transit rates would have to go up this year because the government was losing money.

Ed Smith (SC—North Peace River) arose on a point of order to point out that he had been overruled Thursday when he tried to talk on the same subject. Bruch agreed.

Macdonald then said "freedom of speech will be infringed in this legislature over my dead body."

BENNETT SPOKE

Though Bruch asked the MLA to sit down, Macdonald said he intended to proceed. He said that Premier Bennett had been allowed to speak without interference when he mentioned B.C. Hydro in the budget speech.

When Macdonald persisted, Bruch asked, "Does the member intend to defy?"

"Yes," Macdonald answered.

Speaker William Murray then took over the chair from Bruch, and Macdonald proceeded to say that the matter of transit rates affects the whole question of traffic congestion and pollution before he was called to order.

Murray upheld the ruling that the rates could not be discussed because of an intended amendment to the B.C. Power and Hydro Authority Act, and because of a resolution made by Liberal leader Patrick McGeer asking for an investigation into capital financing and rate structure of the corporation.

Riot Defendants Cited For Contempt of Court

CHICAGO (AP) — The case of seven men charged with conspiring to incite rioting during the 1968 Democratic national convention went to the jury today and the judge then cited several defendants for contempt of court.

U.S. District Court Judge Julius J. Hoffman ordered the jury of 10 women and two men to begin their deliberations.

Then he announced he would take up the matter of contempt against the defendants and their lawyers during the trial, and began reading contempt citations against them.

It was not immediately known how many defendants were cited or what the penalties would be.

Hoffman spent about two hours instructing the jurors.

He told them they must first determine whether any of the defendants was a member of a conspiracy that planned the violence during the convention in Chicago in August, 1968.

"If you find that a conspiracy existed and during the existence of a conspiracy, one of the alleged overt acts was committed by a member of that conspiracy, that is sufficient to find all members of the conspiracy guilty.

"When persons enter into the unlawful agreement, they become agents for one another," the judge said.

Final arguments in the case were heard Friday.

Charged with conspiracy to incite rioting are Jerry Rubin, Abbie Hoffman, David T. Dellinger, Rennard C. Davis, Thomas E. Hayden, Lee Weiner and John R. Froines.

If convicted, each man faces a $20,000 fine and a maximum of 10 years in prison.

Battle Anticipated At Premiers' Meet

Inflation Strategy Big Issue

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada's two wars—against inflation and pollution — will dominate next week's federal-provincial conference here.

And while there is unanimous agreement that both must be won, federal officials expect to meet considerable resistance to their strategy, particularly in the inflation area.

Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Friday that consumer credit, rents and professional fees will be discussed in the framework of both levels of government when he meets with the 10 provincial premiers beginning Monday.

THREE AREAS

He has already singled out three provinces — Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia — as operating in an inflationary economy, and has hinted at the possibility of federal measures aimed specifically at them.

But if such tactics are advanced, there is little question but that these three premiers will react adversely and vigorously.

The prices and incomes commission has indicated it favors a broad, national approach to the entire inflation problem, but this approach, too, will not be met with unanimous favor.

The slower-growth provinces such as the Maritimes have already argued that they do not contribute to inflation, yet nationwide measures against it hit them the hardest.

The prices and incomes

MAN JAILED 6 MONTHS FOR SHOOTING SWAN

NANAIMO — A 21-year-old man has been sentenced to six months in jail for killing a swan.

"It's hard to believe anyone could be so low," Provincial Court Judge William Philpott said Friday in passing sentence on David John Bull, 329 Prideaux St.

"As far as I'm concerned this is one of the most despicable thinks I've had to deal with," the judge added.

Bull, an optical technician, said he had gone to Bowen Park to shoot another type of bird for food and killed the mute swan by accident but the judge said he had sneaked out in the dead of night and shot "an innocent bird."

Bull was also placed on two years' probation and banned from possession of firearms or ammunition for five years and he was warned that a contravention of this restriction could result in five years' imprisonment.

Judge Philpott made reference to civic-minded individuals who strive to provide places of beauty for universal enjoyment but are thwarted by destructive vandals.

"People like you should not be allowed to go free among decent people because you do nothing but go out and spoil," the judge concluded.

Hospital Board Blasts Altering of Report

By JIM HUME

Former Mayor Hugh Stephen was aware that two pages were removed from a hospital site feasibility study before it went to the regional district hospital board, Dr. Alex Wood, chairman of St. Joseph's Hospital Board, said Friday night.

And consulting architect, F. S. Brodie, admitted that he had not told the regional district representatives of the deletion during discussions on the report because "we were aware the (St. Joseph's) board was very nervous about this, and that's why we didn't say anything."

The remarks were made during a two-hour Regional Hospital District investigation directed by North Saanich Mayor James Cumming, in an attempt to find out why Thompson, Berwick, Pratt and Partners, the Vancouver firm that prepared the report, changed their opinion on street routing.

TWO PAGES

The change came to light earlier this week when the Times revealed that two pages had been removed from a feasibility study presented to the regional district and that a third page had been substantially edited.

In the first copy of the study presented to St. Joseph's board, the architects stated they were in "complete disagreement" with the proposal to extend Belleville Street through the new hospital site.

They strongly recommended

Report Said Yes-No City Paid Both Ways

It cost $5,000 to get a "yes" and $5,000 to get a "no" — that is how Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock described the $10,000 St. Joseph's Hospital site feasibility study.

He made the comment during a stormy confrontation between regional hospital district officials, members of the St. Joseph's Hospital board and two representatives of Thompson, Berwick, Pratt and Partners, authors of the study.

The first version of the study stated that the architects were in total disagreement with a proposal to extend Belleville Street through the hospital site.

The "total disagreement" section was later removed.

"We've spent $10,000 of the taxpayers money to get a report," Haddock said. "That works out at $5,000 for a 'yes' and $5,000 for a 'no'."

★ ★ ★

Following the meeting Haddock said he was fearful that by withholding vital information from regional officials the hospital program for the region could be set back 10 years.

Taxpayers are scheduled to vote later this year on a massive $45 million acute care hospital referendum.

Haddock said the events of this week had now made it virtually impossible to hold the vote this year.

Victoria—City in Search of an Identity

Friday afternoon. Late. And it is raining that soft meddlesome rain that Victoria has some days. Rain that seems like it never began and will probably never end.

Jack Scott got up from his desk here in the Times office, pulled on his rain coat, stubbed out a cigarette and went out into the rain to have his picture taken.

The photographer took him back to Blanshard Street and made his picture with the still-barren, raw-looking, low-income housing development as a backdrop. No grass has been planted there yet; heavy trucks have made ruts in the mud.

Blanshard Street — it must be the world's shortest freeway — was quiet; the rush for home hadn't begun; Scott looked a little tired.

"How long have you been in the newspaper business, Jack?"

"One hundred and twenty-three years."

Jack Scott had lit another cigarette. His hair is handsomely grey. He looks like he might be a shade overweight. He is slowly recovering from the East.

The East in this case is Toronto. Scott has had a career that makes young guys entering the newspaper business hungry, frustrated, that makes them lie awake nights scheming.

In Toronto he is to begin writing a column for the biggest daily newspaper in Canada but he has broken his leg and is in bed for seven months. He comes back to his home of 20 years on a quiet beach on Saltspring Island — and renews a long love affair with Victoria.

He is 55 and when you're 55 bones can be slow to mend. And there is even less time to waste.

Back there in the East, the freeways are never quiet, they roar all day and all night like the river at the gates of Hell.

"I began wondering what the hell I was doing it for," he says.

And he thought "stuff it." And he came to Victoria. And he came for probably the same reason that every one of us who isn't native-born (how many of those are there, anyway?) came here.

Because it isn't "there."

He's been "there." Started on the News Herald in Vancouver when he was 15 — 40 years ago.

He went to war. Came back to the Vancouver Sun. The biography reads like this:

"Scott, long a featured columnist with the Vancouver Sun comes most recently from five years abroad as a roving correspondent for the Toronto Daily Star. He spent two years as the first resident Canadian correspondent in Latin America and later headed the London bureau of the Star covering Britain, Europe and the Middle East . . . He is a winner of the National Newspaper Award for a series on race relations in South Africa and the Bowater Award for a series on developing nationalism within French Canada. Other assignments have included the Mau-Mau rebellion in Kenya, coverage of the Arab-Israeli war (the six-day one), revolutions in South Africa and the "missile crisis" in Fidel Castro's Cuba."

And he's in Victoria?

Yes, covering another rumble — the one this place is making as it's dragged "into the 20th century, reluctantly."

But this story could have more significance for him than any other he has written:

"I was looking to find out what this place is where I plan to spend the rest of my days."

And so that Friday afternoon photograph has added significance, because those low-income houses (almost like little high rises, eh?) and that freeway (it's been called the freeway to nowhere, eh?) are a long way from afternoon tea in silver pots and the duck pond by Beacon Hill — a long way from the postcard picture of Victoria an awful lot of Victorians think this place is.

Call it emergence. Or about-to emergence. Or thinking-about emergence.

He has produced a remarkable document, this reporter, an eight-part series about

Pacific Press Guards Posted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Uniformed guards were posted at all doors of the Pacific Press Building in Vancouver today as the newspaper company stepped up security precautions in the midst of a labor dispute that has disrupted production of the Sun and the Province.

Production of today's Sun was running at least two hours behind schedule, with the press run not expected to start before 1 p.m. PST.

Today's Sun was expected to be 112 pages, including colored comics and the magazine section.

Starting Monday, the Sun and Province will be reduced to 16- and 24-page editions, respectively, in the wake of a decision by Pacific Press Ltd. to cancel its contract with the International Typographical Union, cut production and reduce staff and payroll.

The newspapers will carry no advertising, except for notices of births, deaths and marriages and legal notices.

Pacific Press, which produces both newspapers, said Friday the decision was taken as a result of deliberate slowdowns in production departments. It told the ITU only 80 printers would be required next week, instead of the 260 employed last week. The pressroom staff will be reduced to 45 from 70.

The company said reductions in the number of stereotypers and mailers also are being considered.

Ed Benson, general manager of the company, said the cutbacks were made to prevent further losses. He said Pacific Press has lost more than $650,000 in revenue that is not recoverable since production harrassment began last November.

GUILD NOT AFFECTED

The Vancouver-New Westminster newspaper guild, representing editorial, advertising, circulation, maintenance and other non-mechanical employees, is not affected by the staff reductions.

In a notice circulated to employees Friday, Mr. Benson said Pacific Press is also considering withdrawal of "all offers it has made in good faith" during bargaining since last fall with printers, pressmen, mailers, stereotypers and the guild.

"The company has incurred extra costs of more than $100,000 because of the slowdown in production," he said.

"Obviously, the company cannot continue to sustain such damage."

Pacific Press newspapers, especially the Sun, have been plagued by serious production delays since Feb. 5. The Sun managed to print only 42,000 copies of its normal Friday run of 285,000. The Province got 107,000 copies of a normal Friday run of 135,000.

Thousands of youngsters in the Vancouver area were forced to do without their favorite comics Saturday. The Province told its readers that "due to difficulties in our production departments, we are unable to include the colored comic section that normally is part of a Saturday edition."

The Sun managed to print about half the comic sections needed for a normal Saturday run of 290,000 copies. The sections are printed one or more days before distribution.

Len Guy, president of the Vancouver ITU local, described the company decision as a move to "scare the employees," but said his men would report to work as usual.

"It is a form of intimidation," Mr. Guy said.

"But apart from that I am concerned in another area. My concern is for the newspaper. These are our newspapers which we have helped to build and I don't think any management has the unilateral right to destroy our newspapers."

He said the company is laying off printers on a priority basis, "which they have the right to do, depending on the volume of work."

"We work on a slipboard system and it means there will be more subs than usual. The number of men working depends on the volume of work."

Bill McLeman, president of the Vancouver-New Westminster Guild, said the company is making a mistake.

"It certainly will not make it easier for the unions involved in the current contract dispute to reach settlement," he said in a statement.

"I hope that the staff cutbacks by the company will not constitute an impediment to a negotiated settlement, but I am afraid that could well be the case."

GETS INJUNCTION

Mr. Justice A. M. MacFarlane of the British Columbia Supreme Court granted a Pacific Press application Wednesday for an injunction against the alleged deliberate slowdowns. The order was against the ITU and the pressmen's and mailers' unions.

It prohibited the unions from allowing their members to continue "concerted interference" with production and from "supporting, encouraging, condoning or engaging in any activity which is intended to restrict production."

However, the unions are appealing, claiming they cannot enforce conditions of the injunction on individual members to the satisfaction of Pacific Press.

Mr. Guy said the B.C. court of appeal will be asked either to rescind the injunction or to give specific direction to the unions on how to comply with it.

APPROVED STRIKE

All five unions have approved strike action, but none has served strike notice.

Contracts between Pacific Press and the unions expired last Oct. 31. All remained in force on an interm basis, however, pending signing of new ones — although each side had the right to cancel at any time.

Negotiators reached tentative agreement on wages before talks broke off in November, but they did not resolve such issues as pensions, vacations, night differential and length of the contract.

commission is to go before Trudeau and the premiers with specific proposals concerning government contributions in the fight against inflation. It is virtually certain to seek restraints on rents, consumer credit and professional fees, among other things.

A commission spokesman said Friday that efforts will be made to "reconcile the over-all effect of such action," indicating that the approach is likely to be on a national basis rather than a regional one.

BENNETT COMMENT

That Premier W. A. C. Bennett would strongly resist any regional restraints is unquestionable. He said Friday the recent suggestion by Trudeau of measures to restrict price increase in the richer areas of Canada is "more than stupid."

"It would be crazy."

The federal government, he said, "is flouting the laws of economism."

Bennett said his submission to the conference will include a call for the abolition of the federal 12 per cent sales tax "to ease prices" and a 25 per cent reduction in tariffs, to ensure "real competition."

Prices and Incomes Commission Chairman Dr. John Young goes into the conference well-supported, after last week's meeting with representatives of business and industry which produced firm commitments for co-operation in the inflation fight.

He is expected to propose an effective program of voluntary price controls, based on this commitment from business.

ONE OBJECTION

When the conference turns its attention to the war on pollution a more unanimous agreement is expected. Discussion will centre on the proposed Canada Water Act, and to date there has been only one hint of objection.

Officials were taken aback Friday by a report from Quebec that the provincial government considers the act unacceptable. Until this report came in, there was no reason to expect any rejection of the act, designed to launch a fedefal-provincial attack on pollution and open the door for a joint program of water resource development.

The Quebec resistance is apparently hinged on a feeling the act would have the effect of nationalizing water.

TANKER SPILL HITS ISLANDS

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Oil from an 18-square-mile slick that a grounded tanker dumped in Old Tampa Bay spread today onto islands that are the homes of sea birds and shellfish.

Tides and winds held the mass of sludge away from Florida's tourist beaches and waterfront homes, however, while a skimmer barge worked to sweep the oil up and crews with floating plastic booms worked to contain it.

Altering of Hospital Report Blasted that Belleville be routed north to link with Collinson and so around the northern boundary of the hospital.

Both opinion and proposal were subsequently deleted from the feasibility study handed to the regional district.

Brodies' claim that he never mentioned his firm's original stand against the Belleville extension because he knew St. Joseph's officials were "nervous" drew the ire of chairman Cumming.

"Are you saying that the hospital board and their nervousness are as important to you as your integrity?" asked Cimming.

"My integrity is intact," snapped Brodie.

"When you sat down to discuss these things with us you were presenting your report to the people who had paid for it, or at least are responsible for paying your bill," Cumming retorted.

INFORMATION

"Don't you think we had the right to all the information available?"

Brodie said as far as his firm was concerned, the client was St. Joseph's hospital.

"My feeling was that we were paid by St. Joseph's Hospital board and they were our clients. I had no intention of compromising that," Brodie said.

(While St. Joseph's paid the bill the funds come from the provincial government and regional district. Both had to approve the study before it commenced, both will rule on the final decision.)

The answer didn't impress regional board director Howard Elder of Sooke, nor did it satisfy the regional group's hospital consultant Andrew Pitkethley.

"I'm a little upset by what you professionals are doing," Pitkethley said. "If this sort of thing goes on, architects are not longer going to be hired by individual hospital boards. The regional district will have to do the hiring.

"We should be sure then that we shall get unexpurgated reports."

OTHER PARTS

"I think it's time somebody voiced the unspoken thought on the minds of each of us here," Elder said.

"The thought is that if these architects were willing to vary a technical report to suit what they might have thought were political reasons, we wonder what other parts of the report were varied.

"And we wonder if the report is valid at all."

John Wallace, a second representative of the consultant firm, retorted that the report was not changed for political reasons.

"Then you varied it for some other reason," Elder replied sharply. "And the question is still raised — why?"

PHILOSOPHY

Both architects, Wood, and Dr. Peter Banks, a member of St. Joseph's board, insisted throughout the long afternoon that the chairman of the regional hospital district during 1969, (Mayor Hugh Stephen) had been constantly informed of the original stand against the Belleville Street extension and the subsequent deletion of two pages changing the consultants' philosophy.

Cumming asked Wood who authorized the deletions.

"They were taken out by us with the knowledge of the chairman of your board," Wood answered.

"Did I hear you say Mayor Stephen agreed to delete the two pages before the report came to us? Did he agree?" Cumming asked.

"That's right, no wait a minute. He agreed we should live with the Belleville Street extension," Wood answered.

"Then the report we got to study and on which we based our arguments to the minister (Ralph Loffmark) was not the original?" asked Cumming.

It was agreed that it was not.

"I 'd like to know on what basis you were consulting with Mayor Stephen?" asked Elder. "Is it my understanding that somewhere along the line you two gentlemen agreed that these two pages should come out?"

"What we did was ask the architects to revise their first draft and give us something we could live with," Wood replied.

"Well I feel a little put out that you in your great wiseness decided that the committee couldn't digest the full facts," Elder retorted.

Later in the meeting consultant Brodie was questioned on the deletions.

CLARIFICATION

His statement was made after regional board executive secretary William Long asked for clarification of the dates of publication of the two reports. (Hospital officials have maintained consistently that the first report was merely a draft and subject to revision and that the edited report was in effect the final report.)

"I am interested because I note that the date on the so-called draft or first report is June 13, 1969," Long said. "That is also the date on the revised report. The same date is on both reports."

Brodie said he wanted to make it perfectly clear that there was only one report.

ONE REPORT

"When we were about halfway through our study we felt perhaps that the road could go round the hospital site (rather than through). We started negotiations with the city to see how they felt about getting the roads round the site.

"After all the stuff was printed (for the first report) the city said 'no way.' They told us that politically and practically it couldn't be done.

"How could we then stand up and say this (that the streets should be re-routed) knowing that we would be shot in holes?

"We withdrew our first opinion when it became obvious it didn't hold water."

AUTHORSHIP

Wallace, who claimed actual authorship of the original report, said it was unfortunate that his wording "was not as accurate as intended."

He was referring to the paragraph, later deleted, which says of the proposal to extend Belleville Street: "(it is) a proposal with which we are in complete disagreement, and one which we believe to be largely unwarranted from a planning point of view."

Wallace said he should have inserted the words "from an aesthetic point of view" after the word "disagreement."

He added that he would still like to see Belleville re-routed but now realized that his first proposed diversion created great difficulties.

NO SOLUTION

"We now hold the opinion that the diversion would be difficult," he said. "We have no solution to the matter of cost or to the traffic problem."

Wallace said the decision to remove the "complete disagreement" clause and the two pages outlining their alternate proposal "was ours."

He added that "we appreciate that our position is contrary to the minister (of health) at the moment."

Loffmark is strongly opposed to the Belleville extension.

With both Wallace and Brodie insisting that the major revisions to the June 13 report after discussions with city traffic experts, city manager Dennnis Young was asked if he had a record of meetings with the architects.

TELEPHONE CALLS

"Berwick and Pratt made their first contact with us by telephone on June 10," Young answered in reply to Cumming. "There were numerous telephone calls from us to them following that contact in an attempt to set up a meeting.

"Our first actual meeting with them was on June 29—I'm sorry, our first meeting with them was on July 29."

Secretary Long interjected with the question to Wallace "but you were typing the report on June 13 !"

Wallace replied: "We were probably typing long before, then, we were so sure of our proposal (to divert the street)."

"You were typing your report before you discussed the matter with the city then?" asked Long, The reply was inaudible.

"One thing is apparent from all this," said Mayor Curtis. "A yawning credibility gap has appeared.

MOOT POINT

"It's a moot point whether you are working for St. Joseph's or whether you are working for us, the regional district.

"I think we are the client. And we don't want you to tell us what you think we want to hear.

"We want you to tell us what we must hear."

"Read the report," said Wallace.

"I have read it," snapped Curtis.

He then suggested the meeting adjourn. "I think that's about all we can do right now," he said. "Just walk away from it for a couple of days and then see what our next move is."

Two days is about all officials can wait before making a decision. They're scheduled to meet with Loffmark next week to continue the discussion on whether Belleville should be extended or re-routed.

Victoria that has been for him an exploration. It could be, for all of us who have been here a while a revelation.

He says it's a news story — something is happening here.

His job, the reporter's job, is to try to tell "what it means at this moment in history."

And Victoria, Jack, does Victoria mean anything at this moment in history?

"It's just now awakening to the need to figure out the answer itself," he says. This place is beginning to worry.

From what he calls "human standpoint," he says this is "the best place in Canada. But from another, "there's not much dynamic involvement."

"There are so many illusions and myths — the schizophrenia thing — everybody has notions about what this place is and what they want it to be.

"But these are all shredding away.

"Everybody wants to see something that makes it a legitimate place to live."

Everybody wants to know "what the hell is going on."

Jack Scott went out and asked. He asked a lot of people. He put together a picture — it begins in the Times Monday — of his new town.

It might just be one of the most startling and amusing things you have ever read.

Macdonald asked why the premier could talk on the subject and yet the opposition was not able to reply. "I can't accept the whittling away of the rights of the House," he said.

When the speaker insisted Macdonald take his seat, the MLA took it under protest.

McGeer suggested that the government should call the debate on his resolution.

However, Murray called the next speaker, Welfare Minister Gaglardi and the opposition, except for Macdonald and Liberal Allan Williams left.

During his speech Macdonald suggested three directions toward a "planned, equitable society."

He said these were:

- Federal-provincial powers to check excessive prices, fees, rents and profits;
- A stronger trade union movement to be given a place at the table where real decisions are made;
- And there should be national and provincial conferences between employer associations and the national and provincial labor bodies, and governments, to lay out a year or two ahead guidelines for production goals, prices and labor income.

Macdonald also called for a labor bill or rights to prevent "rare" abuses of members of unions, greater protection for tenants, and greater percentage of union organization in the work force.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

A baby is almost entirely helpless and he gives many problems to his doting mother. He has less ability than his older brother in being able to regulate the tempeerature in his body. At first, his temperature isn't very constant under even constant conditions. Then he grows a little and when he sleeps or wiggles or screams or squeals at more or less regular intervals his body temperature becomes more regular.

When the baby grows up and walks around, then his body doesn't regulate its temperature so well when the outside temperature is either very high or very low. A child who screams at play can scream up a higher temperature.

Those who are aging have temperatures that are usually lower. The ability of the elderly to adapt to temperature changes drops a bit as year after year passes by. The aged suffer more when the temperatures are extreme.

Now Score One For Haddock In Health Tiff

By JIM HUME

If and when Health Minister Ralph Loffmark signs a piece of paper introducing a new (and acceptable to Victoria) public health cost formula, Mayor Courtney Haddock can chalk up his first victory.

Hume

The win column hasn't been too crowded with points since Haddock took office in January. And while he can't claim all the plaudits for the about-face of the provincial government, he can certainly take the lion's share.

It was Haddock who raised eyebrows at city hall and throughout the Greater Victoria area when he suggested that before Victoria pull the pin on the metro health board, all parties concerned have a conference with the five local MLAs.

Even the discussion itself didn't really impress observers because apart from Dr. Scott Wallace of Oak Bay the members of the legislature didn't appear too well acquainted with the problem.

(Waldo Skillings simple solution to the whole thing was "amalgamate" just like that and apparently overnight.)

But if the MLAs were a little cloudy when they walked in to the conference room, they knew when they left that the three core municipalities were a little up-tight about the inequitable way costs were shared. ($2.50 per capita for Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Victoria while Saanich and other areas coughed up only 30 cents a head).

And they knew beyond doubt that Victoria was serious about quitting the organization and going it alone if need be.

With Loffmark now promising a new formula on a province-wide basis within the next few days, Haddock is quite rightly suggesting that the city consider lifting its Feb. 23 deadline for pulling out.

And Ald. Tom Christie is quite rightly suggesting that he agrees with cancelling the deadline once Loffmark has signed.

A wise precaution.

A couple of years ago Cool-Aid was a dirty word.

A year ago it was accepted, but only with a high degree of suspicion. After all what possible good could kids with beards and beads do with a chunk of money handed to them by municipal governments.

Nervously the combined municipal governments of Greater Victoria chipped a few dollars into the pot. The provincial government matched those dollars either in cash or with vouchers for grub.

And a year went by.

The old grants ran out (they ran out to the extent that for the past few weeks staffers have been hauling in less than $50 a month) and Cool-Aid came up to bat again.

Twelve months ago it took the missionary zeal of Charles Barber to convert the washed and un-bearded municipal purse holders before they backed the concept financially.

This time around it took only a quiet statement of Cool-Aid's year-long record, the kids handled and helped, cash spent, beds and meals provided to spring loose the funds for another year.

The problems of Cool-Aid — and the community — are not yet over. Youngsters will continue to flee their all-too-comfortable homes and their all-too-well-ordered family lives. And Cool-Aid will continue to provide the slim bridge between astounded adults ("why would MY kid run-away when I've given him everything he ever wanted") and rebellious ("you've lost touch with reality, dad, we just can't communicate any more") youth.

In fact as Barber has already announced, Cool-Aid is already looking for a second house to provide back-up sleeping space when the Balmoral headquarters are jammed — as they undoubtedly will be this summer.

He's a persistent young man. He'll make his target.

Not just because he's persistent, but because Victoria has always backed its winners.

It's a Long Way to Fix a Boat

TORONTO (CP) — Bernie Lesage, Class A diesel mechanic, is going on an out-of-town assignment soon.

It's several thousand miles out of town, in fact—about 1,000 miles up the Amazon River.

Mr. Lesage, 27, was picked from 81 local diesel mechanics who responded to a newspaper report that a houseboat on the Amazon was having engine trouble.

The boat is owned by nine Canadian mission priests at Itacoatiara, Brazil, who use it to reach remote native villages.

The priests got a bonus when they selected Mr. Lesage—he works for the company which manufactured the engine he'll have to repair and the company is throwing in supply parts free.

"It's the chance of a lifetime," Mr. Lesage says. "And it's a great opportunity to help people who really need it."

His wife, he says, "thinks it's wonderful that I'm going, but admits it's not a place she would probably select for a vacation."

The priests' plight was made public after they appealed for help to the Scarborough Foreign Mission Society, where Rev. George Marskell got involved.

Unemployed Not Wanted 'In My Box'

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Francois Mercier, chairman of the board of trustees of the National Arts Centre, caused embarrassment at an Ottawa news conference Friday night by remarking that he wouldn't want to have unemployed people in his theatre box.

The remark brought grimace to the face of Scretary of State Gerard Pelletier, who appointed Mercier two months ago, and surprised and embarrassed other guests, the newspaper says.

Asked what plans he has to make it easier for low-income people and the unemployed to see performances at the $46,000,000 centre, Mercier is quoted as replying he has no desire "to have unemployed people in my box."

Mercier earlier had said the trustees have no plans to offer free access or subsidized prices to those who are unemployed or on welfare, although the centre has tried to make it possible for some disadvantaged groups, such as shut-ins, to attend performances.

Sterilization Right Sought for Women

A plea for the placing of male and female sterilization on an equal level of accessibility and respectability was heard in the legislature Friday.

Minister Without Portfolio Patricia Jordan said women should be able to undergo tubal ligation for "permanent family planning" in approved hospitals.

The surgery should be made available to all women who "in good conscience request such operations in writing."

The request should be presented by a qualified surgeon to a "properly constituted medical committee whose approval is put in writing."

Mrs. Jordan said she was aware of the religious beliefs of those who would oppose her ideas but added that a good deal of the public debate over abortion would be rendered uncessary if sterilization for women were more readily accessible.

FEDERAL LAW

She said there is nothing in provincial or federal law making male or female sterilization illegal. But she said the Canadian Medical Protective Association doesn't give doctors the same financial coverage for sterilization operations as it does for appendix operations and other surgery.

The real point in the debate on abortion is "why should these women find themselves in this situation to begin with?" Mrs. Jordan said.

She said the "attitude of a few" is forcing women into an "intolerable situation" and indicates professional and administrative bodies haven't kept pace with public attitudes.

"A mature woman who for one reason or another, be it economic, or size of family or through personal choice between she and her husband, cannot have a tubal ligation except for conservative health reasons or under extreme mental conditions," she said.

"A mature single woman hasn't a hope in Hades," she added.

"The pill and other preventive measures have given society a false sense of security and allowed the professions to evade the issue."

She said she is aware that tubal ligation is considered major surgery whereas the vasectomy operation for men is not. But she said there is no proof that the risk involved in taking the pill or in abortion is any less than that for sterilization.

On another subject, Mrs. Jordan attacked the decision of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission "to ban all forms of transmitting a free choice of American television shows to the majority of geographical areas of Canada and British Columbia."

CABLEVISION

The CRTC decision limited future cablevision tranmission of U.S. stations into new areas.

Mrs. Jordan criticized CBC television as "a steady diet of negativism and hours of self-styled pundits who smoke their way through program after program of inarticulate self analysis."

She said Interior people are "reeling" from the thought of a continued diet of CBC programs and suggested the CRTC decision was an insult to people in that region who have as much right to decide whether American television will "corrupt" them as do people in Victoria and Vancouver.

Mrs. Jordan also warned against the danger of "tourist pollution" through failure to protect the unique charm of B.C.

She said it isn't enough to depend on climate to attract tourists, a well- balanced, distinctive appeal must be maintained, she said.

In Victoria, she said, there are numerous examples of unique charm but she criticized an unnamed shopping centre, at the entrance to the city, which she described as a "glass and blacktop shopping centre with as much charm as my left toe."

Teeth Rate Special Rite

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuters) — A special ceremony was held on the northwestern Malaysian island of Langkawi Friday for Prime Minister Tunku Rahman to bury two of his teeth.

The teeth were extracted Thursday in the West Malaysian town of Lumut where a Malaysian navy frigate carrying Rahman to Langkawi made a special stop because he had developed a toothache.

After the 67-year-old Rahman buried his teeth, two coconut palms were planted on top of them.

He ex$lained that the ceremony was arranged because on each of two previous visits to Langkawi he had suffered a toothache and hoped this would help prevent it happening again.

A Promising Proposal

MR. GAGLARDI'S NEW APproach to public welfare has much to commend it. In part it comprises a form of guaranteed income: government funds will make up the amount short of a livable income for a person who, by reason of mental or physical handicap, is unable to earn a full wage. Persons, able or otherwise, will be trained, if necessary, for employment, and full-time jobs will be sought for all those who can hold them. Others, who by reason of infirmity or domestic responsibilities are not able to take paid employment at all, will be wholly supported by government funds.

It becomes obvious at once, of course, that the whole program must stand or fall on the question of finding employment—and this no doubt will prove to be the chief problem for Mr. Gaglardi and his reorganized Department of Rehabilitation and Social Improvement.

"Welfare" has become a derogatory term for many persons, and its abandonment for a more descriptive terminology may do much to improve the relationship between recipients of assistance and those who dispense it. Undoubtedly there are many persons living wholly on assistance today who do not actively seek work. There are many others who would very willingly exchange their dependence for employment which would give them a living and a welcome boost to their self-respect.

There have been many cases in which a man could obtain work which would return him not quite enough money with which to support his family but too much to enable him to qualify for welfare payments. The result has been that he has had to choose idleness and complete dependence. Mr. Gaglardi's plan apparently would in many cases meet this situation—at considerable saving to the public purse—by permitting partial assistance in order to make up the shortage of inadequate earnings.

The plan also stresses training for those who need it. This concept is already embodied in federal manpower programs, but if Mr. Gaglardi can bring new applications of it, so much the better. Such organizations as the Goodwill workshops and the Elford Street centre for the retarded already do an excellent job of training and employing handicapped persons. Mr. Gaglardi's new plan might well include assistance in extending efforts along these lines. Mothers with small children will need day care centres if they are to be freed to train for jobs and hold them, and the existing excellent centres may not prove sufficient to cope with any large new demand for services. This, too, Mr. Gaglardi will have to take into consideration.

But if an appreciable dent is to be made in the large number of men and women, young and old, who are able to work but unable to find employment, a very intensive effort will have to be made to find or create jobs in industry and commerce. Where these jobs are Mr. Gaglardi has not disclosed, but the success of his promising plan will depend on this key factor. His task will not be easier in a time when a certain amount of economic retrenchment is under way as a means of combating inflation.

The Patients Are Still Waiting

THE LATEST FLARE-UP OF the controversy concerning the location of a new St. Joseph's hospital building and the complication of the Belleville Street extension through the proposed site was occasioned chiefly by a breakdown in communication between the hospital officials and the regional authorities.

The manner in which the architects' original preference for a roundabout Belleville extension was amended to concede that the direct route through St. Ann's Academy grounds, while less acceptable, was still feasible, has been publicly explained. Why these details were not known to the regional board members and city hall planners is still not clear. But the necessary enquiries and explanations should not be permitted to distract both regional and hospital authorities from their main task, which is to forge ahead with plans for the provision of more hospital beds at the earliest moment possible.

It is many, many months since the need became urgent, since the public indicated its wishes, since the regional hospital board began its labors. But so far no brick has been laid, no roof has been set, no patient has been tucked in.

The St. Joseph's expansion program is an essential part of the total hospital plan, but it is only a part. There are other important aspects of the job — involving both acute and other types of care — which should be got on with. Let's not forget them in the midst of the inviting challenge of controversy. Let's set a few completion dates and work to them.

Labor Leaders Should Listen

CANADIAN LABOR LEADERS have been largely unco-operative in attempts to tame the wage-price spiral that threatens the Canadian economy. In the wake of the national conference on price stability, at which labor was not represented, business agreed to endorse a plan for general price restraints. Labor leaders have referred to the conference in singularly cynical terms, calling restraint policies a "ploy," "bluff" and "joke."

The joke, as it turns out, may be on the labor leaders. Gallup polls claim that 58 per cent of the labor force—34 per cent were against it—think a wage-price freeze as a curb on inflation is a good idea. But Mr. Dennis McDermott, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers, summed up the attitude of other labor leaders by saying that if Canadian businessmen "want to hold prices for about 10 years and let the rest of us catch up, that's fine."

This is a cavalier remark from a responsible union official. Even more difficult to understand was the remark of Marcel Pepin, president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, who claims that the Federal Prices and Incomes Commission is the direct cause of inflation. Business has indicated an initial willingness to go along with government plans for curbing inflation. If labor continues to press for higher wages, business can point to labor with some validity as a prime cause of inflation. The polls indicate that the rank and file of labor are willing to be reasonable if business holds the line. The membership appears to be leading the leaders.

Bear Market for Bare Market

REPORTS FROM NEW YORK state that the latest "nudie" musical virtually died before it was born—at least the previews aroused such monumental disinterest that "The Way It Is," an off-Broadway revue, never officially opened.

The novelty of nudism on the stage apparently suffers a high mortality rate from over-exposure. Add that to the potentially topless financial backers who risked losing their shirts on the production and its speedy demise is understandable.

A bear market for a bare market, it appears.

Winter Wheat. —Ruth Laming.

Letters

How Many Realize?

I have been intending, for some time, to write to you to tell you how much I appreciate the stand you are taking on pollution, and other matters . . . such as the gradual lack of independence of Canada in relation to the United States. I appreciate also Page 5, and its information re international affairs, especially regarding the South American countries and their economic conditions, which may be our fate, too, unless we make a strong stand. I wonder how many people realize the strength of this gigantic monopoly backed by reactionary governments we are up against, and how helpless thinking people feel. — "Worried."

Heart-rending

It is heart rending to contemplate the plight of some of our senior citizens who have recently received a raise of one cent an hour, or $1.58 a month.

Contrast this with the ruthless demands of the monopolistic construction labor unions, already receiving twice the amount of the increase in the cost of living, and twice the wages of the average Joe, and now demanding over 100 times the increase recently given to old age pensioners.

And this in the face of widespread unemployment in their ranks.

It doesn't make sense.—M. P. Paine, 2620 Quadra.

MR. SNIFKIN'S BLINDING LIGHT

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

The Golden Economy of the Built-in Obsolescence

ALL the current statistics pouring out of Ottawa are based on an amazing historical error, which I am now able to reveal for the first time. The superb economic system of Canada did not begin with Pierre Trudeau, in 1969, as is supposed. It began with Horace Snifkin on the night of Aug. 12, 1951.

Hutchison

At precisely 10 p.m., Pacific Daylight Time, Mr. Snifkin was strolling through Victoria's Beacon Hill Park when he noticed the fairy-like illumination of the British Columbia legislative buildings. He had often seen this myriad of electric light bulbs but now he suddenly remembered that they had been burning, every night, since their installation 37 years ago—the same bulbs, unchanged and indestructible.

Snifkin's Economics

At this dizzy moment Mr. Snifkin conceived what later were called the New Economics and unfairly attributed to more famous economists. He saw, in short, that if light bulbs burned forever, or even for a few years, and if other products were built to last, the existing economic system was doomed to decay and Canadians to poverty.

If, on the contrary, all manufactured goods deteriorated rapidly or were soon judged obsolete while they still worked satisfactorily, then the production of new ones would provide full employment for everybody. Thomas Edison, as Mr. Snifkin says, may have been a genius when he invented the everlasting bulb but he was no economist. He did not grasp the obvious fact that wealth must be perpetually destroyed to ensure perpetual affluence.

On receiving his grand inspiration, Mr. Snifkin incorporated the public relations firm of Snifkin, Wheadle and Smurk, whose contributions to our Just Society have been strangely overlooked by historians and statesmen, including Mr. Trudeau. Here I can only summarize in brief these momentous and little-known achievements.

For example, the washing machine, the vacuum cleaner, and many more household gadgets guaranteed to be out of date within five years at most, were the invention of Mr. Snifkin's partner, Lucius Wheadle.

To Gustav Smurk, the third partner, Mr. Snifkin gives full credit for the annual restyling of automobiles which built the largest industry in the world. If, says Mr. Smurk with his usual modesty, a modern car lasted as long as Henry Ford's original Model T, General Motors and the other giants would have been bankrupt long before now.

But it took a lot of quiet public education behind the scenes and in the board rooms of Detroit to persuade the consumer that he must have a new and better car every year or two if he were to preserve his own social status and the affluence of North America.

This task accomplished, Mr. Snifkin saved the entire textile industry from collapse by inventing the automatic, scheduled run in ladies' stockings. Still more inspired was his recent rescue of the industry from the mini-skirt menace which had drastically reduced the use of cloth and threatened to throw half the needle trades out of work. That disaster was forestalled by a discovery quite simple in appearance, like all great discoveries, but profound in its economic consequences. Mr. Snifkin devised the maxi-coat and the continental economy resumed its momentum overnight.

A diffident man, Mr. Snifkin makes light of his assistance in the linoleum industry. At his suggestion it changed its color frequently, discarded the earlier designs and compelled the householder to re-cover the whole kitchen floor instead of repairing a single blemish. Yet this sensible arrangement, and the constant change in plumbing fixtures, lamps and furniture, and even ladies' spectacles, are all part of the North American success story.

Mr. Snifkin asks no publicity, medals or honorary degrees. He is content with his reasonable commissions and satisfied to continue his anonymous work of benefiting mankind. Now that the secret can be told, it was he who lately organized the Canadian banks' chargex system of unlimited credit and by that brilliant device stimulated consumption of all sorts and prevented the blundering, austere government from killing the economy. In gratitude Mr. Trudeau offered Mr. Snifkin a senatorship but he declined it, feeling unworthy of such crushing responsibilities.

Sheer Patriotism

It was in the post office department, however, that Mr. Snifkin achieved his greatest triumph of sheer patriotism. When Eric Kierans came to him, in tears, under an overwhelming load of deficits, Mr. Snifkin created the new postage stamp of flimsy material made cheaply from last year's credit cards and useless white papers. As planned, it always tears in your fingers as you apply it, thus forcing the user to buy extra ones and swell the public revenues.

Later, Mr. Snifkin observed a second serious defect in the old stamps. Their clinging glue made them grossly uneconomic because they stuck every time. After long chemical experiments, he produced his masterpiece of cheap native Canadian ingredients—a stamp that seldom sticks with its non-adhesive mixture of hemlock resin, the sap of wild rhetoric and the gummy dregs of Hansard. So many stamps are now wasted that Mr. Kierans' financial problem is solved.

Think of that, and remember all your other vast debts to Snifkin, Wheadle and Smurk when you post your next letter or buy a new car.

Those Tow-Aways

I have every sympathy with Rusty Rossiter whose car was towed away late at night, leaving her stranded.

I think some alternative and more civilized plan should be adopted when folks park illegally — and often unwittingly — as I did. One does not know the tow-away centre nor to whom one can apply.

A desperate situation could result when a driver lives miles out of town and may have to return promptly, perhaps to sick relatives or young children — "Concerned."

High Price for a Democrat 'Bug Out' in Vietnam

THE politics of the Vietnam war took an important turn this past week, affecting — perhaps profoundly — the diplomatic and military context in which the war will henceforth be fought. What happened was that the official opposition to President Nixon — the Democratic Policy Council — chose to outflank him on the side of the doves. It voted to recommend unconditional withdrawal of all American military forces from Vietnam on a fixed timetable, preferably within 18 months.

Frye

This is not the same thing as a call for withdrawal on the Senate floor, or a hearing in the Foreign Relations Committee. It is a formal judgment by the voice of "his majesty's loyal opposition," the "shadow government" which would take power in the event of an overturn at the polls.

Foreigners — especially foreign Communists — will not discount this statement for its political content as heavily as Americans. They will take it seriously, and may act accordingly.

'Bug Out'

What the Democrats are saying, when followed to its logical conclusion, is startling. It is that they wish to wash their hands of the war, regardless of the consequences — regardless of whether they deliver Saigon to the Communists, and regardless of the damage to American interests elsewhere in the world. They wish to bug out.

A substantial minority of the drafting group reportedly favored saying so frankly. They proposed that the Policy Council advocate withdrawal "immediately," as soon as logistically possible. This proposal is said to have been beaten by only 18-14.

But irrevocable withdrawal on a fixed timetable, in about 18 months, is not very different. It gives first priority to American disengagement, and second to effective prosecution of the war. If the latter were not possible consistently with the former, it would have to give way.

The unstated, but clearly implied, premise behind this stance is that Vietnam is the wrong war, in the wrong place, on behalf of the wrong client, and that the immediate compelling necessity is to end American participation in it.

This assumption could be right, but before it is accepted, its meaning should be clear. It means virtually certain collapse in Saigon and a Communist or Communist-dominated government there.

It means that everything the United States has worked and bled for in Vietnam would be tossed out the window.

This could also be the eventual result of Vietnamization — the code name for a continuing war, fought largely by proxy, with the participation of volunteer American support forces, notably airmen. But the chances of a satisfactory outcome from Vietnamization would be vastly greater than from withdrawal by the calendar.

It would seem hardly logical, when faced with a lesser-of-evils choice, to embrace disaster on the theory that one might as well get it over with quickly. That might be a good way to compete with Nixon for the peace vote in 1972, but it is not a service to the national interest. To urge that the United States embrace disaster in Vietnam is to make that disaster more likely to occur.

If there is a chance that a new American government in 1974 — or a new legislature in 1972— will throw in the sponge, the Russians will exert no pressure on Hanoi to settle, the Reds in Paris will sit tighter than ever, and the allies will lose interest in supporting the fight.

The only constructive effect such political manoeuvring could have would be on President Thieu of South Vietnam. It could increase his receptivity to the kind of peace settlement that might be negotiated now: a cease-fire and a coalition government.

This is the kind of settlement that W. Averell Harriman, the former American negotiator in Paris, passionately advocates, and Harriman was chairman of the foreign policy committee which drafted the Democratic plank. He has long advocated stronger pressure on Thieu in this direction.

The difficulty with trying to twist Thieu's arm is that talking coalition with the Communists would mean almost certain political death for him — either immediately, as the result of a right-wing military coup, or eventually, when the composition of the coalition cabinet was agreed upon. The Reds would never include him.

Few men will willingly negotiate their own political demise. Thieu would prefer to accept an American withdrawal and fight on alone as long as he could.

A Weak Reed

The only hope of successfully negotiating a coalition-type compromise would come when, and if, Saigon were sufficiently strengthened, politically and militarily to go into a negotiation with confidence. This is the objective of Vietnamization, and although it may be a weak reed to lean on, it is all there really is.

Threatening to walk out of the war might maximize Saigon's self-help efforts, but it is indefensible on any other ground. It is the elevation of selfishness and narrow nationalism to the level of government policy, a fault for which the Democrats, in power, rightly criticized Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

If one stops to think, it is ridiculous to set aside a piece of natural land as a park then turn around and build roads, parking lots, etc., within the area.

Such self-defeating development applies to our large wilderness parks as well as to those close in. If we permit logging and mining operations to take place within the large area of land, they too will destroy the environment and the association of living things there. The wilderness park concept will perish.

Not only must we maintain the natural environment of our parks but we must be sure that there is no contamination of our streams, rivers and lakes within park areas.

We must take care that water sources outside of the parks are not contaminated in such a way that they could cause pollution within the park, for that would surely destroy the ecology.

It is often said that a stand of timber is "over mature" and should be logged. Then how do we account for the wonderful process of nature that has been going on for thousands of years, breaking down and rebuilding in orderly fashion if we leave it alone.

More and more people are going out to parks for recreation and enjoyment with the arrival of warmer days. There is an urge to find the open spaces.

Parks, whether they are municipal or provincial, are being used increasingly. The population grows and man has more leisure time. With it comes the desire to get away from the urban areas.

Can our parks as they are in their present state stand the wear and tear of the future? We find that in a large number of places the parks are being whittled away by so-called "progress," by putting in blacktop roads and parking lots and, in some instances, concessions.

In the process we are destroying the very thing we set aside for recreation and enjoyment.

Not only are we destroying the open spaces but we destroy the environment in which plants and animals live. In this destruction the native things will slowly disappear and the association of one with another will no longer exist.

If we cut down a forest it takes thousands of years to rebuild, and it can never be built in the same form as the original. Surely in this vast land of ours we can set aside and leave as is the wonderful heritage that was left us. If parks are for people, then let people make sure that parks are left in their natural state for the people who will come after us.

QUEBEC P.M. PICKS TRUDEAU AS FOE

Bertrand Heads for Middle as Campaign Begins

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — Quebec prime minister Jean-Jacques Bertrand is coming to the fderal-provincial summit conference on Monday to confront the man he frankly identifies as a principal opponent in his provincial election — Pierre Trudeau.

His election strategy, as he explained it in a recent interview, is to hold the middle ground between separatist Rene Levesque and Trudeau, whom he brands a centralizer.

•

Bertrand brushes off the new Quebec Liberal leader, Robert Bourassa, as merely the voice of his master, Trudeau. He dismisses the Creditistes as an over-rated and declining force in provincial affairs.

For his Union National party, he proclaims: "We are considered very strongly nationalist. I think we are and I think we must be."

BOURASSA

As he developed his views during the interview, it became clear that Bertrand will be defining this nationalism in terms of campaign issues at the summit conference on inflation, pollution and other issues.

While the federal government is mainly interested in obtaining provincial co-operation to battle inflation and pollution, Bertrand is demanding more money and less interference from Ottawa.

He has already said, in so many words, that the election campaign is under way, and most observers expect the vote in May or June. Now that he has pin-pointed Trudeau as a chosen opponent, the summit conference is almost bound to become an extension of the Quebec hustings.

This is not to forecast that Bertrand will deliberately provoke a crisis or a violent collision with the federal prime minister. That would not be his style.

He does not emulate the de Gaulle type grandeur of Jean Lesage or the Machiavellian methods of Daniel Johnson, his two predecessors as leaders of the Quiet Revolution.

•

It is easier to think of Bertrand as the mayor of some small city, a local booster, than as a prime minister and leader of the French-Canadian nation. This, indeed, is the main complaint made about him by his political colleagues and supporters; that he is a man of sincerity and goodwill who does not understand or live up to the majesty of his office.

But these friendly critics may underestimate Bertrand. If he is not a great man leading his people according to an inner vision of Quebec's future, he is at least a shrewd politician seeking to make sense out of the confused provincial politics.

LEVESQUE

He knows that, in Quebec as elsewhere, the politician who wins the election is usually the one who can command most of the middle ground and relegate his opponents to the extremes.

Bertrand has no great problem in pinning the label of extremism to the Parti Quebecois. While Rene Levesque and most of his supporters are not wild men, their policy of separatism is an extreme answer to French Canada's problems.

Bertrand's real difficulty is in making the Quebec Liberals appear to be dangerously unreasonable, when Bourassa's appeal is that of a clean-cut, clear-thinking, nononsense young man eager to dispense with political theology and get to the roots of Quebec's problems.

The PM's solution to this political problem is to identify Bourassa with Trudeau and then to attack the federal leader as a rigid centralizer, unwilling to negotiate on Quebec's just claims and contemptuous of French Canada's traditional attitudes.

"I mentioned one day — I made the statement which Mr. Trudeau does not like very much — that if the federal government goes on producing what we call these centralizing policies, he will be building Levesque more and more in this province," says Bertrand.

•

"The idea of Mr. Trudeau is that for efficiency we need a strong federal government; a central government so strong that the provincial governments become some type of branch governments. This will never be accepted in this province. History has shown it has never been accepted. There is a continuity there you must accept.

"We are going to settle some of the problems this year, no doubt. It will be — and I think I'm right when I say that — somewhat like a referendum . . . in an election sometimes, it looks like a referendum when you have clear cut positions, or options, to offer the public.

"We will have Levesque and we will have, I say, Trudeau, because Bourassa is Trudeau. You will have both extremes.

"And in between, you will have the Union Nationale standing for a more decentralized form of federalism."

Bertrand attacks Trudeau's government as Big Father Government, treating the provinces as children unable to manage their own affairs.

•

His opportunity to make the case against Trudeau-Bourassa will occur at the summit meeting on Monday and Tuesday.

The secret report of the federal provincial tax structure committee to be presented to the conference shows provincial expenditures rising faster than federal spending, with Ottawa's revenues climbing faster than provincial revenues.

Bertrand says the number one national problem right now is to find the money for growing provincial needs. To begin with, he wants the $200 million Quebec taxpayers have sent to Ottawa as social security tax without receiving medicare.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson has already disputed the Quebec claim, but Bertrand says: "It all depends on your conception of federalism," an argument he plans to renew with Trudeau.

Quebec's next priority is economic development, and Bertrand complains that the federal government is not co-operating well with the province. He would like to take over manpower training programs to merge them with education and social security.

BERTRAND

"There are too many authorities, too much government," says Bertrand. "We think it is all a provincial jurisdiction."

Under Ottawa's Water Act to fight pollution, federal-provincial agencies would be set up to combine the authority of both levels of government. But Bertrand says: "It is a question of money, not of creating new authorities."

He rubs his finger against his thumb in the international sign language meaning cash, and says of the federal legislation: "We thought there would be a fund established. But there is none. There is no money. Will it come? We will find out at the federal-provincial conference. We are ready to act, but it is a question of money."

Federal-provincial co-operation to fight inflation is a major item on next week's agenda, and Bertrand says he is ready to go along with Ottawa as far as he can. But: "Inflation is not a problem in Quebec."

It is already a year of austerity in the province, says Bertrand, and the coming budget will show drastic cuts. The Quebec government, in fact, has already complained that the federal squeeze is hurting rather than helping the province.

•

The speculation in Quebec City is that the government will be forced to raise taxes in the pre-election budget, and wants to put the blame on Ottawa as far as it can.

Bertrand is one of the people who pushed hard for the current review of the constitution, and he still argues that it is a useful exercise even if no visible progress has been made. But a new tone is creeping into his voice when he says: "I can understand the impatience of the young. I understand . . ."

As he said at the end of the interview, on the eve of the summit conference and of the Quebec election: "The year will be very interesting."

Military Sales Pitch Can't Hide the Rot

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN

The other night, in the second instalment of his new mission impossible television series, actor-statesman LBJ was heard and seen to cry out against those who deserted him when he went to war.

It would have been different, and so much better, he wailed, if the country had only rallied behind him, if we'd grown vegetables in victory gardens and boy scouts had gone door to door peddling savings bonds.

That was not to be, because either he or his highest subordinates had lied, misrepresented and contradicted themselves so often and so seriously that only the unthinkingly obedient could believe Vietnam to be a high patriotic endeavor.

Playing Dominoes

This would not be so important save that the war goes on and men must give their lives and Americans their money for "Vietnamization" where once they were asked to do so because radar blips suggested U.S. destroyers might have been attacked in the Tonkin Gulf, where later it was because the secretary of state was playing dominoes, and later yet it was treaty commitments and after that it was to repel aggression and then it was for free elections and so on.

It is one thing to be young and to give your life for your country and another to die for such an ugly and undefinable word as "Vietnamization." It has too many letters in it to be accommodated on the modest headstones of our soldiers' graves.

The incongruity of dying for such a twerpish semantic notion as Vietnamization underscores the difficulty of pursuing a foreign policy, even a wise one, that has no support at home.

From 1940 until LBJ fell on his face in the Big Muddy an American president could do anything abroad and count on a pliant, if not always enthusiastic, nation to back him up. That's over as this administration too will find out now that it has made it clear that it is willing to go on fighting for years and years.

One of the places where the disgust and languor causes the most trouble is the armed forces. The army shouldn't be blamed for the war, but they are.

They know it and they, poor things, are trying to adjust their sales pitch. The new radio advertisements for the National Guard imply if you join up you'll never see a rifle but will spend most of the time rescuing people from floods, feeding cattle marooned in snow storms, comforting orphans and fighting juvenile delinquency.

The Air Force ads invite you to sign up for a life of scientific research work, while the army seems to be saying, "we're not asking you to enlist to fight, but to matriculate, to learn, and get a pension at the same time."

The unpopularity of what the armed forces are being asked to do is so great that Washington chitchat has it that many upper level officers find it uncomfortable to wear their uniforms on the street and to social occasions where they risk meeting strangers with hostile opinions. Lower down, men doubt themselves and the rightness of what they're doing.

Not all the doubters are tilted toward the left. Triumph, a very conservative Roman Catholic monthly, has a long and sympathetic story in this month's issue about an air force officer resigning his post as a Minuteman II crew commander.

As a serious working Roman Catholic, Maj. Robert C. Margetts decided he could not conscientiously execute the government's emergency war order, the instructions under which the air force is supposed to kill the civilian population of Russia in the event of war.

Citing his church's teaching that such acts are "a crime against God and man himself," the major offered to fight in Vietnam.

'Not Reliable'

"I could have kept my moral reservations to myself and spent two more years on a missile crew and could have depended on a normal career progression and a nice retirement. But then I felt it was my duty, my honor, to reveal this to my superiors," he wrote, but the top brass seemed to think he was no longer reliable, and, instead of taking him up on his offer to go off to war, honorably discharged him.

At the other end of the continuum of doubt, scruples and disinterest in U.S. military doings are the 27 men at the Presidio military stockade who were court-martialed for mutiny.

Fred Gardner has written a first-rate study of this case "The Unlawful Concert."

LYNDON JOHNSON
. . . Mission Impossible

Gardner writes, "there were 53,357 desertion cases in the armed services in fiscal 1968 and 155,536 AWOLS — the equivalent of fifteen combat divisions and more than five times the number of men volunteering for Vietnam duty. In the army alone, someone was leaving every three minutes."

In addition to these men there are an estimated 10,000 others in Canada and elsewhere escaping the draft, and unknown, probably very large numbers, who, true to their middle class training, trot along into the army, but, true to their own lack of conviction, pull their time doing as little as possible.

Another indication is the tone of the complaints about conditions within the army.

None of the gripes are new. What is new is the general indisposition to overlook them, to discount them as the price Americans have to be willing to pay to win a war, to blind themselves to them because their eyes and attentions are fixed on a higher cause.

But Vietnamization isn't a cause, it's a chronic affliction, one that makes men look around to see what's wrong and fashion grudges, or try to figure out how to beat the system.

And not all regard the man who does beat the system as shameful, or call him a slacker or a coward or a malingerer. He may be looked on as a lucky one.

The Jan. 31 issue of the New Republic has an article called "The Man Who Beat the Army," which tells how a soldier squeaked out of being sent to the front almost at gunpoint.

It also points out he was older and had more than average savvy and $6,000 to spend on lawyers' fees. It quotes him as saying, "If I'd been a green kid, broke, just out of high school and basic training, I'd still be in jail."

Insane Asylum

Thousands are. Kidding them that the armed forces are humanitarian enterprises or are really schools where the students are disguised as soldiers isn't going to shake their lassitude.

Nor is the U.S. going to get much more from an army that gets its men by giving them a choice of enlisting or involuntary commitment to an insane asylum, as happened in one case that Gardner cities.

Neither pep talks nor presidential press conferences plugging Vietnamization will change any of this. America's fanny is dragging.

Why Waste Time in School?

By ART STOTT

A friend who follows educational developments closely thinks Victoria may be on the brink of a break-through on the school finance problem.

"As I read the papers," he explained, "pupils of the future may be learning out in the community, away from the classroom. They'll return to their schools occasionally when they feel the need, as they might go to a library for particular information. 'S marvelous. We shouldn't have to build any more schools, and since libraries are talking about using those we already have as branches, we get double value from previous construction.

Stott

"All we'll need are marshalling yards and bus depots, where youngsters can be assembled for transport on field trips repeated daily from one end of term to the other. The drivers will be the chief disciplinary officers and people in the plants the pupils visit will provide the instruction. You know yourself how effective the field trips are. You've seen classes pass through your place in an hour or two and come out with a complete, first-hand knowledge of how to produce a newspaper. They'd never get that in school. Nothing like experience as a means of conveying knowledge and wisdom. What kid knows how hot a stove can be if he hasn't put his hand on its glowing top?"

★ ★ ★

My friend doesn't expect this transformation to occur without some opposition.

"You'll always have some fuddiduddies opposed to change," he admits. "These are people who can't adjust and so they criticize.

"They see knowledge as the accumulation of past experience and thought transmitted from one generation to another. They think it's important to teach children certain basic skills — how to read, how to figure, how to write. They just can't reconcile themselves to the world of today. With computers, who needs arithmetic? With television, who needs reading and writing? You're going to say somebody has to know maths in order to work the computers, that somebody may have to know how to read and write to produce television. The latter's a pretty doubtful argument, but suppose such people are required, why you simply hire them—and they'll be available from lots of backward places still operating on fairly traditional educational lines.

"The whole new process," my friend said, "will make life much pleasanter and meaningful. We won't have any stodgy insistence on such things as grammar. Then folk-singers will be able to compose stanzas like 'Who is the one to say it was wrong what we done' and nobody'll wince. You know, where there is no sense and all that stuff.

"And think what it will do for the teachers. From September to December they can concentrate more fully on campaigning for a more professional income than they had the year before, and develop their union collective bargaining techniques. Then, with no lessons to prepare, they can devote all their time from January to June to insisting on better learning conditions, for which pay increases in the preceding term have already used up the available taxpayers' money.

My friend fell briefly into silent thought. "Maybe," he said "you'd better ignore that part about teachers. I guess there won't be any as we know them today. As the schools fall into progressive disuse, from the program of education outside the classroom, they'll become what some people call redundant.

"Anyhow, it's immaterial. Education in future must equip people for the greater leisure. That's the ticket. You have to find out what to do when you have nothing to do—or at least when you haven't any worries about production. The machine will look after that.

"Don't think the teachers haven't thought of it. They're advanced. At a cocktail party last Christmas one was telling me he believed the current psychology of education was to equip youngsters to do nothing.

"You'll have to admit," he continued, "that your own education is a long way out of date. Get back to maths; how long were you out of high school before you forgot how to prove the theorem of Phythagoras, and what good did it do you when you knew how? And Latin, what did it give you? Millions of Canadians go through life unconscious that there ever was such a subject—or, for that matter, that there were subjects called English and French, whose former granitic strength has been ground down to formless sand.

"Nope. We're in a new world and learning in the community is the thing. Get the kids out to find how and where a pulp mill discharges its effluent, what municipalities don't do about their sewage. And teach the kids to holler. If they holler loud enough somebody will come along to fix things up. That's the kind of thing you hire people to do.

"Yessir," said my friend, smiling as we parted. "I like this idea of moving out of schools. It's good for my taxes. And it would cure the drop-out problem, too. You can't drop out when nobody's in."

BENNETT 'ROUSER' ENDS WEEK'S SITTINGS

Sewage Treatment Amendment Gets Unanimous Vote

BENNETT
. . . hits opposition

Premier W. A. C. Bennett capped a long week of legislative sittings with his first "rouser" of the session.

Arm-waving, shouting, finger-pointing and generally enjoying himself, Bennett attacked both the New Democrats and the Liberals in winding up debate on the second reading of a bill to amend the Municipal Treatment Plant Assistance Act, late Friday afternoon.

UNANIMOUS

The House unanimously supported the bill, which reduces the minimum loan period from 25 years to 20 years under the act, but both NDP and Liberal MLAs said the measure fell far short of what is needed.

Under the act, the provincial government pays 75 per cent of sewage treatment plant capital costs over a basic two-mill annual levy on the municipality.

MORE AID

Bennett said the amendment was granted on request of municipalities. It would help in obtaining financing for sewers but several speakers said it still won't help the larger municipalities because the two-mill levy will cover all the costs of sewage treatment plant facilities.

Bennett said the federal government, which takes the largest share of tax in the province, should be giving more help to the municipalities and he defended B.C.'s aid to municipalities as the highest in Canada.

He attacked the Liberal Party — "The people threw you out" — and the NDP — "A bunch of children. You'll never grow up. The people don't trust you" — as the speaker rapped his gavel to bring the debate back to the subject.

Bennett drew howls of glee from the opposition at one point he found himself saying, "I'm the number one representative of the people who have the money" but fought back by saying:

"Big business is only successful small business."

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer had attacked the government as the "prime taxing power" in the province but unwilling to help municipalities fight sewage pollution.

He said B.C. would remain "an unclean province" as long as the government maintained the same policy.

Appeals were heard for the act to be changed to give a specific definition of a treatment plant rather than leaving it to the discretion of the finance minister.

McGeer called for outright provincial grants to help pay the costs of treatment plants, ranging from 50 per cent of primary treatment, 75 per cent of secondary treatment and 90 per cent of tertiary plants.

RESEARCH

Robert Strachan (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) said he was distressed at the decision of two major Vancouver Island communities to proceed with dumping of raw sewage into the sea.

Dr. Scott Wallace (SC—Oak Bay) said the MLAs should be aware that much more research is needed before it is known whether the huge costs of treatment plants are required for effluent at sea outfalls. He urged the government to set up a research department to provide the badly-needed data.

FISH DIE

William Hartley (NDP—Yale Lillooet) said the MLAs could get an idea of the seriousness of sewage dumping problems by walking a few blocks to Victoria's fishermen's wharf "where you can not only see but smell the effluent all over the west end of town."

He said he understood that the Undersea Gardens in the Inner Harbor have had several fish die because of pollution in the harbor water.

John Tisdalle (SC—Saanich and the Islands) said the defeat of a sewage referendum in Central Saanich last December illustrated the need for reduction of the majority needed to pass such bylaws. It should be a simple majority instead of 60 per cent, he said.

B.C. Prison Populations Take Drop in 1968-69

During the fiscal year 1968-69 there was a drop in admissions to B.C. prisons of 4,500 from the previous year, according to the annual repot of the Director of Corrections.

The decrease represents about one-third of the admissions during the previous year, director S. R. Smith said.

POLICY CHANGE

He attributed the decrease to the new policy of not laying charges of public drunkeness, and to wider use of adult probation. However, he said there was a need for probationary staff in the province.

The decrease represents about one-third of the admissions during the previous year, director S. R. Smith said.

Despite the marked drop for the second year in a row, Smith reported that there was no drop in the number of the 18 to 23 age group. He said this group has "taxed institutional accommodation to capacity" and if there were not 150 released on probation another institution would have had to be provided for them.

"There is no doubt a large number of young adults could be dealt with effectively on probation with obvious savings to the taxpayer if sufficient trained staff were available to supervise them," Smith said.

STAFF INADEQUATE

But the present probation staff has not been able to cope with the referrals from courts, he added, pointing out that the case load from 1965 to 1969 has doubled.

Smith said the department must attract and train more staff, and must offer salaries and conditions comparable to other agencies.

It is men, not buildings and equipment that are required to change attitudes and behaviour, the director said.

Smith also said there was a decrease in female admissions to jails by about 50 per cent, but the percentage of women under 23 went from 26 to 41 per cent. The percentage of Indian women in the total admissions decreased from 40 to 20 per cent.

VANCOUVER (CP)—Dan Mills of Vancouver Thursday started a British Columbia Supreme Court action to take over the suburban city of Port Moody.

He filed his own writ seeking "the total assets of the city of Port Moody, including land, money, equipment and all things belonging to the city which are liquidable."

Den Boer has published one book of poems, "Learning the Way," and his poems have appeared in several small literary reviews. He is currently employed by the department of health, education and welfare, White House conference on children and youth.

His reading Wednesday will be at 12:30 p.m. in Room 168 of the Elliot Building.

Retired Bosses Going to Work

Work of the newly-organized Retired Executives Bureau has started in Victoria, but there are still more projects than volunteer experts to carry them out.

REB organizer Norman E. Horton, 385-8554, is compiling a list of higher echelon administrators who live in the area and who wish to contribute their expertise to work in the public interest during their retirement years.

FOUR PROJECTS

Four projects involving feasibility studies, economic survey and advisory service are awaiting qualified men to carry them out.

Horton said one of three jobs under way is being handled by a former senior officer of one of the nation's largest companies. The executive is trying to line up a job-search program that will involve the hard core of unemployed.

Another undertaking is helping a semi-public organization which at present is not getting the type of financial reports it requires. An accounting executive is doing this work.

A third project is being done for a retail-manufacturing firm in the electronics field which requires expert guidance to develop its plant and distribution facilities.

Horton said all projects and the volunteer members of the bureau are kept confidential to permit freedom of operation and to guard against leaks to competitors.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce is sponsor of REB, which is based on the assumption that expert knowledge, advice and ability which may be of help to rising businesses can result in benefits to the public.

Peterson Blocks Labor's Bid For Compensation Act Change

Representatives from the 140,000 B.C. Federation of Labor met with Labor Minister Leslie Peterson Friday morning, but came away unhappy at the reception they received.

The delegation, headed by John Hachey, chairman of the compensation and safety committee, presented a brief to the minister and talked with him for about a half hour.

Hachey said the delegation asked that their suggested amendments to the Workmen's Compensation Act be placed before the legislative standing committee on labor, but Peterson would not agree.

The delegation took exception to this, said Hachey. "It is a farce to appoint a committee and give them nothing to do."

Hachey said the federation felt the elected representatives should deal with their proposals.

The federation statement calls for the amendment of the act to permit free choice of specialist by the injured workman, that the time limit for appeals after the making of a medical decision should be extended, and that jurisdiction of the Medical Review Panel should be determined by the board and not a hired lawyer.

AMENDMENT URGED

The brief recommends that the act be amended to place the onus on the employer to prove that a claimant's injury did not occur on the job.

The federation suggested that joint health, safety and pollution board could be set up to include representatives of labor, management, the B.C. Medical Association, government and the general public to work with local and regional committees to educate workers.

They also urged that employers be made responsible for providing facilities to prevent serious consequences from dangerous chemicals.

BURNHAM'S BATTLE GOING TO COURT

Red Ensign battler George Burnham of Victoria served a writ of summons Friday at the Vancouver office of the federal justice department against the attorney-general of Canada.

The writ commands the federal attorney-general — Justice Minister John Turner — to have an appearance made on his behalf in connection with Burnham's suit to return the Red Ensign as Canada's flag in place of the Maple Leaf.

Deadline for the appearance is this Friday at B.C. Supreme Court in Victoria.

Burnham said he has applied for an injunction in his long fight for the Red Ensign and the writ was served in connection with this.

He claims the proclamation of the new Maple Leaf flag contains three errors.

He also said the date for trial will be set next week.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Welfare Fraud Brings Probation

A 43-year-old man who defrauded the city welfare department of $693 over a one-year period was given a suspended sentence in court Friday and placed on probation for one year.

Rennie Scott, 1334 Pembroke, pleaded guilty Jan. 28 to obtaining the funds by false pretence.

Judge William Ostler said in passing sentence the accused had committed "a substantial fraud on the welfare department" and if everybody did this it would constitute "wholesale fraud."

Scott applied for welfare in July, 1969, and signed a form at the time saying that he had no other income.

He also applied for unemployment insurance and received monies from both agencies for a year during which time he got $693 more than what he was entitled to.

"I don't think anyone would be without sympathy but it is essential you be honest with the department, "Ostler told the accused, noting he had four children to support.

Ostler ordered Scott to repay the $693 when he was able to rather than forthwith because he was unemployed and "hopelessly in debt."

★ ★ ★

Ronald C. Mattson, 39, of no fixed address, was sentenced to six months in prison for attempted suicide and two counts of false pretences.

"You seem to feel you are rejected and, therefore, there is not much incentive for you," Ostler told the accused.

Mattson pleaded guilty to the suicide attempt when he appeared Feb. 2 and he pleaded guilty to the false pretence offences Friday.

He wrote two worthless cheques last November and cashed them at local hotels.

Ostler said he would recommend Mattson be sent to the Allouette River Unit for alcoholism treatment.

★ ★ ★

Howard L. Manning, 26, of 835 Craigflower, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a six-month probation for theft under $50.

He earlier pleaded guilty to taking $10 worth of lumber from a building site at Esquimalt High school about 1 a.m. Feb. 6.

Ostler noted, in passing sentence, the lumber taken had been used by the accused to make furniture for his family.

★ ★ ★

James M. McMillan, 18, of 431 Hillside, was given a suspended sentence with a one-year probation for breaking and entering and theft over $50.

He pleaded guilty Feb. 2 to breaking into Mayfair Motors Ltd., 736 Cloverdale, Feb. 1 with a companion and stealing the keys to a vehicle on the lot.

They took the vehicle and were involved in a minor accident when apprehended by police.

★ ★ ★

Edward J. Cooper, 17, of 2673 Foul Bay, was sentenced to six months definite and eight months indeterminate in prison for theft under $50.

He was observed taking a carton of cigarettes, valued at $3.89, from the Canada Safeway store, 1950 Foul Bay, Feb. 4 without paying for it.

Ostler noted that everything in the way of help had been done for the accused but he had failed to cooperate with anyone.

Cooper had been transferred from juvenile court.

★ ★ ★

Deryck G. Wilson, 19, of 4145 Hawkes, received a suspended sentence and was placed on a one-year probation, for theft under $50.

He put six quarts of oil, valued at $7.50, in his car at a service station and drove away without paying for them.

★ ★ ★

Norman F. Spencer, 47, of 43 Hibberson Crescent, was found guilty of impaired driving and was fined $400.

His driver's licence was suspended.

He was apprehended by police on Cedar Hill Road Jan. 15 about 4:55 p.m.

★ ★ ★

John H. McAllister, 37, of Canadian Forces base, Esquimalt, was fined $400 for impaired driving and prohibited from driving for four months

He was apprehended by polic after he had mounted the curb and knocked down a sign while turning at Colville and Admirals Jan. 31.

He also mounted the curb while turning at Admirals and Esquimalt.

U.S. Inflation Gets Added Fuel

NEW YORK (AP) — Even though the U.S. Federal Reserve Board continues to yank on the reins of inflation, evidence this past week indicates it's still galloping.

"Despite the current slowing of economic activity, there has been no apparent effect as yet on the rate of inflation," the Federal Reserve Bank of New York said in its February monthly review.

Signs of a cooling economy abound, with the nation's unemployment rate at its highest in nine years—3.9 per cent of the civilian labor force — and with industrial output, new orders for durable goods and housing starts continuing to fall.

At the same time, retail sales remained sluggish, hitting a seasonally adjusted $29,100,000,000 in January, about one per cent down from December, but up by the same amount over January, 1969.

But inflation remains stubborn, with wage increases continuing to outstrip productivity gains. In addition, provisions of 1969 labor contracts "suggest that wages will rise rapidly over the near term," the bank said.

Bonds End Downward Trend

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Canadian bond market closed the week with considable gains following a break in a downward trend that extended over several months.

Four out of five trading sessions this week closed with slightly higher prices while Thursday's closed virtually unchanged.

Dealers are gaining confidence that the market will continue its present trend, saying that investors are picking up interest in new issues and the market in general.

A Manitoba Hydro issue introduced on the market Wednesday was sold the same day and was trading Friday at $125 to $137.50.

The introduction, a 9-per-cent April 1, 1990, issue, was sold at $99.50 to yield 9.04 per cent. Day-to-day money closed at 7¼ per cent, down slightly on the week.

Three- and six-month treasury bills traded at 7.71 and 7.72, respectively compared with 7.80 and 7.81 per cent a week ago.

Airline Grows

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pacific Western Airlines announced Friday that it flew 706,000 passengers in 1969, more than three times as many as were flown in 1964. Scheduled route mileage expanded last year to some 11,000 miles.

Canadian stock markets advanced moderately this week, their second weekly gain of 1970, interrupting a three-week, their second weekly gain of 1970, interrupting a three-week slump.

Canadian markets again followed the whims of Wall Street.

Canadian markets followed New York moderately higher Monday when Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the United States federal reserve board, pledged to resist inflation.

However, after a closer look at Burns' statement, investors became discouraged and markets declined slightly.

It appeared for the most of the session Wednesday that stock prices would continue to fall.

MARKETS RALLY

But in the final hour of trading Wedn[illegible]dden rallies on Canadian and American exchanges sent prices climbing to some of their best daily gains this year.

The sharp upswing was apparently touched off by rumors on Wall Street that a major bank planned to reduce its prime interest rate, and that the U.S. federal reserve board might act to ease credit restraints in the U.S.

But major New York banks quickly denied a prime rate reduction was being considered, and once more investors pulled back, depressing markets Thursday.

Friday, Canadian markets, after four sessions of looking to New York for guidance, rose moderately while Wall Street declined.

Observers said that more market patterns similar to this week's can be expected in the near future unless there is a major break on the inflation wars in Canada and the U.S.

Since last June, Canadian and American markets have been under the shadow of government monetary controls and markets, reacting to money restraints, have been dull and depressed.

Any rumors of relaxation of this restraint have usually resulted in a quick market rally followed by just as fast a drop when the rumors were proved unfounded.

However, there appears to be hope lingering in Canadian and American investors as proven by this week's sudden one-hour rally Wednesday.

Apparently investors are just waiting in a crouch position for the shot that marks the beginning of the end of tight money. When that shot comes, most observers expect a rapid recovery from the present seven-month bear market.

Statistically, on index at the Toronto Stock Exchange this week, industrials were up 1.91 to 178.43 and golds .83 to 151.99. Western oils lost 5.48 to 199.21 and base metals 1.08 to 112.11.

Volume was 10,092,000 shares compared with 11,038,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 514 to 242 with 247 issues unchanged.

B.C. Trade Fair Attracts Interest

B.C.'s fifth international trade fair—coinciding with the 100th anniversary of joining Confederation—is more than a year away, but 14 foreign countries have indicated willingness to take part for the first time.

Fourteen other countries had exhibits at the last BCITF held in 1967, and may be expected to have space again next year.

"Several of the new countries have reserved space and the Canadian representatives of others are awaiting a decision by their home governments," said fair executive director Ken Brown.

The countries are Bulgaria, Barbados, Denmark, India, Ireland, Israel, Mexico, Pakistan, Philippines, Portugal, South Africa, South Korea, Switzerland and Jugoslavia.

Former exhibitors were Austria, Belgium, Britain, Czechoslovakia, France, Italy, Japan, Netherlands, New Zealand, Russia, China, Sweden and West Germany, plus the states of Alaska and Hawaii.

BCITF is the largest regular exposition in North America and will open its gates at Pacific National Exhibition grounds next year for a 10-day run from June 2 under the title Impo-Expo 71.

Wall Street Proposes New Rates

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Stock Exchange Friday proposed new rates for stock brokerage commissions that would raise the cost for many transactions by small investors.

At the same time, many large transactions beginning at 300 shares and up would cost less under the proposed rate schedule.

The new schedule—the first thorough revision of commission rates in 12 years—was proposed to the United States Securities Exchange Commission Friday in Washington, after being developed by an independent economic consulting organization, National Economic Research Associates.

The research organization found that present rates on orders in the 100-share range—by far the most numerous of all securities transactions—often did not produce enough revenues to meet the basic costs of handling the orders.

As a result, a growing number of brokers were discouraging small investors' orders. Brokers were concentrating on the sale of mutual funds shares to individuals and on developing the larger, more profitable, institutional orders.

The rate increase would vary with each transaction, with the fee for most small odd-lot orders—those under 10 shares—remaining the present $6 minimum. However, most investment houses with few exceptions now are charging well above the minimum—averaging about $15—for small transactions. Brokers can charge more, but not less, than the minimum.

Under the proposed setup, the commission rate for 100 shares of a $40 stock would rise to $65.56 from $39, representing a 68-per-cent increase. On 1,000 shares of the same $40 stock, the rate would decrease 37½ per cent to $243.74 from $390.

Dodge Dart Prices Cut By Chrysler

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Chrysler Canada Ltd. has announced price reductions on all models of its Dodge Dart passenger cars.

The cuts range up to $212, but at the same time day-night mirrors and fibreglass-belted tires now will become optional rather than standard equipment on all models except the Swinger 340. Optional cost of the mirror is $7.65 and the tires $41.45.

The suggested-retail price from the factory of the Swinger 340, not including taxes and dealer-preparation charge, will be reduced $156.

Biggest reduction is $212 to $2,538 off the price of the Swinger eight-cylinder, two-door hardtop. The lowest-priced car is the six-cylinder, two-door hardtop, down $22 to $2,432.

Chrysler sold 19,362 Darts of all models during 1969.

YOUR TAXES

By I. H. ASPER

Expense Account Living Receives Sharp Scrutiny

Don't be in a rush to pick up that check for lunch. It may not be deductible.

Recently, revenue officials have been taking a closer look at what is affectionately called "expense account living." Under the Income Tax Act, businesses can deduct as expenses only those outlays which are reasonable, and necessary for earning income and are not of a capital nature.

In recent years the tax department has enforced these rules with a growing enthusiasm. As a result, car expenses, travelling costs, entertaining allowances and other fringe benefits are being closely scrutinized to make certain that they are legitimate business expenses. If not, they don't get the blessing of deductibility.

This is as it should be. But while the subject is under review, the whole area of business expense and deductibility should be brought up-to-date.

Normally one would expect that all bona fide expenditures made in business would be dedutible from income. Those expenses which are laid out for acquiring a capital asset, such as a building or a truck, are deductable over several years as capital cost allowance.

Unfortunately, tax law has not kept up with business practice and experience. Today we have many expenditures which business may make but are neither deductible nor depreciable.

ORPHANS OF SYSTEM

They are neither fish nor fowl. Tax people refer to them as the orphans of the tax system. They are the "nothings."

There are dozens of "nothings" — expenses which aren't deductible or depreciable. These constitute a tax trap for the unwary businessman.

The list of "nothings" seems to grow every year. The expense of a tenant fighting an eviction notice isn't deductible; nor is the cost of defending a business franchise.

You can't deduct the cost of buying a patent application, and in one case the taxpayer wasn't allowed to deduct the cost of paying a chemical engineer to teach his employees how to use a new process in the business.

The courts have ruled that where a manager stole money from the business the loss wasn't deductible. Similarly where a company advances money to employees or accommodates its customers by lending them money, any losses suffered won't be deductible.

Where a company paid someone to guarantee a needed bank loan for the business, the payment for the guarantee wasn't deductible.

The cost of raising money for a business isn't deductible, generally, and so bond discounts, mortgage bonuses and premiums paid on pre-paying debts are not allowed as expenses.

The cost of incorporating a business, the price paid for a customers' list, and money paid for goodwill also fall into the category of non-deductible "nothings."

The legal profession has its share of "nothings" — the cost of a lawyer being admitted to the Bar isn't deductible; and a judge who buys law books to enable him to better perform his duties can't deduct the cost of the books.

MUST BE CAREFUL

Businessmen are constantly surprised to find that expenditures like paying damages to get out of a contract, or for obtaining a non-competition agreement, aren't deductible.

Not surprisingly, political contributions and interest on overdue income taxes aren't tax allowable expenses. But it's difficult to understand a recent case which ruled that where a business bought land for future expansion and land wasn't presently used for the business, the municipal taxes paid on the land weren't allowed as a business expense.

If your banker insists on life insurance being taken out on a key employee as a condition of lending you money, you must be very careful about how you set up the policy, or the premium won't be deductible — unless you follow specific departmental rules.

FAMILY FIELD

In the family field, wives who pay housekeepers so they can work and earn taxable income, still can't deduct the cost of the housekeeper. Perhaps Dr. Kinsey would have been aided in his understanding studies of male behaviour, if he had known that when a man employs his mistress in his business, her wages are deductible. But if his wife works, her wages aren't.

These represent only a fraction of the non-deductible expenses one can make in business. The question of whether or not a business expense is deductible depends on how reasonable it is, and more important, on what it is spent.

For example, in one case, a few years ago, the cost of sponsoring a baseball team as a promotional expense wasn't allowed as advertising cost, because the amount of expense was considered unreasonable.

For several years the Canadian Bar Association and the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants have urged the government to bring the law closer to commercial reality. These anachronisms in the tax rules should be automatically removed as one of the first steps in tax reform.

Famous Players Set To Sell TV Holdings

TORONTO (CP) — Famous Players Canadian Ltd. is nearing an agreement on the sale of its multi-million-dollar Canadian cable television holdings, a company spokesman said Friday.

K. J. Easton, vice-president of Metro Cable TV Ltd. of Toronto, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Famous, made the statement at a public hearing of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

Metro was one of a number of firms applying for enlargement of present cable licences in Toronto or issuance of new licences.

Famous, a U.S. firm, must sell all but 20 per cent of its Canadian holdings, in line with federal government legislation, before Sept. 1.

The U.S. company now holds interests in 21 cable TV operations in Canada, but Metro is the only one it owns completely.

The federal government ruling, which places a 20 per cent maximum on the interest a U.S. concern can hold in a Canadian broadcasting company, was passed last year.

When Will the Arts Get Deserved Help?

Sounding Board

. . . By Audrey Johnson

What is a proper definition for the term, "practical minded?"

Why is it considered so desirable to "have one's feet on the ground," not to be "a dreamer," not to be "carried away by big ideas?"

The people who have trod the clouds, dreamed dreams and dedicated themselves to big ideas are among the chief benefactors of the human race.

In any generation there are only a few people of this type and we need them.

Without them there would have been no Edisons no Henry Fords, no Curies, no Wright brothers, no Nightingales, nor a host of lesser innovators and visionaries who have ameliorated and enhanced the life of man on earth.

Scorn, Sarcasm

No doubt in their time, all these people were subject to this type of labelling, uttered in tones of sarcasm, scorn or at the best, patronage.

And no doubt others like them are getting the same treatment today.

Not from the ignorant and stupid, but from the averagely intelligent educated man who proudly wears the badge of practicality, whose feet are on the ground, and who is said to have a non-nonsense sense of values — meaning mostly, dollars and cents.

The average "hard-headed businessman" who insists that every dollar spent must bring a cash return mistrusts the visionary and gives little consideration to the power of imagination and the need to surround child and youth with a creatively stimulating environment.

And yet — originality which is born of imagination and creativity is the most commercially viable product in today's highly competitive society.

To dream the impossible dream. That's what the Man of La Mancha is all about and why it is probably the single great musical of the century.

What are we doing about it — here in Victoria, for example?

I can tell you what the idea people are doing. And they're working against frightful financial odds and no doubt fretting themselves into an early grave to do it.

To keep music being made, to keep exposure to the visual arts as wide and open as possible.

To provide opportunity to explore a full range of theatre arts and crafts. To save the very young from the deadening influence of routine education.

And what are the solid, practical minded business people of Oak Bay, Saanich and Esquimalt contributing? Minimum cash and some lip service.

The financial contributions these municipalities make to any fine arts organization in Greater Victoria are, let's be frank, pitiful. Although their residents have open access to all facilities and enjoy them.

As for the City of Victoria, its financial treatment of one of the most prestigious art galleries in Canada is a scandal.

With one hand it makes a grant that is insignificant when compared with what almost any other city anywhere provides; and with the other it snatches back a lion's share in taxes leaving an amount that should make Victorians blush for shame.

The anomaly is that the city excuses the Maritime Museum from taxes — which is fine. But how can it justify making fish of one and fowl of the other?

Woolly Vision

Both institutions are valuable but I don't think anyone would deny that the Art Gallery has a broader range of enrichment and a greater impact on residents as well as more effect on the city's reputation abroad.

The woolly vision of the people with their feet on the ground was further demonstrated recently when major grants from the B.C. Cultural Aid Fund were announced.

By far the biggest lump went to an organization whose value is at least debatable, while the symphony in the year of its greatest development, and the art gallery on the verge of necessary expansion, received less than half the amount.

And what is going to be done about Victoria Fair among the four municipalities? There is a challenge to the acumen of our hard-headed types.

It's understandable that the small homeowner, fearful of a further fractional rise in the tax mill rate, and the taxpayer totally uninterested in any of the arts, should be opposed to subsidization of these amenities from the public purse.

Yet many of us who are not sports participants or fans would fully approve a portion of our tax dollar going to the establishment and maintenance of first class sport facilities such as for example, the new pool.

False Image

Personally, I would like to see the dollars called in that are being spent annually on promoting a false image of Victoria across the continent and on quick-buck tourist lures.

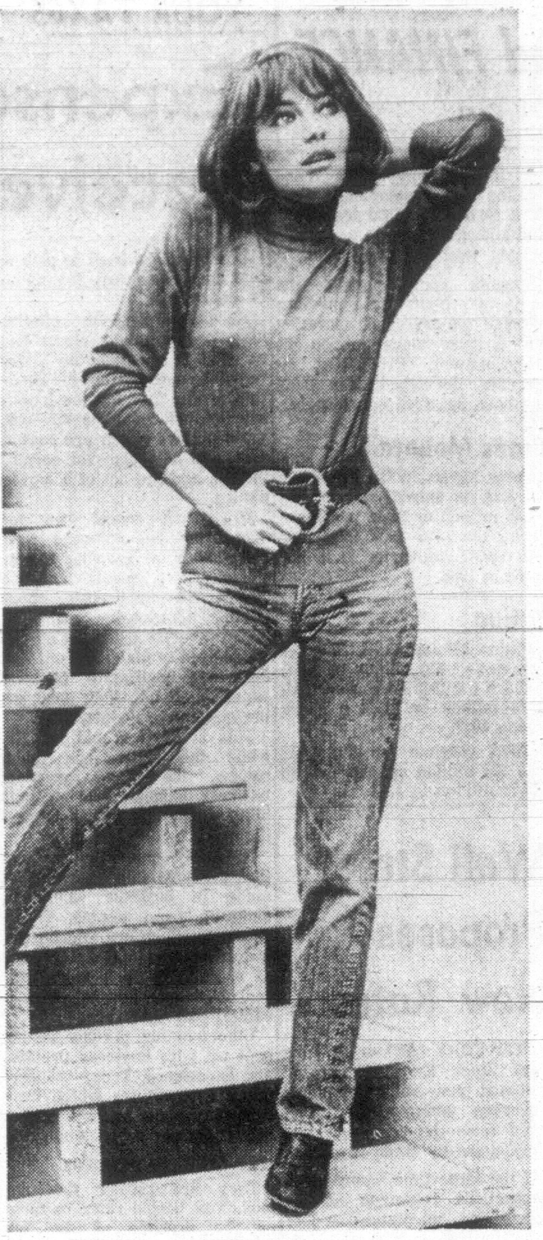
They could be spent far more profitably at home to send the city surging forward in the seventies to become celebrated as a rich environment in which to live and to raise children.

It's still true, that old saw about the better mousetrap.

And you'd better believe that we could build the mousetrap here to end all mousetraps if the people treading the clouds could get a little more co-operation from the ones with their feet on the ground.

It takes both kinds, working in partnership. That's the way they did it at Stratford and at Charlottetown and at Halifax. And even in Penticton.

Why not in Victoria?



TIME was when a girl had to appear in something skimpy and glamorous to catch photographer's eye but modern actresses like Jacqueline Bisset can turn heads with faded dungarees and a jersey pullover. She'll appear in stewardess' outfit in upcoming film of Arthur Hailey's best-selling novel "Airport."

Feedback from Public Sets Cultural Goals

HALIFAX — "The young people here don't care about a symphony hall. Music should be taken to the people. Symphony concerts are for the over-privileged anyway."

The manager of the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra had just made an eloquent plea for a brand-new concert hall when the 21-year-old blonde girl who teaches drama protested warmly with the statement about the over-privileged.

Proponents of a symphony hall and those opposed jumped into the act, and the discussion among the 35 people representing the arts here and in neighboring Dartmouth went on till midnight.

"What kind of cultural life should Halifax have? What about the people in the slums who never get a chance to paint or play music? Should jazz be revived?"

By Feb. 22, this group on the arts will have decided what they would like to see take place in the city's cultural life in the next 20 years.

Some 34 similar groups, whose interests span many aspects of city life—from municipal government, pollution control and the style of buildings, to education and minority problems—are doing the same.

SET FUTURE GOALS

The groups are preparing for "Encounter on Urban Environment," which will take place here Feb. 22-28 when 12 experts in all fields of urban development will meet them to set goals for the future development of the Halifax-Dartmouth area.

The cities of Halifax and Dartmouth, after a slow period, have taken a sudden growth spurt and are moving fast into a stage of rapid urban development.

"Tremendous developments in the next 20 years may change these cities more rapidly than anything that happened in the last 200 years," A. R. Harrington, Encounter project's chairman, said. For one thing, the population is expected to double and reach 500,000.

As Mr. Harrington and others see it, without proper planning the quality of life here could deteriorate as it has in many big and medium-sized cities on the North American continent.

The experts from Toronto, New York and London, England, will cover such fields as transportation; planning and financing economic development; tourism and accommodation; welfare and health-communications and citizen participation.

TRAVEL AS TEAM

The experts will travel together as a team each day to meet the 34 citizens' groups and find out what the people want for their city. Each evening they will present their findings in television sessions, and will sum up their results in a Saturday televised giant "happening."

Mr. Harrington said the Encounter project is the first of its kind in North America.

"It's an experiment in direct democracy, involving the mass participation of citizens in planning their community's future."

There will be no written briefs, and the groups will present their ideas verbally. The daily sessions and the team's summing up each night will be tape-recorded.

This taped record will provide an invaluable tool for planners, giving them an overall idea of what the people of the region want for the future, and expert advice on how to achieve it, Robert Geraghty, Encounter project manager, said.

Ottawa thinks the Encounter method of urban study could apply to other Canadian cities, Mr. Harrington said. The federal government is giving $25,000 to help finance Encounter and the province is contributing staff.

Actors Coming For Festival

Two successful Canadian actors who lead busy lives in the professional theatre will join the Victoria Fair 70 company, according to an announcement from University of Victoria Theatre Division this week.

They are Bernard Engel, who is head of the acting program at the University of Alberta at Edmonton, and Richard Davidson who has played several seasons at Stratford.

They will join a company that combines members of Uvic's theatre faculty, prominent city actors, one or two American professionals and some student apprentices.

●

The company will gather in Victoria early in June, under artistic head, Ralph Allen for rehearsals of the three plays that will be performed in repertory from July 16 through Sept. 5.

Engel, who recently completed a directing engagement at the National Theatre School, created the role of Nichols in the play J. B. when it was performed at the Brussells World Fair.

He has also played at the professional Citadel Theatre in Edmonton.

Davidson has been on the professional stage for 10 years, since graduation from the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art.

A principal player at the Canadian Stratford Festival and with the Stratford Canadian tour in 1967, he has also appeared among other places at the Manitoba Theatre Centre, Hart House in Toronto and in numerous CBC television plays.

●

Returning members of last year's company will be Richard Gallupi and James Berry from the United States.

Wandalie Henshaw and Patricia Leith of the theatre division, and Harriet Allen, Anthony Jenkins and Rod Symington, well known to Victoria audiences, are also to be with the company.

On Wednesday, from 7 to 10 p.m., in Room 168 of the Elliott Building on the university campus, auditions will be held for anyone interested in any phase of Victoria Fair, from acting and technical and back stage work to wardrobe or promotion.

Anyone not able to attend this audition can make an alternate appointment through the office, 477-6911, local 488.

Two comedies and one of the greatest, most passionate and stirring tragedies in the English language — The Duchess of Malfi by John Webster — make up the theatre program.

The comedies are The Financier (or Turcaret), a farcical piece by an 18th century precursor of Molliere named Lesage, and Bernard Shaw's Androcles and the Lion.

Set and costume designs are in preparation by Robert Cothran and Allan Granstrom, the two artists who were responsible for the visual impact of last summers' shows.

GALUPPI

On the musical side Victoria Fair will offer this year an opening concert by the Winnipeg Youth Orchestra, conducted by Arthur Polson, and concerts by the University of Manitoba Consort and the Amity Singers conducted by George Corwin.

BARTOK QUARTET

At the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest in the 1950s, four student string players got together to play quartets for the sake of fellowship and the musical profit to be derived.

They probably had no thought that they had stepped into a way of life and onto the first rung of a career that would make them internationally famous within a decade.

Their names were Peter Komlos, the first violin, Sandor Devich, Geza Nemeth and Karoly Botvay and it was as the Komlos Quartet that they made their first public appearance in 1957.

The group came to international attention when they were awarded second place in international competitions in Budapest and Berlin in 1959 and 60.

The name of Hungary's greatest composer, Bartok, was bestowed on them in 1963 after they had been awarded first prize in another international competition.

On Wednesday evening, the Bartok Quartet will appear in Victoria, a presentation of University of Victoria's music division, at MacLaurin Auditorium.

Their program includes No. 5 of the six Bartok quartets. They will also play the Beethoven E flat major, Op. 74 and Mozart D minor, K 421.

Reservations for tickets should be made in advance. This can be done by phoning 477-6911, Local 361.

Starting time for the concert is 8 p.m.

No Great Dane—but certainly a Notable Norwegian

Although the guest conductor at the next symphony concert comes to us from Denmark, Per Dreier is actually Norwegian by birth. His early training was as an oboist, but after gaining a scholarship to the Koninglijkh Konservatorium at The Hague, he studied composition and conducting. Scholarships, prizes, and special distinctions followed thick and fast . . . the Ricordi prize while at the Royal Academy of Music in London, and the Arnold Bax Memorial Medal for "the finest conducting of 20th Century Music" are among his honors.

Currently he is chief conductor and artistic director of the City of Arhus Symphony, and conductor of the Jutlandic Opera. However, his guest appearances cover most of Europe, and cities from Trondheim to Trieste have applauded him with comments like ". . . a Mozart interpreter of high rank"; "a great success . . . conducted brilliantly"; ". . . limpid and exquisite musicality . . ."

Our own Laszlo Gati has forged a polished and responsive musical instrument from the varied talents which make up the Victoria Symphony Orchestra. On Sunday and Monday next, you will have the opportunity to hear how another distinguished conductor uses this instrument to interpret Brahms' Tragic Overture, Schubert's Symphony No. 5, and Sibelius' Symphony No. 2.

Fellini: 'One Always Makes Same Picture'

By KARL E. MEYER

NEW YORK—A self-professed disturber of the peace, Frederico Fellini was beaming like a cherubin as he discussed his latest film.

It is based on the greatest of naughty books, "The Satyricon," and it offers the most horrific and deflating picture of ancient Rome ever put on screen.

"You know what's happened," Fellini said, with a trace of satisfaction, "a lot of people stop me in the street and say, 'what the hell are you doing?'"

His hands became eloquent, and his face even more seraphic. "Actually, it's a very simple picture — the most simple picture I have ever made. It deals with love and fear, friendship and surprise, all of the common experiences of humanity."

●

Still, after "Fellini Satyricon" has its American premiere in March, a lot of his admirers may also wonder what the hell he is doing.

After seeing the film, my own reaction was that he has produced a masterpiece which will be as influential as "La Dolce Vita," "La Strada" and "8½". But it is not simple at all.

Set in the time of Nero, the film opens with pederasty and concludes with cannibalism, leaving harly a human vice unexplored in between. It is a Rome of Dantesque horrors, filled with freaks and mysteries but lacking in a Christian sense of guilt — its characters have the vitality and spontaneity of animals.

●

What the hell does it mean? When he was asked by a dozen journalists in respectful attendance in a suite at the Plaza Hotel, Fellini tried to explain.

"I have always liked the 'Satyricon' because it gives a more accurate idea of Roman times than the idea of Rome we were obliged to believe in under the fascists — the wonderful, virile, poetic Rome. Other movies about Rome give a deformed and comic vision of antiquity, filled with self-conscious orgies.

"But the 'Satyricon' gives a more detached, realistic way of looking at Rome, and I have used the book as a pretext for my fantasy, keeping path with the work's spirit.

"Do I approve or disapprove? It depends. The picture is full of nostalgia for a Christ who has not yet come. Yet my personal view is ambivalent. When I look at the ferocity and cruelty of Roman times I see things with a nostalgia for Christ.

"At other times, when I see Rome in terms of my own Catholic background, I feel a nostalgia for a time without a sense of guilt. I am deliberately ambivalent."

The Satyricon, as most literate adults will soon be finding out, is a fragment of a novel written by Petronius, who was Nero's arbiter of pleasure.

For centuries it was deemed a scandalous book and its most salacious passages were left in Latin. Only recently has it been translated in unexpurgated form for the general public.

Fellini has taken the fragments and wrought from them an episodic movie that required four months to shoot and a budget running over $3 million. Most of his cast consists of unknowns, and the male leads are played by a blond Englishman, Martin Potter, and an American, Hiram Keller, who was in the broadway cast of "Hair."

"The picture is episodic because the book consists of fragments," Fellini explained. "Ruins are always more fascinating than the whole church; the interrupted stones are much more seductive than when they are intact. Because the book is in fragments, we are obliged to participate in its completion."

●

Fellini does not deny that his amoral vision of classical Rome is shocking.

"Any artistic creation is always offensive," he says. "We always want art to reflect what we pretend is the reality around us. We really don't want to be disturbed, but that is what art does."

After saying this, he unassumingly added that he was not describing his own film as art because that was a judgment only those who see it can make.

Asked if the "Satyricon" meant he was returning to his past style of neo-realism, Fellini replied that he was "not interested in the diagnostic approach," and that all of his films were part of a consistent personal vision.

"One always makes the same picture," he said. "An What was his view about life but the interior quality is always the same."

Was he suggesting that there is an analogue between the profligacy of Rome and of our own time?

"There is an analogue in the sense that this is also a time of waiting, of expectation," he said.

His next film, on which he is already preparing notes, will deal with the young — the young in Italy because that is the country that he knows best, he added.

What was his view about the new freedom possible in films?

●

"We have more responsibility because we are free. The movie maker is no longer obliged to hypnotize, but he can deal honestly with an audience at a higher level."

Having discussed his film, he retreated from the room somewhat like a timid lion escaping from ravenous Christians.

As he escaped he confided a final secret about his technique, "I don't direct a picture, I have the feeling the picture is directing me."

Movies Take Top Talent Of Television

By JERRY BUCK

NEW YORK — What do James Garner, Steve McQueen, Clint Eastwood, Mia Farrow, Lee Marvin, Richard Boone, Richard Crenna and James Franciscus have in common?

Each starred in a television series but has since quit the medium for the movies.

In recent years, the movies have siphoned off the best talents of television, not only in acting, but in writing, directing and producing. Not many who have left seem to have any regrets and only a few have ever gone back to the tube.

A strong case could be argued that the defection of such talent is a major cause of the vacuous state of American television today. One producer complained not long ago that every time he put a series together he had to build a new team from scratch.

RING UP RATINGS

An equally strong, and more convincing, case could be constructed of the charges that these people were driven from television by its calculated drive to ring up the highest Nielsen ratings. Such an atmosphere, accompanied by TV's voracious appetite and inexorable timetable, leaves little room for anything provocative or innovative.

Regardless of the money and fame attached to television, the movies are still considered the big time. "It's like playing on the first squad as opposed to the club team," says Franciscus. "There's something so personally exciting about doing a film."

The former star of Naked City and Mr. Novak says he is making less money in the movies, "but I'm happier now."

TV DRAINS ARTISTS

Another factor that sends actors packing is the amount of time required to turn out a series.

"It's a seven-day job," says Crenna, formerly of Slattery's People and The Real McCoys.

MARVIN

But the chief cause of the actors' love-hate relationship is that television's preoccupation with ratings and assembly-line production squeeze the artistic juices dry.

Franciscus says a prime reason he left was "because of the indifference to the artistic andeavor."

"This industry is incapable of dissecting the temper of our times. In films you can talk about the hippies or whatever. But when an advertising executive says Mr. Novak can't hit this guy, even though he's raping his girlfriend, because he's a school teacher, it puts a limitation on your depth. With Novak there were so many things I wanted to go in and chew up."

WITCH-BOY who wins the love of Barbara Allen, a village girl, is played by Bill Murdoch in University of Victoria Players' Club production of the folk legend-based play, Dark of the Moon. Mary Ogg is seen as Barbara. The play is on nightly at the Phoenix Theatre, Tuesday through Sunday next week.

On Stage Next Week

The week begins intriguingly with concerts Sunday and Monday by Victoria Symphony Orchestra under a guest baton brandished by vibrant 40-year-old Norwegian conductor Per Drier. Silelius, Brahms, Schubert are programmed. Concert times, 3 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. at Royal Theatre.

Tuesday's noon concert at University of Victoria's MacLaurin Building, open free of admission charge to anyone interested, will feature George Corwin conducting the University Chorus. Starting time is 12:30 p.m.

At the same location Wednesday last of the Connoisseur Concert series will present the famed Bartok Quartet. Reserve tickets in advance by phoning 477-6911, Local 361.

St. Luke's Players' Production of the comedy, Midsummer Mink, will be performed Thursday, Friday and Saturday. It is the end result of workshop activity directed by Allan M. Purdy. The place is St. Luke's Parish Hall, Cedar Hill X Road. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m.

Puss in Boots, the Bastion Theatre production for children, will be repeated at McPherson Playhouse, Saturday at 2 p.m.

Third major musical event of the week is the concert by the Vienna Choir Boys at Memorial Arena, Saturday. Their program includes a comic opera in one act, Herr and Madame Denis, by Offenbach. Starting time is 8:30.

In the series of concerts by Greater Victoria schools' ensembles at McPherson Playhouse, Mount Douglas Senior Band will be presented on Sunday, Feb. 22 at 2:30 p.m.

Fair Profit Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pacific National Exhibition reported Thursday that net profit for the year ending Sept. 30, 1969, amounted to $229,860, up $192,474 from the year before. The exhibition, which celebrates its diamond jubilee this year, attracted a record 1,148,000 patrons in 1969, bettering the previous high mark set in 1965 by 50,860.

Ray Milland 'Keeps Brain Cells Alive'

By KASPARS DZEGUZE

TORONTO — The towering figure of a man blocks the afternoon light seeping through the doorway into the long hotel corridor. It doesn't seem likely that this large, dim shadow can belong to Ray Milland, but when you prepare to meet an actor, you carry an image in your mind based on films and television appearances that doesn't correspond with the person.

You walk closer and it is Milland, and Milland quite surpasses expectations. He's taller, more powerfully built than you imagined and considerably more foreceful and emphatic in his manner.

Milland sits down on the hotel's institutional antique furniture and crosses his Black Watch tartan-clad legs.

"I'm the only Welsh actor born on top of a mountain — the others all seem to have been born in the valleys. But no, between Wales and where I am there's no singular performance that sticks in my mind. I did discover some time ago that I prefer to work in film, since you can correct your mistakes. On the other hand, I like to be on stage about 10 weeks of the year to keep the brain functioning. Theatre is very hard work — it's got to be right the first time. It's easier to work 12 hours before the cameras than two on stage."

Milland is currently keeping his brain cells alive by performing in the revival of the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur play, The Front Page at O'Keefe Centre.

"Everything went wrong backstage on opening night. There's a tape recording of sound effects that's played during the show, but they must have had it on backwards. In one scene, there's supposed to be the 'clunk' of a guillotine blade falling, but a bell rang instead. And later when I picked up a telephone, it fell apart in my hand."

★ ★ ★

Nonetheless, appearing in Toronto is relatively easy. While Milland was doing eight shows a week in Florida, he also had to fly, two days a week, to film Love Story in New York with Ali McGraw. Milland recollects that Miss McGraw, who has reached great popularity with her performance in Goodbye, Columbus, was "... one of the most warm, friendly people I've met. She really is extraordinarily warm — I'd not run into anything like her."

When The Front Page ends its Toronto run, Milland will return to his Bel Air, California home to "... do some fishing and a bit of golf. I hope to finish a novel I've got blocked out, and later, go to England to direct a film.

"Directing is so wonderful—you don't have to give a damn how you look. And it's most challenging to see a scene come to life through the five or six shots you use to cover a sequence. Unfortunately, in the pictures I've directed, I have also ended up acting in, and you cannot do three things at once. I'ts too much—directing is a 26-hour-a-day job."

Milland runs a hand over his balding head and tells of being liberated from his hairpiece.

"When I was making the film on Long Island, I didn't use a hairpiece, and it gave me a tremendous feeling of freedom. But, one afternoon, while shooting in the study of a mansion, I turned my head to the bookshelf and there stood a large, prominent red volume with the title, The End of the Rug. I thought someone had planted it purposely, but no, it turned out to belong in the house."

★ ★ ★

Milland shifts his position on the sofa and casually adjusts his ascot. "I live in California now, but I go back to Wales every year. I've got millions of relatives there. I guess I'm a mid-Atlantic man. (Milland still says 'underground for subway, but his pronunciation is American: when he speaks of writing, it sounds like 'riding'.) We Welshmen are all over the world ... insidious little bastards. There's two races of Welshmen, you know, the short, dark ones, similar to the Basques, and the tall race from which I come. The ones in between? Sure, we have them. They're called English."

Milland is extremely interested in literature, but he recalls one of Wales' most famous sons with disfavor.

"I met Dylan Thomas a few times, but only when he was stinking drunk. I've never heard such foul language or seen such abominable behavior in my life. To me, Thomas' greatest asset was his voice. He reads his own works with tremendous theatrical sense."

MILLAND

Of the philosopher, Bertrand Russell, who died last week in Wales, Milland remarks, "I think they should have come for him with a net long ago. His ideas would have been very apt in Victorian times, but now, they're just juvenile."

★ ★ ★

It's difficult to turn Milland away from talk of actors ("Hemingway's writing is so studied, so self-conscious the only good thing he produced was The Sun Also Rises") and back to theatre, but finally he concedes: "There are no good plays being written. Do you know the biggest hit on Broadway is Private Lives, and that, what, 1932 Coward?"

But no, he hasn't seen any of the contemporary hits like Hair or Oh! Calcutta. "Why see it, if I've already done it? So the women take their clothes off ... but the only thing women have to sell is mystery, and I hate to see them degrade themselves. It's all so damn boring."

SAUL BELLOW

A Collector Of Madness

By ANTHONY JENKINS

New York City, they say, is fine to visit; but one wouldn't want to live there. After reading Saul Bellow's new novel, I'm not sure that it's even worth a visit any more. For one of the main questions this book poses is where the violence of today's urban society will lead to.

Might not the current race for the moon be more than a matter of propaganda and power politics; might it not be the only way for the human race to survive? Ironically, what was once the subject of science-fiction has now become the centre of a modern novel of manners.

Bellow does still believe in manners. Despite the abrasive crackle of the plot, which is frequently harsh and shocking, his underlying scheme is greatly concerned with ordered behavior.

And though the book is very much in earnest, it is saved from becoming a long, undramatic discussion by the felicitous choice of a narrator who has experienced so much despair that nothing about mankind now seems to surprise him.

MR. SAMMLER'S PLANET by Saul Bellow. Macmillan $8.75.

Artur Sammler belongs to pre-war Europe. Born in Cracow, and equipped with old-world courtesy and "the face of a British Museum reader," he had known many of the literary greats of London between-the-wars. According to his daughter, he should now be engrossed in the business of putting his recollections of H. G. Wells down on paper.

But in actual fact, his interest in Wells is more social than literary, for in his writing he has found the example of a man who started out with boundless faith in the governability of the human race but who ended up by condemning it for being no more manageable than a sack of struggling rats.

Yet, oddly enough, after his own terrible experiences of man's viciousness, Artur refuses to stand in judgment. Whenever he talks about the present state of affairs, he feels forced to apologize for "lecturing" and quite expects others to lose patience with him.

In addition, he has come to distrust those writers and thinkers who, having once made a success with words, set themselves up as men of action in a public crusade. Nevertheless, Mr. Sammler has "a talent for condensing" his experiences into patterns. If he does not judge, he observes life in a way that exposes all its present-day malaise.

"The one-eyed man is King in the Country of the Blind," runs the old saying. Although Artur is made to deny this expressly, the shape of the novel makes it clear that modern man is blind and that Artur sees things out of his one good eye that his fellow men no longer see at all.

Sammler lost one of his eyes in a concentration camp. He was beaten with a rifle-butt across the face just before being forced to stand naked in a crowd of fellow Jews above an open grave.

Somehow he managed to escape from under the pile of earth and human carcasses, and hiding out in an old tomb, he rose — as it were — from the grave. It is this that has given him wisdom and curiosity, since every minute he now lives, no matter how unpleasant it might be, has been snatched from destiny.

"Sammler" is the German for "collector", and Artur seems unable to stop himself collecting the evidence of madness in the New York streets about him. He and his friends exist in a state of seige, unable to go down certain streets or on certain buses and trains without courting danger.

He cannot approve of the new permissiveness, yet his relatives see him as a 70-year-old sage and turn him into a father confessor. Having suffered from anti-Semitism, he sees the heaps of Egyptian dead in the desert during the six-day war. If Mr. Sammler's planet is polluted by humanity, there are no heroes and no villains.

It is left to a second character, an Indian scientist named Govinda Lal, to proffer a solution to man's problems. Dr. Lal is a biologist, and his work with the chain structures of the human cell has convinced him that Nature is the paradigm of order and that man constantly works against that order in championing the liberty of his impulses.

Lal also dabbles in some extraordinary theories about inter-planetary travel, since he suspects that the present chaos on earth might be Nature's way of pushing us to seek ways of escaping from this planet before it is too late.

Neither Sammler's detachment nor Lal's peculiar optimism can be said to represent the author's own opinion. As he admits himself, Sammler's attitude might result from the fact that he is an old man whose urge for modern living has dried up; and Lal is an eccentric.

Bellow's own views on the necessity and urgency of finding some order and stability emerge through the pattern of his book and from his prose style. He has found an idiom whose urbanity constantly appeals to the reader's intelligence and judgment but which is shot through with violent action and human crudity. The result is a novel that is both an alarming and a civilizing experience.

Don't Overdo Nationalism

By MARGARET LAURENCE

Once upon a time, and not so very long ago at that, the old adage "There is no surer path to obscurity than to be a Canadian writer" was unhappily true.

Morley Callaghan was writing novels which were widely recognized in England and America, while in Canada people were still naively embarrassed by the fact that he dealt with such prime matters as good and evil, innocence and its loss.

Sinclair Ross, having published As For Me And My House at the worst possible time, namely during the war, worked in a Montreal bank for years, totally and tragically unaware of the fact that he had written a Canadian classic.

Ethel Wilson's novels were read by a devoted minority, but it was years before the delicate brilliance of her writing was properly acknowledged.

Young writers wrote in an atmosphere of stealth and gloom, knowing they didn't stand a dog's chance of being published in Canada unless an American or English publisher would take their novel first. Mordecai Richler, despairing of his own country, took off for London, England.

▣

Those days seem pretty distant now. A mere decade, and the whole picture has changed.

I think a portion of the credit must go to McClelland & Stewart, who have always billed themselves unashamedly as "the Canadian publishers."

Jack McClelland has introduced more innovations into the Canadian publishing world than any other person. He has been willing to take chances on the work of young writers; he hasn't been afraid to publish controversial books; he has brought the design of books and dust-jackets into this century.

Also, a good many of the painfully traditional publishers in this country are at last beginning to move into new areas. The ancient and honorable House of Macmillan is now bringing out novels with dust-jackets that no longer look as though they might be refugees from the Victorian era. Such ultra-establishment houses as Ryerson and Clarke-Irwin are beginning to handle books that a few years ago they wouldn't have touched with a 10-foot pole.

Part of this stir and ferment can be attributed to the upspringing of a number of new young publishing houses. I don't mean the little presses that put out limited editions of poems and which certainly serve a useful function even though they may rise and fall with the seasons.

I mean the new publishing ventures which appear to stand a good chance of surviving and which are making the old-line publishers look to their laurels, the new publishers whose scope is broad and who have entered the field with a considerable grasp of the business requirements as well as a feeling for what needs doing in Canadian publishing.

The House of Anansi, in Toronto, comes to mind first, with its steadily growing list of poetry, novels and social commentary, and its knack of imaginative format.

Others include New Press of Toronto, Mel Hurtig of Edmonton, Prism International, the University of British Columbia literary quarterly, Peter Martin Associates of Toronto, Tundra Press of Montreal, Oberon Press of Ottawa, and Lovat Dickson, a distinguished Canadian who spent many years as a well-known publisher with Macmillan in England and who now has begun his own publishing firm in Toronto. And there are others.

What has all this meant in terms of output? Can we look for a sudden in-all-directions flowering of Canadian writing? Not yet, I think. However, things are moving along with fairly encouraging vigor.

So here we are, at the beginning of another decade, and the writing and publishing picture looks extremely promising.

Fiction of some value is being written (poetry, too, of course) and it is being published both by the older publishers and the new publishing houses which are springing up all over. To be a writer in Canada today is certainly a far cry from the discouraging and isolated business it once was.

This is great, and I am all for it. However, there are one or two perils implicit in this burgeoning atmosphere. I think it needs to be pointed out that whereas Canadian writers were once desperately neglected in their own land, they are now in danger of being overpraised.

The blossoming of new publishing houses and the gradual emancipation (hopefully) of the older ones coincides with an upswing of Canadian nationalism the like of which we have not seen before.

Canadians no longer feel they have to put down their nationality at every turn.

People 20 years younger than I am (and I am 43) will not even remember when this was the national sport, but I do not forget the old and once-true joke which said that if you ask an Englishman what is the best country in the world, he'll say England; if you ask an American, he'll say America; if you ask a Canadian, he'll say "any goddam country except Canada."

▣

We are a long way from that stance now, thank goodness. But pendulums have a way of veering too far.

I was depressed the other day to read a review of a first novel by a Canadian writer in which the reviewer actually apologized for panning the novel. I could scarcely have been more depressed if he had praised it only because it was a Canadian novel.

What is all this nonsense about Canadian writing? Writers, publishers and critics, in my view, need to hold strongly onto only one thing—the crucial thing about any novel is whether or not it is a good novel. By this I do not mean that there are absolute standards—of course there aren't.

But a novel should be capable of communicating something—character, dilemmas, themes—to some readers of reasonable intelligence and literacy, both inside and outside the writer's particular culture.

If writers are going to compare their capabilities with anyone else's, there is only one standard of comparison—and that is with the best that is being written in the same language anywhere in the world.

If publishers are selecting novels for publication, there is only one yardstick—not "Well, it's fairly decent compared to what else has come along by Canadian writers this month," but does it or does it not stand up on its own, with no props, as a novel.

If a reviewer is talking about a novel by a writer who happens to be a Canadian, it is an insult both to writer and readers to give that novel any kind of handicap or special treatment.

The minute we forget that the world is a large place, praise God, then we speak or sing to fewer than those who might be able to hear us and respond to us, to fewer than those who might even need to hear us and to answer.

We can afford to relax about such theoretical and meaningless matters as a national culture.

There is no such thing as an instant culture, and we are certainly not going to accumulate a powerful body of Canadian literature overnight or even over a century.

So what? It will come—it is already in the forging—if we let it be. It will take shape around us, if only we can stop being so twitchy about the national aspects of the thing and just concentrate both lovingly and critically on the only thing that matters, the work itself.

ONE of Canada's most praised novelists, Margaret Laurence now is spending a year as writer-in-residence at Massey College, the University of Toronto.

Chance Missed To Claim Arctic

By HUMPHRY DAVY

I think author Thomas Appleton bit more than he could chew when he undertook a history of the Canadian Coast Guard and Marine Services.

It's a big subject and not an easy one to put together and compress within 318 pages. Much has been left out on the work of some of the ships and the men who were responsible for coastal navigation since Confederation.

No doubt this was due to the lack of space. But regardless of these weaknesses, the book contains a wealth of information on government ships, lighthouses, lifesaving and rescue, and Arctic surveys which hitherto were unavailable. It will serve for a long time as a standard reference book.

USQUE AD MARE by Thomas E. Appleton. Queen's Printer. $10.

I am familiar with many of the ships mentioned and I agree with the author that the CGS Arctic deserved a better ending. She should have been preserved by the Canadian government.

The Arctic was purchased in 1904. She was a wooden sailing ship, equipped with engine — the type that has been romanticised in paintings of the Canadian north. For years she patrolled the Arctic seas.

Her skipper, Capt. J. E. Bernier, a French-Canadian, ranks as one of Canada's outstanding Arctic explorers. If the Canadian government had listened to this man there would be no question today of Canada's sovereignty over Arctic waters.

Though Britain turned over the Arctic region to Canada, Bernier left nothing to chance. He proclaimed Canada's sovereignty over all the islands he ran across. He was also always insisting that Ottawa do more to safeguard Canada's rights in the Arctic.

I remember seeing the Arctic tied up alongside Quai du Roi at Quebec in the late twenties and later at Levis. There, as Appleton points out, she was left to sink into decay and oblivion.

The author also devotes several pages to the ill-fated Canadian Arctic expedition of 1913. This involved CGS Karluk under Capt. Capt. Robert Bartlett. She sank 80 miles from Wrangel Island off the coast of Siberia.

Why Canada never took possession of Wrangel will never be known.

The Royal Navy discovered the island while searching for Franklin in the 19th century and it was later assumed to be a possession of Canada.

In 1919 the British government, including explorer Vilhjalmur Stefansson urged Canada to take possession of the island — to reassert its claim. But Ottawa didn't act and today the island forms part of the Russian defence system.

SUSANN
. . . great tradition

▣

'YOU GOT IT, FLAUNT IT'

By MICHAEL KERNAN

"I'm a very unmaterialistic girl," said Jacqueline Susann, and she is right on both counts.

For Miss Susann, who recently sold "The Love Machine" to Columbia Pictures for $1,500,000, is the very embodiment of the American Dream, and anyone who objects to that statement should address himself to the American Dream and not to Miss Susann.

The authoress (the word was chosen carefully) is in the great American tradition of Leland Stanford, Bet-a-Million Gates and Charles (lunchpail to lunchpail in one generation) Steen, the "you got it, so flaunt it, baby" tradition.

Furthermore, her consistent and valiant reference to herself as a girl — notwithstanding her 23-year marriage to TV producer and oldtime press agent Irving Mansfield — expresses poignantly the American insistence that one be young.

Wearing a Waterloo Bridge outfit, beret and raincoat and inch-long eyelashes, Miss Susann talked with animation about her writing.

- When she begins, she has only a theme, a main character, and an ending. The other characters and incidents just grow by themselves, as any writer knows.
- She writes four to five complete drafts. The first goes fast, 30 pages a day. The second, at about 12 a day, aims to compress but rarely does. The third is still slower, about five pages daily, and the fourth runs to 10 pages a day.

"It's not hard for me to cut," she said. "There's no room for deathless prose in the novel. In poetry, maybe. I want to communicate. I want to tell a story. A novel should be an escape to another world, another experience."

She confided that she doesn't read fiction much — just Harold Robbins and Leon Uris.

Encouragement for Artistic Blossom

By MARGARET WAINWRIGHT

It is difficult to decide what is the primary purpose of this book. Its format indicates that it is an art book and the number and nature of the illustrations bear this out.

Most of the photography, however, with some notable exceptions, is quite mediocre and the general layout is poor.

The fact that the illustrations do not have captions and their titles must be looked up in the back of the book adds to the general impression of an amateur effort. In a day and age when we have learned to expect first class photography and printing, this part of the book is disappointing.

THE ARTS AND MAN. Prentice-Hall-UNESCO. $15.

The text on the other hand has considerably more to offer. Each of the nine chapters deals with a different field of the arts — and their importance to society, and has been contributed by an author both distinguished and vocal.

Herbert Read, the eminent art historian and critic, relates the present decline in the arts to the increase in size of societies with the resulting loss of importance of the individual. In a vast industrialized world of mass production and population explosion, the natural sensibility of man is lost.

He says it is crucial that we do not lose this sensibility for it is through works of art that truth and beauty are made visible. Read feels there is an answer in education through art. He wants to create "a stir and growth everywhere," and "substitute for conformity and imitation in each citizen an endowment of imaginative power."

Kamaladevi Chattopadhyay, who worked with Gandhi and Nehru to develop India's arts, presents the case for the value of crafts as the embodiment of the great folk tradition. As with all arts, the vitality and truth of the art work come from within the artist as an expression of the human spirit in material form.

Pier Luigi Nervi, the noted Italian architect-engineer, calls for new perspectives and imagination in architecture, particularly in the use of new materials, without forgetting that architects do not have the same untrammelled freedom of the other arts, but must be more responsible to the public and obey the laws and limitations imposed by the physical world.

Other chapters deal with industrial design (hardly one of arts); the Theatre, its long history and importance as literature; and the cinema, which it is possible may one day be considered one of the true arts if it can get away from commercialism and can claim, as Stroheim felt it could, "the right to speak seriously on important subjects."

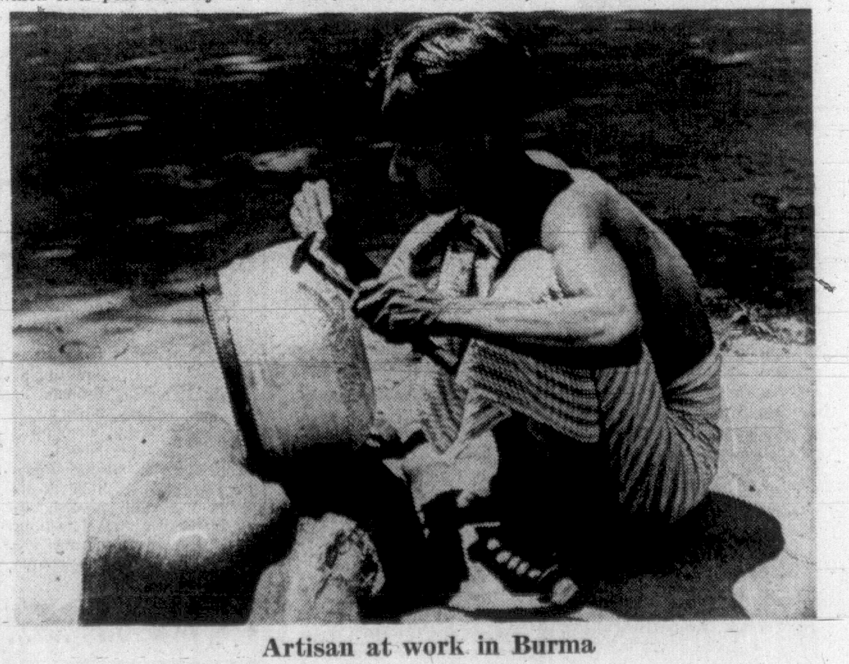
Buckminster Fuller speaks of the artist-scientist-inventor, the name he gives to genius. He feels we are all born with great capabilities and that the good life for all humanity rests with those who have reached maturity without critical impairment of their original faculties. They will solve the world's problems and bring us to peace and plenty.

The well known French biographer and novelist, Andre Maurois, in clear strong prose, describes literature as a means by which an author can express emotions, his own or others; perhaps even those of a whole country.

Literature gives us, the readers, an opportunity to look on life contemplatively and objectively, something we seldom have time for in real life. It and all art "provide models for life, substance for imagination, and order for the mind."

The last chapter on music and the nature of its contribution to humanity is written by Yehudi Menuhin. If for no other reason the book should be read for his superb and impassioned plea for the importance of music, its necessity to us all throughout our lives, its beauty and power.

The text ends with his summation of what the book has endeavored to make clear: "Until a substantial proportion of our population is acquainted with the sensations of artistic endeavor, we will not successfully overcome the debasement of human values."



Artisan at work in Burma

And Did the Good Guys Win?

By BRUCE YEMEN

Who fought against the formation of a public broadcasting system in the early 1930s?

Among others, the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, the Canadian Pacific Railway, the arch-Conservative Toronto Telegram, and companies such as Imperial Tobacco, the Pepsodent Company, Quaker Oats and a number of advertising agencies.

THE POLITICS OF CANADIAN BROADCASTING, 1920-1951 by Frank W. Peers. University of Toronto Press. $13.50.

Who fought to establish a public broadcasting system?

Primarily, there was the Canadian Radio League, with representation from a wide cross-section of business, financial, educational, religious, labor and other sectors of society, and a majority of daily newspaper editorial pages (including the Victoria Daily Times).

Who was divided on the issue?

Lots of people, including the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and, for a considerable time, the federal government.

Who won?

Those on the side of a public system.

Was it a clear and final victory?

Not by a long television commercial.

Did the battle end in 1951, when this book stops?

The fight had hardly begun.

What good is a book that only brings us up to 1951?

Very good indeed, for it is revealing of both politics and broadcasting and, in part, the struggle to define Canada.

Is it an exciting book?

No. It is absorbing reading for people who want to know where we came from in broadcasting, even if we aren't quite sure where we're at.

Who is Frank W. Peers?

He is supervisor of M.A. studies in political science at University of Toronto and a former CBC producer and program supervisor in both radio and television.

Is he biased in favor of the publicly-operated system?

Perhaps, but he does a good job of controlling it.

Sculpture's Rough Force Reflects Post-War Italy

Looking at Art

. . . With Gordon Rice

The mood struck by the show of Italian Sculpture, now at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria through March 1, differs noticeably from the mood of most of the shows seen there recently. There is a harsh, grimy, brutal look to much of this sculpture, which seems to reflect the atmosphere of Italy following the Second World War.

Neither the show's catalogue nor the labels indicate the dates of the individual works or the birthdates of the artists, but one suspects most of them have been working for 20 years or more.

●

We've become used to seeing a kind of cool, precise, "mind-trip" expression in sculpture and painting, and the pieces shown here almost all have a rough, physical immediacy.

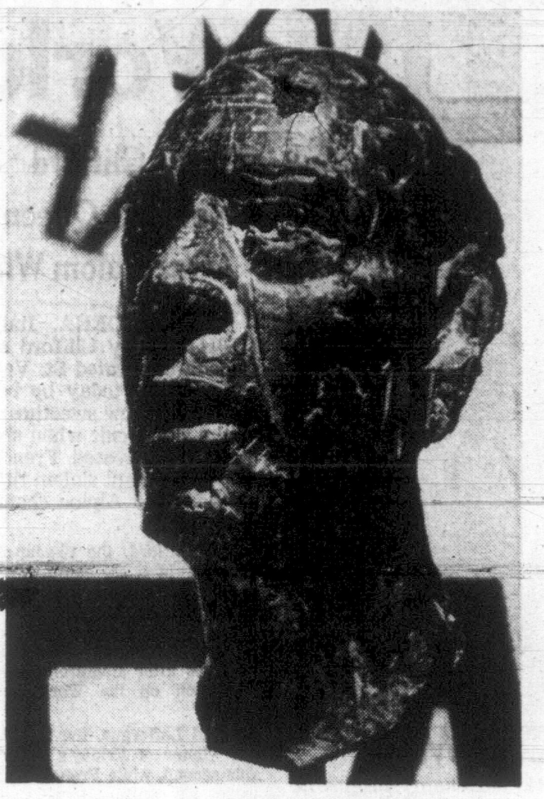
One could compare any of the good Italian films made in the late forties or early fifties ("Bicycle Thief," "Open "Shoeshine;" now film "classics") with almost any film made anywhere today and the same change of feeling would be apparent.

●

Aldo Calo's "Bronze and Crystal" is a case in point. It is an especially awkward, brutal looking piece, cast largely in bronze like most of the sculpture here.

Jagged tooth and claw-like forms rise above the main body of the piece, which features an odd spiral set next to a thick, broken, tusk-like piece of glass. In some way the work does not seem to refer either to animal, vegetable, or mineral forms; and yet it may suggest something of all of them.

The dull color of the bronze, slightly gray-greenish, in combination with the extra-glassy look of the broken crystal can suggest something of the feeling of surf pounding and eroding dark rocks. There is nothing pleasant about this work, yet it can remind us that the artist may show us beauty in something like a rhinoceros, where before we saw only a monstrous ugliness.



Marini's "Portrait of Henry Miller"

Medardo Rosso's "Ecce Puer", the head of a child just seeming to emerge from the bronze, is certainly an older work, and reminds one somewhat of Robin. Manzu's "Model Undressing" combines an intimate, personal set of discoveries about the figure with certain classical Italian sculptural techinques; a subtle sharpening of the nose, and the drapery about the loins held in the fashion of a classic Aphrodite.

●

Emilio Greco's "Large Bather", and his "Olympia" make classic references in the form of a smooth caricature, not as daringly simplified as Picasso's "classic" heads and figures.

Marino Marini's "Portrait" head of Henry Miller is a fairly well-known work. As with Manzu's "Head of Inge" there is a certain touch or feel to the bronze which is the equivalent of the painter's brushwork, a personal and characteristic kind of handwriting which is the artist's response to the materials he uses.

●

More recently this "touch" seems to be disappearing from both painting and sculpture.

Marini's "Il Miracolo" recalls the theme of the conversion of St. Paul, which challenged the great Renaissance painters like Tintoretto and Caravaggio. In its own way this is also a wierd and powerful work, which, if studied closely is liable to make one uneasy. It is also one of the most original works in the show.

Mirko's "Ancestral Image" is also a strange piece. It reminds one of a New Guinea wooden figure, but as if it had udergone a kind of erosion making it seem even more remote and awesome.

●

Franchina's "Quetzalcoatl" is a careful interweaving of smooth and textured bands and surfaces of iron. It is a studied interplay of related forms which is more highly abstract than most of the works here, yet quite clear and strong as a visual entity.

"Scultura Italiana" is large show, and one of the important ones shown in this area. It could perhaps be "pruned" by someone with really discriminating taste. The good works deserve much better bases, and the accompanying paintings which are not of a very high quality only add a distracting clutter and conflicting color-sense to the show.

KEEP RIGHT MAESTRO, AND SLOWLY

Music rehearsals are not the only kind occupying Victoria Symphony guest conductor Per Drier this week.

His days are spent poring over the B.C. automobile driver's manual, commiting to memory highway signs and road regulations.

The only way he can keep an engagement in Bergen, Norway, Wednesday, is by driving from Vancouver International Airport to Seattle International Airport to catch an early flight to New York.

And the only way he can do that is by a sufficient instant assimilation of the driver's manual to permit him to qualify for a B.C. driver's licence.

By RICHARD L. COE

NEW YORK — Over a hundred informally dressed people jam the steps of the Washington Square Methodist Church, patiently waiting for its large, central door to open.

The people have come to bear witness to one of the newer saints of the theatrical canon. Only an exact hundred will get through the portal, for only that many are allowed to partake of the ritual at one time.

Only the opening night list of "Coco"—with the allure of the names of Katharine Hepburn and Chanel—was as hard to crash.

The new saint is Jerzy Grotowski, director of the Polish Laboratory Theater of Wroclaw. Tidings of this new theatre have been dribbling across the Atlantic for the better part of the sixties, notably through a series of Grotowski interviews (finally collected, in English, by a Danish publishing firm, in "Towards a Poor Theatre") and also through Peter Brook's production of "Marat-Sade".

It certainly is something new in theatre, and one will be convinced, when the Polish Laboratory theatre performance is over 50 minutes later, that one will never forget it — but couldn't have stood another minute. And then comes the question: What will come of it all?

We are admitted in batches of 10. The church's congregation area has been cleared for construction of the most revolutionary stage in a time of revolutionary stages.

One goes up a few steps to wooden benches surrounding, on three sides, a wooden pit, roughly 10 by 24 feet. One hunches up to the wood railing to look down on a bare playing area.

▣

The only prop is a polished wooden bench, about three feet by six. Half the audience (those who arrived after eight for a nine p.m. start) will be on benches a few feet higher, a couple of feet further back.

Bare lights illumine both auditors and the playing area. Gazing down into the empty pit, the 100 viewers already share an expectant communion.

The play is to be "The Constant Prince," one of the 400 odd works Calderon de la Barca composed for 17th century Spain, "as adapted by Julius Slowacki, the Polish romantic, and as seen through the eyes of a director who used the theme of this classical play as any musician may use a musical theme in a series of musical variations," to quote the program.

Grotowski's theory has developed, he says, "from a theatre rich in resources — in which the plastic arts, lighting and music were constantly exploited."

In opposition to this "rich" theatre — and to supply what film and TV cannot, that is "the closeness of the living organism," Grotowiski calls his a "poor theatre."

It is "an ascetic theatre in which actors and audience are all that is left . . . we make special demands on both parties. Even though we can not educate the audience — not systematically, at least — we can educate the actor."

Grotowski's theatre, as we will see and as the program note quoted above suggests, could drive playwrights to suicide. The printed play is not theatre, but dramatic literature.

"The core of theatre," Grotowski elaborates, "is an encounter, an extreme confrontation, sincere, disciplined, precise and total — not merely a confrontation with his (the actor's) thoughts but one involving his whole being from his instincts and his unconscious right up to his most lucid state."

The director's choices of vehicles are dominantly from the classics. The past is clearly important to him.

Grotowski has created a training scheme of demanding proportions, total physical control in every muscle. Yoga was an early training vehicle. The use of voice is also rigorously trained to utilize "the body's different resonators," tones that come, roaring, not just from the larynx and chest, but the stomach, the very toes.

▣

The light darkens in the church theatre, and the performance begins in what Grotowski describes as "either a cruel game in a Roman circus or as a surgical operation in the manner of Rembrandt's 'Anatomy of Dr. Tulp'."

Garbed in black, four men and one woman set about the symbolic castration of the first prisoner. Collaborating with his persecutors, he becomes one of them and joins them to drag into the arena the second prisoner.

He is the constant prince and his deliberate aloofness from their cruelty will defeat their efforts. He submits to maltreatment to transcend his suffering and in time this society will love him.

By the end he will be symbolically naked with "no other weapons but his own human identity," and the players will file silently away and, as the audience retreats to the street, it will leave the red-draped figure lying alone in the pit.

The performance may be in Polish but it reaches the ear as a shattering, rapid series of sounds, chants, moans, wails, murmers, even the honkings of wild geese or the sounds of a tape recorder set at triple speed.

A sound that will linger is the self-abnegating pain of the tortured prince, who reiterates a downward sliding tirade of notes that are so harrowing that one marvels to find the actor speaking at the next instant in even, measured pitch.

Visually, there is almost constant motion, some fluid, some jagged. The moods vary in split seconds, from daring to motionless. The prince lacerates his near-naked body, bangs his head against the floor and retreats to a pose of what can only be described as tense relaxation.

Ryszard Cieslak, creating the title role with an astonishingly controlled passion, probably is the director's most intimate collaborator, but the entire group is so harmonized that one easily imagines each one in any of the roles.

The validity of the experience is that this is the theatrical equivalent of what Martha Graham and Jose Limon have brought to dance for several generations. It is sheer intensity of mind and body.

▣

Such is not theatre as we know it but the purest catharsis. While perched in the posture of aloofness from the action, one is not truly aloof. Only a few feet away this is happening. One is not of it but, grippingly involved, bearing active witness.

A sense of religion also is present. Though Grotowski notes that "God no longer functions for our generation" and preaches against cliches and narcissism, he uses man's myths. The story of "The Constant Prince" is essentially the crucifixion.

Grotowski is quite right to limit his witnesses to 100. One doubts that such tensions could be imposed, expressed and communicated to a larger group. Carried to a logical extreme, his ideal audience would be one.

Bill WALKER

The mail call went out when Canada's National hockey team turned belly up after refusing to meet European terms for deciding world hockey supremacy.

The returns now are in and the reaction is mostly as expected. Good riddance; we can do without them. Which means the Europeans.

One point that was brought out, however, was the suggestion that Canada, as home of the game, and through the National Hockey League, simply name its best team of professionals, declare that club world's champions, and issue the challenge to all others:

"Come and get it."

As a matter of fact, the NHL champions could be named, as most are Canadians. The foreigners, if any, could be dropped, and that club could accept the honor of defending the glory.

But this is all too simple. That's why it is a good idea that probably won't even be considered.

Meanwhile, Alexander G., a former Hamiltonian, offers this sage bit of advice:

"If we really want to play for this sort of thing, mythical as it is, and aren't all championships, then why don't they drop hockey from the Olympic schedule.

"In this way we could have a world championship every year without the fear of being tinged with 'Shamateurism'; the players could be paid, openly, not as they now are, covertly; and that fuss and furore about professionals playing against amateurs would dissolve."

●

He continues:

"We then could have a relatively sound program upon which to build for the future. Canada's national team would be preserved. The Europeans could continue to arrange their schedule of exhibition games against Canadian and other national sides, and the competition would be of top calibre.

"The only lost competition would be hockey at the Olympic's, and I can't understand why one tournament, held every four years, has such a dominant place in the hockey scene.

A world tourney would replace that, could be held in an area near to the Olympic scene, and would have just as much stature, perhaps more, on a competitive level.

"And this would also eliminate Avery Brundage from the scene."

There was more, too, about the demerits of Mr. Brundage, the Olympic poobah, who frowns on such trivialities as things money. Suffice to say, a point has been made.

Everything suggested sounds reasonable, and could come in time. But not right now. The Europeans want there own little tournaments on their own rules. There can be no other view, because they did have a chance this year to get into open-class hockey, almost went for it, and then reneged at the last moment. Now there will be no change because the Olympic games are on the horizon for 1972 and it is improbable there will be a publicly-announced change of heart before that time.

●

However, there have been second thoughts, particularly in Sweden, over the recent actions of the International Hockey Federation, and quietly, behind the scenes, a fence-mending is reported in progress.

But it may have come too late for Canada's National team. Or has it?

Canada's National team hasn't been officially disbanded, yet!

And a note from H.R.S., who is agreement with sentimentalities expressed here for the performance of Jean Beliveau in the past decade.

He pens this opus in part:

"In any walk of life it is very often flamboyancy combined with great ability which wins laurels, while more solid achievements come from less showy personalities with equally great ability.

"There is no question that Hull, Howe, Mikita and others are super stars of the first calibre. But over all, I think that Jean Beliveau, without question, is the greatest player of the decade.

"His play, his captaincy, his worth to the club and the team as a leader, an inspirer, besides being a gentleman in the highest sense of the word, off an on the ice, makes him, to my mind, not only the great all round hockey playing personality of the decade, but also a very fine example to the sports-minded youth of this nation."

Well said, and there will be no dispute from this corner.

But then only one man can be named "best", and the vote already has been taken.

Clear-Cut Decisions In Girls' Hoop Meet

Teams in the Lower Island high school girls' basketball tournament didn't serve up any thrilling finishes for fans in Friday's first-round games as Esquimalt, Claremont, Victoria High and Oak Bay coasted to decisive victories.

Esquimalt bounced Reynolds 37-21, Claremont trimmed St. Ann's 61-30, Vic High topped Mount Douglas 40-22 and Oak Bay rolled past Mount View 65-15.

Play resumed this morning at Esquimalt High and the championship game is scheduled for 8:45 tonight.

JOE'S PILOT PREDICTS KO OVER ELLIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Frazier's manager predicted a knockout over Jimmy Ellis in Monday's heavyweight title showdown bout as Frazier ducked the press Friday.

Frazier, still the favorite at 5 to 1 in man-to-man odds, shadowboxed and worked on the light bag.

Harry Markson, managing director of Garden boxing, reported a brisk demand for tickets and said the sale was well in front of the pre-fight action for the Frazier-Jerry Quarry fight last June which drew 16,570 people and a gate of $502,518.

Stunning Eight Under Sends Lotz Into Lead

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — "Win a tournament?"

John Lotz repeated the question.

"Why, I never even scared one very bad."

But the obscure tour regular from Hayward, Calif., threw a scare into the field at the Tucson Open golf tournament Friday, whipping in with a stunning eight-under-par 64 for the second round lead.

Lotz, a 28-year veteran of six years on the tour, played his remarkable round in almost total isolation with most of the relatively small gallery following first round leaders Lee Trevino and Bob Murphy.

WAS BELOW PAR

Lotz was 11-under par for the tournament with a 36-hole score of 133.

Trevino, the defending champion, and Murphy each had 68s and were tied at 134, just one stroke back.

Al Balding of Toronto shot a 71 for a two-round total of 140 to tie with nine others, including Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver who had 70s on both rounds.

Lotz, who ranked 90th on the money-winning list last year, said he was using a new putter he had picked up just three days ago and admitted "it seems to be working out pretty well"

The performance would bear him out. He had eight one-putt greens, including seven long birdie efforts between 12 and 25 feet, lipped out an eagle putt from 15 feet and tapped in for a bird and two-putted a par-five for his ninth birdie.

Harper Rink Wins First-Round Game

Glen Harper of Duncan was shooting for his second straight victory when play resumed at White Rock today in the Pacific Coast Curling Association playoff for mixed rinks.

Harper nipped Campbell River's Don Perriman 10-9 Friday in the only close battle of the opening round.

Facing Harper in the second round today was Max Gordon, who guided his Richmond rink to a 9-3, opening-round win over the Burnaby crew of Glen Walker.

Jake Block of Abbotsford thumped Dale Longmuir of Haney 10-2 in eight ends and Chuck Kennedy of White Rock needed only seven ends to whip Vancouver's Leo Hebert 11-3.

PLAYOFF AT QUESNEL

Winner of the coast title will face the top rink at Quesnel in the B.C. Curling Association playoff, which went through two rounds Friday.

Three of four second-round games produced 8-7 scores as Don Hessels, Quesnel, clipped Doug Engstrom, Grand Forks; Dan Martell, Kelowna, bested Vern Nickell, Cranbrook, and Art Shaw, Whitehorse, edged Paul Gelinas, Quesnel. In the other clash, Ken Giles, Smithers, trimmed Bill Walker, Kamloops, 8-4.

Highlight of playdowns for men's provincial championships on other fronts was the battle in Edmonton, where Edmonton's Hec Gervais, the 1961 world champion, squeezed past defending Canadian and world champion Ron Northcott of Calgary, 7-6.

Upsets Mark Doubles Play In City Meet

Upsets in women's doubles semi-finals highlighted action Friday night in the city badminton championships at the Racquet Club.

Kay and Leslie Woodland, an unseeded mother-daughter combination, provided the biggest surprise when they tripped Carol Meija and Lynn Polson 15-5, 15-9 to reach the final round.

Facing the Woodlands in the title match will be Maureen Hibberson and Marlene Hunt, who sidelined the second-seeded duo of Anne Currie and Mary Jean Smith 15-12, 15-12.

Tonight's finals begin at 7 with the men's singles.

Canadian Claims World Ski Crown

Betsy Clifford New Ski Queen After Slalom Win

VAL GARDENA, Italy (UPI) — Betsy Clifford of Canada celebrated St. Valentine's Day today by becoming the new sweetheart of the ski circuit when she upset the favored French to win the giant slalom title at the world Alpine championships.

Miss Clifford, the 15-year-old daughter of a ski camp owner in suburban Ottawa, won from a French team that placed four girls in the top 10 and who entered the race overwhelming favorites after steamrolling the opposition on the World Cup circuit.

Ingrid Lafforgue, the 21-year-old winner of Friday's slalom, was second, while French teammate Francoise Macchi was third.

Betsy clocked 1:20.46 minutes to win her first-ever international race. Miss Lafforgue was caught in 1:20.53, while Miss Macchi did 1:20.60.

COMBINED WINNER

Michele Jucot of France, the World Cup leader who finished fourth today, won the alpine combined gold medal with 30.31 points. She was third in the slalom and eighth in the downhill.

Teammage Florence Steurer was second in combined standings, while Marilyn Cochran of Richmond, Vt. was third.

Miss Clifford's win means the giant slalom title stays in Canadian hands for another two years. Nancy Greene won the Olympic and world title at Grenoble in 1968 and twice was World Cup holder before retiring.

Betsy, who is known for her sunny disposition towards life in general, however, does not wish to be known as "the new Nancy Greene."

THE NAME'S BETSY

"I'm me—Betsy Clifford. Got it?" she said when it was suggested she'll follow in the footsteps of Canada's former champion.

Miss Clifford, who lives every moment of her life to the full, said "I'd be happy to win as many races as Nancy but, please, I just want to be Betsy Clifford. Nothing more or less."

Miss Clifford, whose only previous success this season was to finish second in slalom races at Grindelwald, Switzerland, and Badgastein, Austria, was not considered a prospective medal winner simply because she had no giant slalom form behind her.

SHE'S STRONG

Even her coach, Swiss-born Peter Franzen, said on the eve of the race: "Betsy is tough and strong, but she is a little girl at times. Let her grow up and we'll see."

Well, Betsy grew up overnight.

Starting second among the top 15 seeds, the five-foot 129-pound Canadian raced with ice in her veins. She betrayed not a trace of nerves as she attacked the course which had 48 gates over its 1,200-meter (3,960 feet) length with a vertical drop of 338 meters (1,115 feet).

Miss Clifford gambled hard. She left herself no margin for error as she snaked between the gates, but never once did she look as if she would lose control. A big smile at the finish signified she was satisfied.

Forty-nine girls were classified at the finish.

For the U.S. it was not a particularly happy day, although the team were expected to provide the French with some sort of challenge.

Marilyn Cochran, who played safe to defend her third place in the combined, was the highest placed finisher in sixth slot with a time of 1:21.17. Younger sister, Barbara, was ninth in 1:21.76; Karen Budge of Jackson, was 11th in 1:22.03, while Judy Nagel of Enumclaw, Wash., was one place further back in 1:22.40.

Cougars Tackle Broncs Tonight

"Breathing room" is almost non-existant atop the British Columbia Junior Hockey League standings. Further down the ladder, however, Kamloops Rockets can breathe freely.

Vancouver Centennials continued to keep the first-place race a tight, three-way scramble by dropping New Westminster Royals 6-3. The win moved Cents to within one point of Victoria Cougars and one ahead of Vernon Essos.

Kamloops all but clinched the fourth and final playoff berth by dropping Penticton Broncos 7-3 in the night's only other game.

The scramble for first place may or may not open up tonight with two important games scheduled.

Cougars will entertain Penticton on Memorial Arena ice, starting at 8:30, while Vernon visits Kelowna.

A four-goal splurge in the second period helped Kamloops cruise to victory. John Senkpiel, Bernie Doan and Bob Nystrom each scored twice to spark Rockets.

Vikettes' Attack Conquers Legion

VANCOUVER — What looked like a cake-walk for Mt. Pleasant Legion turned into an extremely rocky dead-end road in the second half Friday.

With a six point lead from the first of their two-game, total-point semi-final series with the University of Victoria Vikettes for the B.C. women's basketball championship, Legion still had the edge going into the second half.

Then things went sour, and a sustained Vikettes attack toppled Mt. Pleasant's 59-43 on the game and 115-105 on the series.

Heather and Rose Witzel provided the sharpest thorns in the Mt. Pleasant's side, with Heather canning 15 points and Rose 10 to lead scoring.

Judy Stratichuk scored 17 for Legion.

Vikettes advance against powerful UBC Thunderettes who have already dethroned Uvic this season as Western Canada Inter-collegiate Athletic Association.

Gaming Investigators Call on Tiger Hurler

DETROIT (AP) — Denny McLain, the Detroit Tiger pitcher who won 55 games during the last two baseball seasons. has met with federal attorneys to co-operate on a national gambling investigation, an associate of McLain's said Friday night.

McLain has not done anything illegal, but the federal investigation deals with persons McLain may have known, said Ed Demetrack, an associate. McLain could not be immediately reached for comment.

The Detroit Free Press said he has been investigated concerning possible involvement in gambling and association with gamblers.

Earlier Friday, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said in a statement at New York that "certain off-the-field activities" of McLain in 1967 are being reviewed by the office.

BASEBALL NOT INVOLVED

Kuhn did not say what activities. However, the baseball commissioner noted there was "no indication that these activities in any way involved the playing or outcome of baseball games."

Kuhn met with McLain and the 25-year-old pitcher's attorney.

A federal grand jury has been meeting secretly in Detroit recently on what federal officials say is a nationwide gambling probe which may involve known sports figures.

HRYB, HUNT AND WAKEHAM . . . . . . IN FINAL ROUND OF VOTING

Three in Race for Male-Athlete Award

Three stars are still in the running for the Victoria male-athlete-of-the-year award that will be presented at the third annual Sports Celebrity Dinner early next month.

Other awards presented during the affair on March 4 at the Empress Hotel will go the city's best female athlete of the past year, the outstanding team and the person voted the area's "sportsman of the year."

Voting on all awards is conducted by a panel comprised of sports editors of Victoria papers and sports directors of local television and radio stations.

Preliminary voting reduces the list of candidates to three in each category and final voting to decide the winners will take place shortly before the dinner

Rules dictate that nobody can win the same award in two successive years.

Remaining in contention for the male athlete award after preliminary voting this week are badminton and golf star Bob Hunt, professional golfer Bill Wakeham and youthful wrestling star Taras Hryb.

Hunt has been the leading men's badminton player in the city and one of the districts' finest golfers. He captured another club championship at Uplands Golf Club last summer and tonight at the Racquet Club he will be attempting to extend his long reign as city singles king when finals are played in the annual Victoria badminton tournament.

Wakeham, who had an outstanding amateur career, enjoyed his biggest success of last year on familiar territory, winning the British Columbia Open for the second successive year at Uplands. He also won the Prince George and Northern Ontario opens.

Winner of a flock of titles in Canada, including the national junior crown, last year, Hryb became the first Canadian ever to win a medal in the world junior wrestling championships when he finished third at Boulder, Colo., and he won all his 12 matches during a tour of Japan by a B.C. high school team.

Several other athletes also received strong support before the three finalists were decided.

Among them were Dr. George Bigelow, who was second in individual standings at the world seniors' golf tournament at St. Andrews, Scotland; automobile driver Gary Kershaw, basketball and baseball star Bob Burrows, soccer player Peter Wilson, softball pitcher Gordie Huston, bowler Andy McLeary, and junior hockey players Bruce Cowick, Scott Munro and Laurie Moore.

Co-sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Saanich and the Sports Council of Greater Victoria, the Celebrity Dinner will aso present several noted sports personalities at the head table, including Father Athol Murray, coach Jackie Parker and manager Denny Veitch of the B.C. Lions football club, and a hockey representative from Toronto Maple Leafs. Confirmation of attendance by other celebrities is expected during the next week.

Tickets for the dinner, costing $10 each, are now available from members of the sponsoring groups and from all arenas in the Victoria area.

Neilson Hurt as Seals Rally to Upset Rangers

OAKLAND — New York Rangers lost more than a National Hockey League decision here Friday night when they were upset 4-2 by Oakland as the Seals scored all their four goals in the final period.

While dropping a decision to the Seals for only the second time in almost three seasons, the Rangers also lost the services of defenceman Jim Neilson, probably for the rest of the season.

Neilson suffered torn knee ligaments when he collided with Oakland's Ted Hampson in the third period.

RECORD EQUALLED

Although unable to boost their slender two-point East Division lead over Boston Bruins, Rangers equalled an NHL record, set by the Rangers from 1940 to 1942, of going 117 games without being held scoreless.

Seals, who have now won four of their last five games, scored the final three goals to erase a 2-1 deficit. Mike Laughton scored the winning tally.

Curling Tips

By Ron Northcott

(Three-time World Champion)

In today's situation, the score is tied on the ninth end and blacks have last rock. When skip of blacks goes to deliver his first rock, he can either play an out-turn draw around the guards, or play an in-turn draw to the opposite side of the house.

THE STRATEGY: I would play an in-turn draw to "A" being sure to stay in front of the tee line and far enough to the right to make it unlikely your opponent can hit and roll behind the guards.

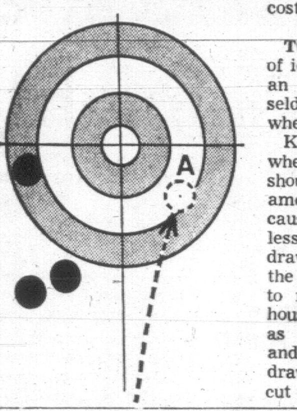
Don't go behind the tee line or your opponent will play a freeze. The big point to remember is that a deuce should assure you of a win.

The out-turn draw if made perfectly would be a great shot, but chances are you will leave your opponent a reasonable chance to kill your end. Only scoring one point could cost you the game.

★ ★ ★

TODAY'S TIP: The amount of ice selected for any shot is an important decision, but seldom more critical than when you are playing a raise.

Keep in mind two things when calling a raise. You should expect to use a fair amount of sweeping and because of this you will require less ice than for a routine draw. Because your target, the rock you are attempting to raise, is in front of the house, your rock will not have as much distance to travel and won't curl as much as a draw, so therefore you must cut down on your ice.



Rifles, Stockers Collar Top Clubs

Les Bergman and George Ede each scored two goals, and that proved to be the final difference as North American Stockers and Queen's Own Rifles upset the front-runners in the Vancouver Island Hockey League Friday.

Bergman's pair sparked Stockers to a 4-2 victory over University of Victoria Vikings while Ede's two carried Rifles to a 3-1 nod over the leading Butler Brothers before a Sports Centre turnout of 1,048 fans.

Bergman scored his second goal while Stockers were playing short-handed.

soccer

Soccer is touted by its fans and supporters as the world's oldest ball-and-body sport. Today it is played in our province with all the gusto shown by those juvenile enthusiasts, who in 1790 were warned: "Riotous playeing of football across the desks and in the school halls at verie peril to the masters of life and limbe will be punished by severe flogging." From midget and junior league soccer through the trap-and-shoot brilliance of Stuttgart International British Columbia's 1970 Festival of Sports will bring such "riotous playeing" of soccer as has never been seen before. Centres: Vancouver, Victoria, Chilliwack, Powell River, Richmond, Penticton, Kamloops, Port Alberni, Prince George and Prince Rupert.

ON WCIAA SCENE

Hryb Pins Foe In Quick Time

The University of Victoria Vikettes came on as the femmes fatale of the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association volleyball championships at Edmonton Friday.

Trapped in a three-way tie with Saskatchewan and Alberta for the final berth in the playoff round, Uvic parlayed past performance against the two opponents into a winning margin.

Vikettes record in the tourney was 6-3, with 2-0 wins against Brandon and Regina, a 2-1 win over UBC and a 2-0 loss to Calgary.

Calgary is undefeated in the tourney, while second place Manitoba has an 8-1 record.

Meanwhile, [illegible] at Edmonton, four rinks were to compete today to decide the champion in women's WCIAA curling.

UBC LEADING

Alberta, Manitoba and Calgary advanced to the final bracket with 3-1 records. UBC, with a 4-0 performance, remains the favorite.

On the male side of things, Victoria's Taras Hryb, wrestling for UBC, took exactly 43 seconds to earn a first-round victory in the 177-pound class at Calgary. Hryb finished third in the world junior championships last year.

He was joined in the WCIAA winners' circle by Gordon Bertie of Alberta, Gordon Garvie of Saskatchewan, and Brian Heffel, also of Alberta. All three are Canadian team members.

Calgary leads team competition, followed by Alberta and Saskatoon.

Things were hopping on the basketball courts, however, as WCIAA games went on at Calgary and Regina.

At Calgary, Alberta's Golden Bears went under 100-86 when the Dinosaurs unleashed a brilliant second half to overcome a 48-46 deficit at half-time. The win was not enough to earn Calgary a play-off berth, and the fourth-place Bears meet Manitoba in a best-of-three semifinal Feb. 20.

First-place UBC Thunderbirds and third-place Uvic Vikings square off in the other bracket.

VIKINGS BOW

In intercollegiate exhibition action at Vancouver, Simon Fraser Clansmen walloped Uvic Vikings 88-75.

Vikings, who have never defeated SFU, mounted a tremendous effort in the second half, but failed to overhaul a 50-29 first half lead by Clansmen.

Bill Robinson of Chemainus led SFU with 23 points, Brian Brumwell led Uvic with 19.

In a junior preliminary Uvic Jayvees were smashed 70-56 by SFU.

Also in Vancouver, University of Manitoba Bisons remained favorites to take their sixth WCIAA volleyball title today, with a 7-0 tourney record going into final play. Uvic was eliminated Friday.

Beyond the Ruts And Keep Off Signs A Dream Path Waits

"As we turn for a last look back at Pachena Bay before plunging into the wooded path, we see half a tormented hillside already reduced to dead slash along one of the steep folds of the bay . . . and, hours later, we come across a fresh survey line cutting the trail itself through to the sea and a large, new provincial forest service blaze marking the virgin timber — for what? A quick cutting rights sale?"

The west coast of Vancouver Island has wrecked ships and killed men. It remains, even today, aloof from the petty vices of civilization—industrial smoke, crowds and the noise of machines.

Its majesty and promised rigor drew Times staff writers John Mika and Humphry Davy and their young friend Gregory Baker to mount an expedition down the old West Coast lifesaving trail a couple of weeks ago.

What follows is John Mika's account of their walk on the Island's wild side.

By John Mika

A mid-winter trek along the wild coast presents a slightly stiffer challenge to the novice than a summertime ramble but the compensations are greater.

The seas are heroic in their struggle to reshape the shoreline, the wild life is varied and even exotic; the beaches more likely to offer up treasures from over the tumbling horizon and the trail is less crowded.

Just in case of snow on the Malahat or the interior height of land, it's necessary to carry chains and snow tires, a sack of sand and a shovel would be a good idea too. It takes only four hours to drive past Cowichan Lake's Honeymoon Bay, on to Caycuse over the Flora Lakes forest road and, a couple of miles short of Bamfield, to Pachena Bay and another world.

So why wait for spring?

. . . ruts and potholes in the forest roads squirming through the lake-dotted central highlands are trusty sentinels protecting the magnificence from massive invasion, even better than the low snowline, so bless every doughty bump that does its duty for the wilderness . . .

. . . but curse the company gates and restricted access at so many control points reminding the citizen he is not traversing his own domain as he thought but rather crossing, on sufferance, the frontiers of the Duchy of B.C. Forest Products and the principality of MacMillan Bloedel.

Gates may be needed on all the forest roads over crown land, to close off areas during the fire season or the hours when huge logging trucks hurtle through, but they should be operated by the landlord and not lessees — as a matter of the public's safety instead of private convenience.

The Trail: Rushing, Crushing, Crashing, Tumbling, Humbling, Sobering, Numbing, Exhilarating!

Far better to have "sorry for the inconvenience" rammed down our throats by an officious British Columbian than to be politely told, often in foreign accents, to "please keep off the investment" by some entrepeneur using our land as a factor in some distant ticker-tape tabulation.

. . . Pachena Bay, seen as we first saw it, has beauty enough to shock time into suspence: a rhythmic swell heaved through a dark fjord-like entrance to crash successive combers on the shelf, pitching the sudden man-high crests forward to endlessly repair a creamy carpet of foam half a mile long and 500 feet wide, that shrank-and-spread-and-shrank-and-spread again over the ghostly moonscape strand.

. . . it was even better than TV . . .

. . . most of Pachena Bay is in the Ohiat reserve and the Indians recently developed a series of campsites along the sandy beach, each with a place to park a camper or set up a tent under the trees, a rustic table and cooking place. It was an instant commercial success, understandably enough and someday it will need a waiting list.

A couple of hundred yards inland from the beach stands their newly-relocated village of Anacla, straddling the access road, where a new, well-stocked grocery store and gas pumps wait to serve the tourist public . . .

. . . at the southern end of the beach, where the road stops and the six-mile trail to Pachena Point lighthouse begins—the only portion of the old life-saving trail still systematically maintained—is the shantymen's Camp Ross for boys where we met the young caretakers, Mr. and Mrs. Tony Ford, fugitives from the crush, pollution and rat race of California. It was sobering to realize they and others consider what we take so much for granted as the last refuge of a precious and dwindling supply of sanity, peace and beauty—a natural, undefiled environment . . .

. . . but for how long will it remain when elected representatives permit desecration of the land as fast as their pens can sign government fiats? British Columbia is big, but is it big enough to survive the deeds of ministers for pollution and consternation?

Even this west coast trail, loudly promised as an adjunct to the proposed national seaside park by one minister only before Christmas, already is under the shadow of ominious threat. While the minister who said he would protect it drags his feet, his colleague in charge of the forests appears to race ahead to prepare it for a cut-and-get-out stripping.

As we turn for a last look back at Pachena Bay before plunging into the wooded path, we see half a tormented hillside already reduced to dead slash along one of the steep folds of the bay.

Hours later, as we break into the open again near the lighthouse, we come across a fresh survey line cutting the trail itself through to the sea and a large, new provincial forest service blaze marking the virgin timber—for what? A quick cutting rights sale?

. . . for those going only as far as Pachena lighthouse, and carrying no more than a couple of pounds of food and gear, it is a delightful saunter over a wide, woodsy path, with hand-railed sturdy log trestles spanning the tumbling creeks, some cedar "washboard" sections to help the footing when climbing or descending the short, steep slopes, and even milepost markers.

Yet, civilized though it is, this section still is natural and it's heartening to realize that although perhaps 1,000 persons, from tots to totterers, tramped this six miles last summer yet there is scant litter to be detected even by a sensitive eye. Take people out of their machines, put them on foot and they become human again . . .

. . . for us—the two aging men recapturing a long-buried challenge and not the young buck who quietly walks rings around us to ferret out all the secrets of a new trail, sometimes just for the exercise (shattering the myth, waxing more indignant with each passing year, that the younger generation is soft in the body and head)—it's a different experience.

Because we go beyond the lighthouse to overgrown and forgotten pathways, broken bridges and untracked shores, instead of just a boxlunch and a camera, we carry a hoard of heavy eating, cookingware, bedrolls and an entire campsite in our packs.

A pack almost one-third my weight implacably riding my back mile after lengthening mile and the squishy, mud-sucking at my stiff boot soles as we plod through various vertical angles of the ravinerent trail—no wonder my glasses steam up, my limbs burn and ache.

. . . almost within the shadow of the 160-foot Pachena light's tower, we break out of the cathedral forest on to its high stepped cliffs swept with spasms of salt spray.

No wind drives the sea this day but some long-dead storm shaped its inexorable course across a fetch of thousands of empty miles to spend itself in senseless suicide on this shore.

Little wonder that the twisted broken remains of old sailing ships are strewn along this "graveyard of the Pacific" where once tragic necessity carved a unique lifesaving trail for the shipwrecked that today could be a recreationist's dream path to the splendor of a lonely coast spattered now only with the flotsam souvenirs of passing ships . . .

Yet another sound begins to fill the lulls—a strange tinny roaring like a combination of elephants' trumpeting and lions' hoarse snarl.

The sea lions of Pachena Point!

Unforgettable.

There they were, out front, perched on the foremost boxes overhanging the rilled sea-stage, behind them a huge sandstone amphitheatre hewed into terraces with aisles as deep and wide as canyons and turreted statuary sculpted in the recesses of the curving cliffs rising up to the "gods" where we now sat watching.

Occasional cascades washed over them while all around large rollers plunged like express trains through the gorges, canyons and grottoes of the amphitheatre, rearing into great geysers of white water as the honeycombed stone reverberated with crescendos of sound.

And all the while, the wet, darkly shining beasts—their mammoth blubbered bodies, poised on flipper-tips, wiggling and weaving like tall sea frends—roared back at the sea, at each other, at the lowering sky.

They rubbed noses, locked jaws, battered heads and constantly shifted position in jack-knifing hitches of activity as ceaseless and restless as the ocean itself.

These troupes of sea lions taking their winter ease along our coast during their migrations from the Pribiloff Islands to California, provide one of nature's most fascinating travelling shows.

It's Neptune's Chautauqua.

They have a few other favored resting places along the island in the Queen Charlottes, but here at Pachena Point they are most accessible to viewers—and hunters.

Surely, park status for the trail and creation of an ecological conservancy for their rocky way-station is needed to give them sanctuary and future British Columbians a rare opportunity to see one of the remarkable creatures of the earth in an undisturbed habitat.

. . . at the lighthouse we met keepers Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bergthorson and Tom Smith who provided the bountiful hospitality one meets often at isolated outposts.

. . . last summer about 600 of the hikers that passed this way stopped long enough to sign the guest book at Pachena lighthouse and pushed on as we do, down a couple more miles of more difficult trail to the beach.

Here where the tall winter combers spread acres of deep foam, some piling into drifts a yard or more high far up on dry beach, walking is sheer animal joy.

An occasional line squall rushes by in an earth-hugging column, sizzling the salt-laden beach for a moment in a refreshing shower before the sun, in warm pursuit, chases its thin shadow away.

Goodbye civilization. Welcome exhilaration.

Everything is possible as we explore this wide varied beach, our boots now sinking in sand, now clumping over smooth sandstone, now crunching on gravel, now squeaking as we hop from boulder to boulder.

On our left: Canada. On our right: the distant Sea of Okhotsk. Behind us, somewhere: the harsh Icy Cape. In front: the fatally alluring Sandwich Isles.

The rhumba lines of history and future dreams curve over that wide horizon . . .

. . . numerous streams leap and dance in waterfalls off the cliffs on to the beach and we pick our way across on logs, rocks or shoals of sand. But at the wide Darling River, we have to wade over our boot-tops a hundred yards through rushing water so cold it instantly numbs the legs and shoots painful needles of protest into the heart.

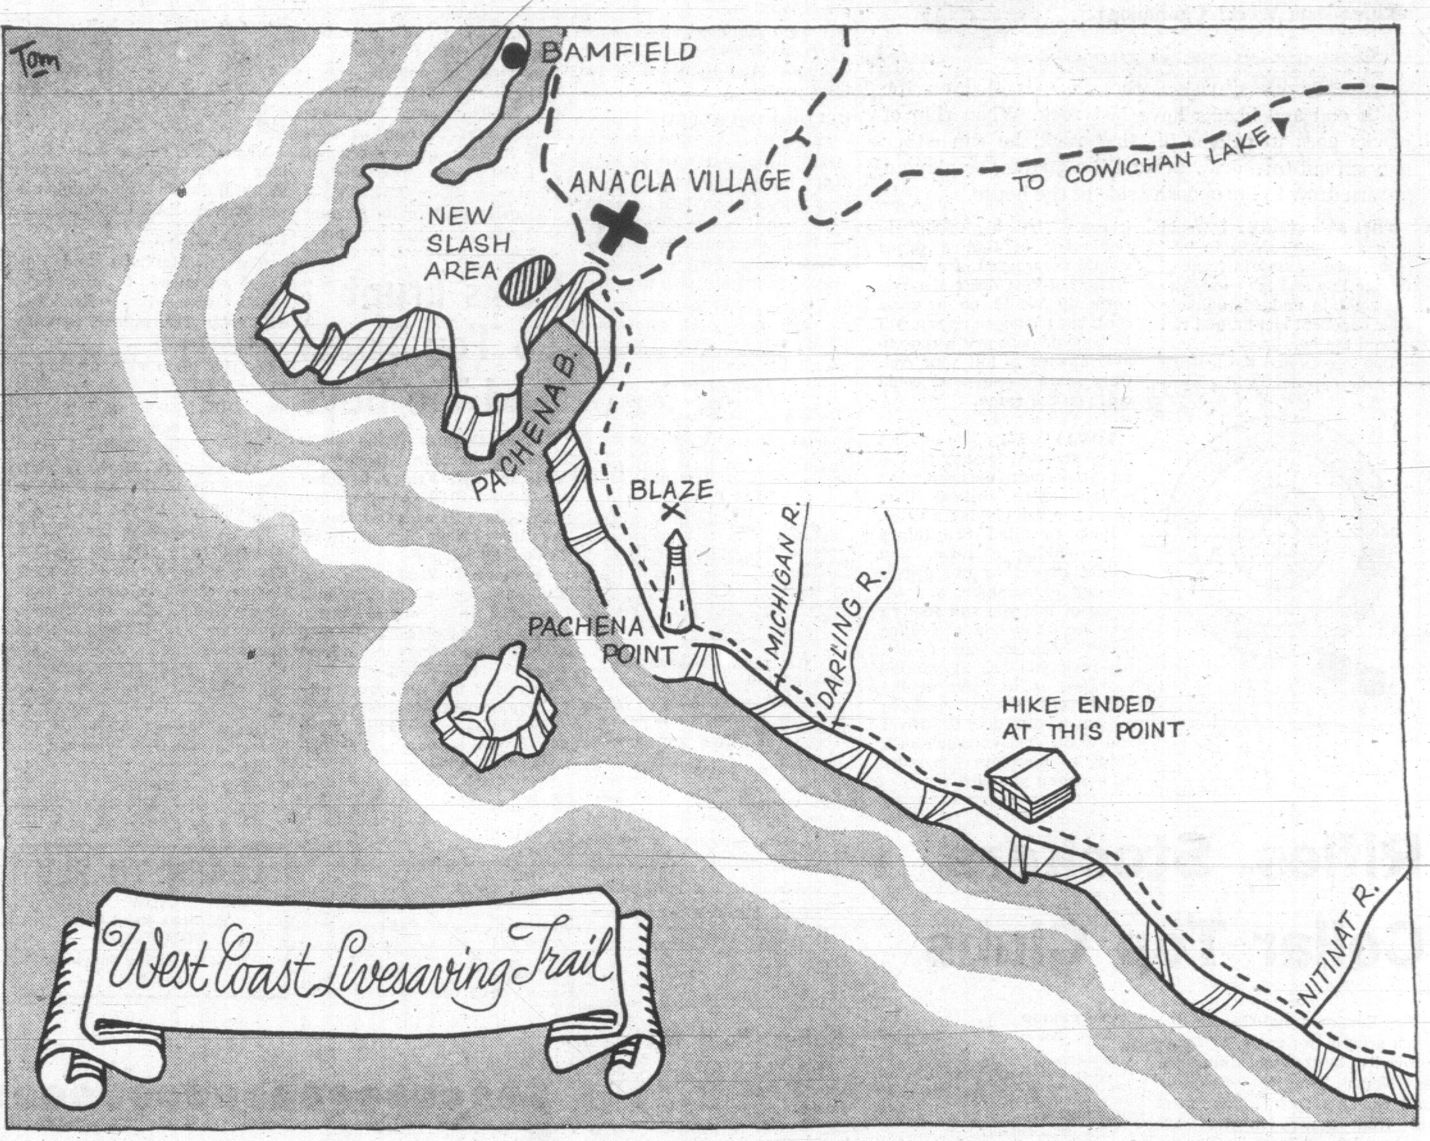
Finally, tired but happy, we reach one of the dilapidated cabins used by the men who maintained the trail and its telephone line decades ago. Just in time, because winter tides stop short our progress towards the Klanawa River a couple of miles further down.

We rest, have lunch, and begin the return trek because there can be no thought of crossing the races of the wide Nitinat, between us and Clo-oose, in winter. In summer, though, it's possible to go all the way to Port Renfrew, although the southern end is very rough . . . .

. . . for those who might like to try an off-season hike along the wild coast, a few tips: road and coastline maps are cheap and available in the large-scale contour series from the lands department on Superior Street; note the tides; a car compass, or pocket model, is a handy aid for night driving over the constantly switch-backing forest roads where sign posts are few, cryptic and prank-prone; a large four-mill plastic sheet 16 by 16 feet is better than a tent; a cheap vivid-colored vinyl poncho covers the back pack as well as you in rain and may save you from a hunter's shot.

Telescopic lens will give you a better picture of the sea lions on their island about 500 feet from the vantage point but don't forget to doff any bright clothing (or the poncho) lest you frighten them off; freeze-dried food I found unappetizing and decidedly inferior to my friend Humphry's trail-proven hunk of cottage roll, dry soup mix and instant potatoes mixed in various combinations in the same pot for different meals; the freeze-dried foods might be a necessity for a week-long trip but for anything less, natural foods are easily worth the slight extra weight; but instant foods in envelopes — porridge, dried milk and juices are excellent; food and gas is obtainable at towns along the way and also at Bamfield or Anacla's grocery store at Pachena Bay;

Take some extra clothing in case of wetting; protect your sleeping bag from moisture at all costs; wear hiking boots or a previously-tested pair of rubber boots; carry elastic bandages in case an ankle or knee is twisted; "space" blankets available at the ship chandlers are excellent ground sheets, rain covers and emergency stretchers; above all impossibilities, keep your pack weight down! and have a good time . . .



The trail penetrates wild, virgin splendors, but the chain saw is not far behind.

Majorca's Prices Draw Tourists

By BENOIT HOULE

PALMA DE MAJORCA, Balearic Islands — Below 5,000-foot Puig Major, that rises in the northwest to dominate this island, stretches a fertile plain that gets 300 days of sunshine a year.

These two elements, the fertility of the plain and the sunshine, are the keys to the economy of this island in a Spanish-owned archipelago in the western Mediterranean.

Most of Majorca's income derives from its production of oranges, almonds, figs, apricots, potatoes and olives.

But a not insignificant part comes from the tourist who find a sunny haven from winter. Christmas, for example, was celebrated here by Frenchmen, Germans, Englishmen, Americans, Spaniards and Canadians.

Part of the tourist attraction are the prices on this island. Oranges, for example, sell for less than four cents a pound. But the average working wage is $15 to $18 a week.

Besides agriculture and tourism, the island's industries include footwear manufacture, fabrication of leather goods and production and harvesting of pearls.

Because of its strategic position in the Mediterranean, Majorca and its sister islands of Ibiza and Formentor have often been disputed territory since ancient times.

They have successively been under the domination of the Greeks, the Romans and the Moslem Arabs before falling under the Aragon crown in 1229.

Majorca is 75 miles long by about 50 miles wide and has 420,000 inhabitants, about half of them living in Palma, the island's capital.

The island has been celebrated musically by Frederic Francois Chopin who spent three winter months in Majorca in 1838 and wrote A Winter in Majorca.

The piano on which the composer worked and the quarters he occupied with his mistress are open to the public.

Majorca also has Europe's largest underground lake, named Lake Martel for its discoverer, French speleologist E. A. Martel.

The lake is more than 500 feet long, 125 feet wide and reaches a depth of 30 feet.

It is deep in a grotto recognized as one of the most beautiful and vast in the world, with a surface extending more than a mile and numerous rooms.

MEETING OF CULTURES is becoming a common sight in the East, as more and more tourists from America and Europe seek out the exotic intrigue of this part of world.

CONTRARY TO HISTORY

Afghanistan Eyes Tourist Traffic

By PEGGY DURDIN

KABUL, Afghanistan (NYT) — This city seems to have had more of an attraction for conquerors than for tourists. The succession of empire builders began in the fifth century with the Persians, who were followed by Greeks, Turks, Chinese, Moslems and the British.

Kabul is now preparing for less lordly visits, and hopes to accommodate some of them in the recently opened 200-room Intercontinental Hotel.

Perched on a hill, the new hotel overlooks the Kabul (pronounced cobble) river plain on which this ancient Afghan city is situated.

At an elevation of about 6,000 feet, the valley and city are encircled by bare mountains in beige and brown. Some of these mountains are honey combed with flat-foored Afghan houses of clay; one mountain is ridged with old fortifications and sixth-century walls and another is crowned and streaked with snow, even during Kabul's delightfully temperate and sunshine-filled summer.

The mountains are offshoots of the magnificent towering ranges of the great Hindu Kush, which slices through Afghanistan from the northeast to the southwest corner of the country. The mountans have served Afghan history as a formidable obstacle to military men greedy for more empire.

Long a crossroads of Asia, this country was a flourishing centre in turn of Greco-Buddhist, Turkish and Moslem culture, a prospering centre of trade on the "silk road" from China to the Mediterranean and the object of a long succession of invaders from Cyrus the Great of Persia, Alexander the Great and Genshis Khan to the British.

CONTRASTS

Kabul is a town of broad, tree-lined avenues contrasting with tiny, crowded and bustling alleys of the native bazaars. Through the smaller streets passes a lively procession of donkeys so loaded with Afghanistan's luscious fruit and other goods that the tiny animals are barely visible. In the parade, too, are buses covered with gay paintings, carriages drawn by pompom-decorated horses and, of course, Afghanistan's sturdy, hospitable and self-respecting people.

The women wear both Western dress and the native chandris, the knife-pleated garment that covers them from head to foot, leaving only a lattice work of embroidery around the eyes.

Although experts can detect differences owing to ethnic and tribal origins, most of the men have striking and similar faces with strong bone structure. They wear hats made of karakul (Persian lamb) skin or a turban, often wound around a beaded or embroidered skull cap; loose trousers, a long shirt and a vest or coat over them with, sometimes, a chapan thrown over their shoulders. The chapan is a handsome long coat in plain or striped material with a Persian-like flowered border. These make attractive housecoats for foreign visitors.

Kabul offers a wide variety of moderately-priced things to buy. Besides the chapan and beaded or embroidered caps, there are handmade afghan rugs colored by dyes made from local herbs and flowers, karakul skins in many colors, lapis luzuli and vests and jackets, some fur-lined, embroidered or decorated with gold braid.

There are jugs, bowls and platters made of tin, copper and brass; a wide selection of antique coins, some ravishingly beautiful (beware of imitations); antique guns skillfully decorated with silver or brass and antique jewelry.

Food in Kabul is remarkably inexpensive. The visitor can eat downtown in the Spinzar and Kabul hotels (much cheaper than the Intercontinental) and at the city's one cafeteria, the Khyber Restaurant.

ISLAND ROUNDUP

Man Jailed 4 Years

PORT ALBERNI — Robert Henry Woodward, 27, was sentenced to four years in prison Friday when he pleaded guilty to four charges involving theft and drugs.

Woodward was arrested after RCMP officers seized a large quantity of narcotics in a raid on a McKenzie Road house Wednesday.

Three of the four charges related to a break-in at a drug store, Peter Eng Prescriptions Ltd., and adjacent doctors' offices last Dec. 30. Heroin, morphine, cocaine, novocaine, opium, barbituates and amphetamines worth about $1,000 were stolen in the burglary.

Const. Richard Davis said Friday the raid yielded about 40 per cent of the drugs stolen and police also recovered a stolen pearl and diamond ring worth an estimated $600.

A further 40 per cent of the drugs were located at a Vancouver address Thursday.

Davis and Const. Edward Roe conducted a month-long investigation prior to Friday's court appearance.

Woodward received a two-year sentence for the break-in, three years for possession of a barbituate for the purpose of trafficking and four years for possession of a narcotic, codeine, for the purpose of trafficking.

In an unrelated case which arose in January, he was sentenced to one month for possession of marijuana.

All sentences are to be served concurrently.

NANAIMO — The city has the right to tax Malaspina College, a three-man court of revision has decided in a ruling made public Friday.

Ken Wall, who owns the former hospital building that houses the college, appeared in court Tuesday to appeal a city assessment of his property.

Three members of the court were chairman Russ Inkster, Royal Sargeant and Frank Rowbottom.

Wall's counsel David Williams of Duncan argued that under the Public Schools Act school boards can lease land. And since there exists a lease of the building, the college is a "creature of the board."

Douglas Greer, counsel for Nanaimo, pointed out the Public Schools Act also states unless a building is actually occupied by the school board, it is not exempt from taxation.

DUNCAN — The Society for Pollution and Environmental Control here received a cheque for $663 from Salt Spring Island anti-pollution society.

The gift qas the remains of a fund raised for an unsuccessful attempt to keep Malaview Estates from getting a permit to dump partially-treated sewage into Trincomali Channel.

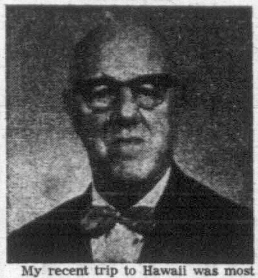
Salt Spring will decide whether to form its own SPEC chapter at a meeting to be held in Ganges, Feb. 24. Another branch already has been formed at Lake Cowichan.

The SPEC branch here also set up its "buddy sustem" this week. Under the system, members will collect newspaper and magazine articles on pollution and send them to a "buddy" in federal and provincial governments.

Vice-president Jim Egan said the articles were much more likely to be read than if the reader had to sift through hundreds of pages of other material.

Membership chairman Art Morton said there had been no real membership drive so far but 170 members now were paid which indicated more than 200 belonged because some were held by families.

Horn said among the members were four lawyers who were drafting ways in which the society could attack polluters through the law.



RETURNS FROM HAWAII

My recent trip to Hawaii was most interesting, educational and enjoyable.

Leaving Seattle by Continental Air Lines to Honolulu which had a Walt Disney travel film, five channel tape recordings by earphones to each seat and five seats across.

Checked in at the Reef Tower Hotel with a lovely corner room with two balconies and beautiful view. I made a new 16-mm. color film of the most important places of interest, then went to the Hawaiian Airlines office and received my Senior Citizens card, which gave me reduced fares to all the islands. This will be issued to you by producing your Air Canada Club 65 card or birth certificate.

The balance of this film was made of the Hawaiian Islands and will be shown to clubs. I then flew by Western Airlines to San Deigo, stayed at the El Cortez Hotel, took in Balboa Park and the zoo; thence by Greyhound to El Central and up the beautiful Imperial Valley — land of early vegetables—then on to Indio, the land of the date palms, grapefruits, oranges and lemon groves. Here I stayed at the well-preserved, old Indio Hotel.

Next day, on the Motel Six at Palm Springs, with the warm air of summer and a very busy place at this time of the year.

Then on again by Greyhound to Los Angeles and to the much-expanded Disneyland, with its many new attractions. Here I saw the making of Walt Disney film, "Kids of the Kingdom," to be shown on TV (NBC) March 22.

Now aboard the bus and along the beautiful coast route to Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo and San Francisco. Here I stayed at the Hilton Hotel, next to the Airport Terminal; then boarded Qantus Airline for Vancouver and home.

Let me plan your Easter Tour—this will be most interesting. With 30 years' experience in the travel business, phone me any evening.

Next week, same page of your newspaper, my trip to England in mid-May. Come along and enjoy the fun.

Office Union Approves Pay Hike

Office and technical workers on Vancouver Island have approved a new two-year contract that will give them salary increases ranging from 8 to 15 per cent retroactive to July 1, 1969.

Members of the Office and Technical Employees Union, Local 115, employed at credit unions in Lake Cowichan, Duncan, Port Alberni and Campbell River are affected by the new contract.

Other agreements coming out of negotiations included standard job classification, improved welfare plan and severance pay and vacations (four weeks after 10 years service, three weeks after three years service).

Island Cows Add $13 M To Economy

DUNCAN — Although dairying may not be as important to Vancouver Island as the forest industry, it contributes over $13 million a year to the economy, the Chamber of Commerce was told this week.

Case Van Jaarsveld, an official of the Vancouver Island Dairymen's Association and a Cowichan Valley dairy farmer for 20 years, said the $13 million probaly generated a like amount indirectly.

Feed companies, dairy plants, equipment dealers and even concrete firms all benefit from the dairymens' investment in the communities of the island, he said.

"We want to make you businessmen more aware of our contribution and especially as it relates to the better returns that island dairymen receive if consumers purchase locally-produced products."

He said island firms such as Palm Dairies, Northwestern Creameries and Island Farms depend on local business.

"We are being threatened by packaged milk products coming in from the mainland.

"We are not looking for a shoulder to cry on but can you afford to lose us?"

Rathie To Head Fund Board

Education Mister Donald Brothers said in the legislature William Rathie, former Vancouver mayor, will head the board that divides up the province's lump sum operating grant to B.C.'s universities.

Rathie was defeated in the Aug. 27 provincial election when he ran as the Social Credit candidate for Vancouver-Point Grey, the riding which includes the University of B.C.

Brothers said UBC Dean S. N. F. Chant, who has headed the advisory board that divides the operating money—$77,000,000 is proposed this year—wants to be relieved.

Economy Travel . . . Mexico-Victoria on a Dime

By STEVE HUME

CARNES AND DIME

Most guys, faced with the unpleasant prospect of hitch-hiking 1,500 miles home from a decaying Mexican border town, would stop on a dime.

Ken Carnes, if he was there, would probably pick up the dime and use it to finance his journey.

He's a lanky, 22-year-old geography student at the University of Victoria, and resourceful is the word to describe him. Carnes is so resourceful he'd still have the dime when he got home.

Relaxing in a noisy Uvic cafeteria, Carnes described a latter-day odyssey down the western seaboard of the United States.

Five Easy Days

He travelled the 1,447 miles from Mexicali, Mexico, to Victoria in five easy days.

It cost him a dime.

He spent it on a pay phone at University of British Columbia, and that incensed him.

"Right there I blew it," he said. "I blew the whole dime on one lousy phone call."

Even then it was a hard dime to unload. The pay phone wouldn't accept foreign currency, and kept spitting the American dime back until he traded with a passing student.

Four days before the phone call, Carnes was getting up for breakfast in the border town of Mexicali. He had driven down in a camper over Uvic's Christmas break with two buddies—Dick Glassford and Stu Soderberg.

It was a Sunday morning, and Carnes was the object of a dare and bet tossed his way by Glassford and Soderberg.

Breakfast

They bought him breakfast worth 90 cents, paid with a dollar bill, handed him the dime left over, and bet $5 he couldn't take it back to Victoria.

Carnes had a $20 bill at that point. The three of them signed it, and he set out through the green Imperial Valley fields. He still has the $20 bill.

"I started hitching right in Mexicali," he said, "and when I still hadn't got a ride 20 minutes later Glassford and Soderberg gave me a ride to the highway.

"They were ribbing me quite a bit. They parked just down the road and waited to see if I could get a ride."

He was picked up almost immediately by an old farmer, still drunk from a previous night on the town. The ride lasted all of three miles. The next two rides took him a mile each.

First Break

"Things were feeling a little grim then," he said.

"I'd been hitching all morning, and was a grand total of five miles outside Mexicali. I figured I'd starve to death at that rate."

Then he got a ride that took him all the way to the outskirts of Los Angeles.

"Los Angeles is 30 miles across. That's a long walk downtown," Carnes grinned.

In LA, he remembered, was a friend of his mother's who hadn't been seen for 20 years. So diligent detective work in a telephone directory, a gas station phone and a little fast talking and he had a ride into town.

With the ride came a free meal and a bed for the night.

"The next day she drove me to UCLA campus where I met her daughter and her boyfriend. They were going to San Francisco and I wangled a ride with them. That was the kind of luck you almost never get," he said.

They arrived at San Francisco by 11 p.m., and Carnes spent the night in the Haight-Ashbury apartment of two law students.

One Muffin

"I left with nothing to eat but one blueberry muffin—which I borrowed.' '

Outside San Francisco the hitching was easy, he said.

"It was always hippies that picked me up. They're great people, I tell you. Just outside 'Frisco I joined up with one who was hitching too and we were companions all the way to Eureka."

Near Eureka, he said, came the only real scare on the whole trip.

"There was me and six hippies standing on this traffic island hitching—the drivers thought we were a real sideshow.

"We were getting hassled by greasers—punks in daddy's car who would race by swearing and spitting on us.

On to Seattle

"But just when things were getting really nasty and we were all cold and hungry, three university girls rescued us. They took all of us to their residence and found us places to crash for the night in their dorms.

On the highway again he made a sign that said Seattle and waved it at any car with Washington licence plates. It earned him a ride to Bellingham with a young Indian couple.

"They were great," he said. "They bought me cokes all the way there, and when we got there when I asked the guy if I could sleep at his place he said sure.

"But they took me to a tavern first, bought me two pitchers of beer, then took me for a midnight tour of the Indian reservation.

"By the time I got to their place I was so hungry I could have eaten one of them—then at three in the morning the girl makes me a big meal."

Dime Blown

Next ride took him to UBC where he blew his dime phoning an aunt who fed him and let him earn a $2 ferry fare by washing her car.

He spent the night in Vancouver with three girls he knew and set out hitching for Victoria in a freezing rain storm the next morning.

"I was standing in the driving sleet thumbing without any luck when this little guy walks by," he said. "He stares, I stare back and he walks off."

"Half an hour later I'm still standing there and he walks by again. By this time I'm soaked. He walks up to me and says in broken English: 'You take bus. You wait over there, but stop soon.' Hands me a dollar bill and walks off.

"Just then I got a ride, but I put his dollar to good use on three 25-cent hamburgers before hitching out to the ferry."

On the ferry he asked a man for a ride into Victoria, and got one almost to his doorstep.

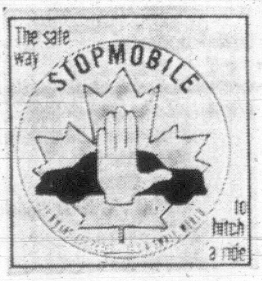
Father's Opinion

"Soderberg and Glassford were already home by that time and they were surprised to see me with the $20. Everybody thought it was a great joke but my father. He just kept saying: 'You're a crazy idiot'."

Carnes, who claims he has the oldest registration number for a second-year student at Uvic, has made trips before.

One spectacular six-month extravaganza took him through New Zealand, Australia, the Philippines, Hong Kong and Japan with a couple of friends.

"I took $350 for the trip and came back owing another $350 to my buddies. All in all that was a pretty good deal."



ASSURANCE FOR HITCH-HIKERS — This is Stopmobile's windshield sticker, issued to motorists who have been found acceptable to assure hitch-hikers that they can safely accept a ride. The organization, founded to make the art of hitch-hiking less risky for both motorists and thumbers, also issues membership cards to hikers. The motorist can ask to see it as an assurance that he will not be robbed or assaulted. (CP Photo)

WEEKEND'S TOP SHOWS

Tonight

MOVIE TO WATCH is angel in My Pocket, at 9, Channel 5. If you're an Andy Griffith fan, here's more of his homespun charm in a bit of corn about a new minister in a midwestern town. All the town's problems become Reverend Andy's personal responsibilities, and that's what the film is all about. You'll recognize many TV faces in the supporting cast including Jerry Van Dyke, Kay Medford and Edgar Buchanan.

LAWRENCE WELK, at 8:30, Channel 4, has a heaping dish of sweets for Valentine's Day. My Funny Valentine, My Foolish Heart, Dear Heart, Let Me Call You Sweetheart, Where Is Your Heart? and Lover are among the topical numbers.

ANDY WILLIAMS' SHOW, 7:30, Channel 5: In honor of Valentine's Day, Andy's wife Claudine Longet appears to sing "Love," and join her husband and guest Andy Griffith for a number of skits. The two Andys play a version of "Hamlet" for a smalltown variety show; Griffith is seen as a medicine man; Williams solos to "Funny Valentine"; and the Osmond Brothers tackle a few Beatles' hit.

JIMMY DURANTE PRESENTS THE LENNON SISTERS, 9:30, Channel 4: Jimmy and the Lennon Sisters move into the spot of the departed Hollywood Palace tonight, with guests Jack Benny and Sammy Davis Jr. on hand for the event. Jimmy opens the show with a football skit in which he plays coach, talking to players Benny and Davis. Other acts include Sammy's song and dance to "Spinning Wheel"; tunes like "Will You Be My Valentine?" from the Lennon Sisters; a surprise birthday party for Jack at Jimmy's house; and a salute to Benny's birthplace, Waukegan, Illinois.

MANNIX, 10, Channel 7: Tough, private eye hour. For starters, Mannix survives pot shots from right and left, and he can't figure out why because his only real suspect is dead. Without any real leads, Mannix works through the suspect's girl to check out the man's background, and soon has his hands full. The plot has enough twists to hold your interest and the pace is adequate too.

Sunday

MOVIE TO WATCH is Dead Heat on a Merry-Go Round, at 9, Channel 4. Entertaining from start to finish, thanks to James Coburn's flip, charming performance as one of the great con artists of all time. After he manages to win a parole from prison, Coburn sets up an ingenious bank heist, marries a gorgeous girl, impersonates about half-a-dozen characters, robs some wealthy dames, pulls off the bank job and, of course, gets away with it all. In addition to Coburn, writer-director Bernard Girard deserves a nod.

SPECIAL. 6:30, Channel 5. "Uncle Sam Magoo." A patriotic animated history lesson awash with rousing songs like "Battle Hymn of the Republic," is presided over by grand old near-sighted Mr. Magoo, playing Uncle Sam. As Sam, Magoo is on hand for such big moments as Columbus' landing, Betsy Ross creating the flag, the discovery of gold out west, Paul Revere's ride, etc. Every few minutes, Sam Magoo and the cast break into son — stirring ones like "Dixie," "Yankee Doodle Dandy," and "When Johnny Comes Marching Home." For the finale, Mr. Magoo reads quotes by noted Americans on war, peace and the nation's capacity for greatness.

SPECIAL. 7:30, Channel 7. "He's Your Dog, Charlie Brown." (Repeat.) One of the best of the "Peanuts" cartoon shows. Charles Schulz does one for the readers here—a show about Snoopy the beagle. TV is perfect for Snoopy because animation catches his happy dances and makes those flying battles on his doghouse more fun. After irritating all the kids, Snoopy is sent back to The Daisy Hill Puppy Farm for a refresher course on manners. Only the dog never gets there, living it up instead at Peppermint Pattie's house. Snoopy, kicking tin cans, fighting and kissing Lucy and reuniting with Charlie is a real winner and a TV star.

WALT DISNEY. 6:00, Channel 2; 7:30, Channel 5. "Big Red." This two-parter about a boy and a dog, filmed in Quebec Province, has a lovely Irish setter for a hero. The dog and the Canadian scenery pay off handsomely in this conventional tale about a rich sportsman (Walter Pidgeon) who hires a 14-year-old orphan to exercise his champion dog. When the two become too close for the old man's tastes, he breaks up the combination like a proper villain, and kids will boo him roundly. Good family fare.

ED SULLIVAN. 8:00, Channel 2, 6, 7, 12. A variety of singing styles are featured tonight as Michele Lee comes on for a medley of popular songs; The Supremes with Diana Ross' replacement, Jean Terrell; Michael Parks, star of "Then Came Bronson," singing tunes from his record album; and prizefighter Joe Frazier, on the eve of his world heavyweight championship fight with Jimmy Ellis at Madison Square Garden, offers a vocal solo. In other spots, Robert Klein and Arte Johnson change the pace of the hour with their comedy monologues.

MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE. 10:00. Channels, 7 and 12. Agents return to the Middle East, trying to put a damper on the hot spot. Tonight, Phelps and crew work through terrorists, offering dynamite for a prison blast to free their leader. It's a complex situation, with sinister, suspicious Arabs lurking about, but as slick melodrama, it's good fun.

THE BOLD ONES. 10:00, Channel 5. "The Shattered Image." Excellent episode. For a change, this one is practically all Burl Ives, and aided by an acceptable script and good support, he proves to be more than up to the task. After defending a man accused of murder in a small town, Walter (Ives) is accused of bribing a juror. It's obvious that a local leader (Will Geer), furious at the way the murder trial went, has framed Walt, but the case against him is a sound one. Walt defends himself, and it is to Burl Ives' credit that he manages to deliver the longest speech of the TV season so well, you're hardly aware of its length.

Smothers Duo Slated Monday Night

By CHARLES WITBECK

HOLLYWOOD — Tom Smothers has the feeling he is a TV cat who leads all those lives as he prepares for another comeback after being thrown off the air last spring by CBS.

Rival NBC (Channel 5) offers the premises Monday night for The Return of the Smothers Brothers at 10:00 p.m., testing the wind to see if the troublemaking brothers with guests Peter Fonda, David Frye, and walk-ons by Bob Hope and Pat Paulsen, still have the flair to attract the young while not alienating the solid, middle-aged customer.

It was always a puzzlement at CBS to see the quantities of white-haired patrons in studio audiences beam at the brothers, disregarding the often heavy-handed swipes at the Establishment. The boys can please both audiences, and the only question is whether network execs can keep their cool when dealing with the rebels.

★ ★ ★

After being out in the cold, Tom knows the value of network time, and he doesn't want to strike out again. Syndicating TV shows is not the answer either, as he found out. A big rating would put the boys in business and could lead to a weekly stand, or a series of maybe eight specials a season a la Bob Hope, an ideal setup in Tom's mind. Already there is mention of a half-hour series, a tendered carrot calculated to excite the boys into trying hard to be good Monday.

★ ★ ★

While brother Dick concentrates on his racing cars, Tom has been reading people like Allan Watts in the past months in between guest spots on NBC's Andy Williams Show, Laugh-In and The Rowan and Martin Special. Mulling over the nation's problems Tom began thinking about what unites Americans, and he decided it would be fun to "kinda remind people about our heritage." He couldn't get into trouble with this theme.

Smothers dipped into Mark Twain for thoughts on "my kind of loyalty," Thomas Jefferson, Ben Franklin and John Adams. And he turned writers David Steinberg and Bob Einstein loose on the idea of walking through a museum depicting the history of America. Portraits of the great could turn into living pieces. Tom had done that successfully a few years ago emerging as Blueboy.

★ ★ ★

"We can even read the Declaration of Independence," Tom said in an office interview. "That sounds like a radical paper. I'll be the guy who attacks and my brother Dick can tell me to shut up."

The script hadn't been completed at interview time, but Tom divulged the fact his history stroll would extend up to the present and take in President Johnson's departure, along with other prominent leave-taking comments including his own.

With this last chance up at network bat, Tom soft-pedalled the brothers satirical image: "Dick and I started out in clubs as attitude performers. We could go on for hours, but nobody grew excited about our material because on paper it didn't hold up.

★ ★ ★

"Then we got into television and began throwing a few barbs, and we were labelled satirists. We were not that good at it. Satire takes time and we had to come upwith stuff every week, so much of it was pretty heavy-handed.

"It's really all in the framework," Tom continued. "If we were in the music business we'd be labelled conservative, but on staid TV we seemed very radical."

As for the current state of the medium, the exile believe the atmosphere of fear is even more prevalent than a year ago at firing time. And the laughs at Carol Burnett's plea for peace being snipped out by his alma mater for a later hour telecast.

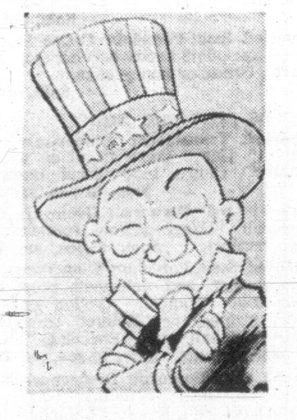
★ ★ ★

"Those old men are scared," he says. "They don't know where it's at."

Tommy has his own problems. He and brother Dick last performed before a club audience over a year ago, and most of his TV time was spent reading cue cards and overseeing on the Sunday night series, so his craft has lost its edge, and he says, "I don't know if I can drag it up. I was working with Goldie Hawn on 'Laugh-In,' those little bits, you know, and I found I couldn't turn it on and off that quick. Goldie was great. With Andy Williams we learned material with scripts and that came off better. I could get into it.

"But Dick is the one I relate to. I can't get this blank look without him. And now I got those wrinkles around the eyes. I tell you time is going by awful fast. That's why I feel like the cat."

THE BROTHERS . . . Dick and Tom



Magoo to Star In TV Special

HOLLYWOOD — Jim Backus has been doing the voice of Mr. Magoo for 20 years now, a span covering approximately three generations in which the near-sighted old grump's popularity ebbs and flows, touching all bases with kids, grannies, the brown shoe crowd, intellectuals and collegiates.

Magoo is used to warm up TV preview audiences during tests of new programs, and his delightful old theatrical shorts still run with good pictures, an unexpected treat receiving top billing on a Los Angeles movie marquee that read, "Mr. Magoo," also "Dr. Zhivago." The Magoo phenomenon is such that authorities inform Jim his is "The second most popular voice in the world."

"Who is first?" Backus wants to know. Nobody tells him.

After a seven-year drought, Backus returns to TV with an hour special Sunday on Channel 5 at 6:30 p.m., "Uncle Sam Magoo," an animated cartoon trip through American history as the "dirty old man" hobnobs with Christopher Columbus, flies a kite with Ben Franklin, rides a riverboat with Mark Twain, and is present for the Gold Rush and three discoveries of America.

Billy Bunter Books Banned

IPSWICH, England (UPI) — Books about Billy Bunter, whose name has become a synonym for fatness, have been put among books about sex that can only be withdrawn from the children's public library here with special permission.

Librarian Dorothy White, 62, imposed the ban on the books because she said they encouraged schoolchildren to make fun of overweight fellow-pupils.

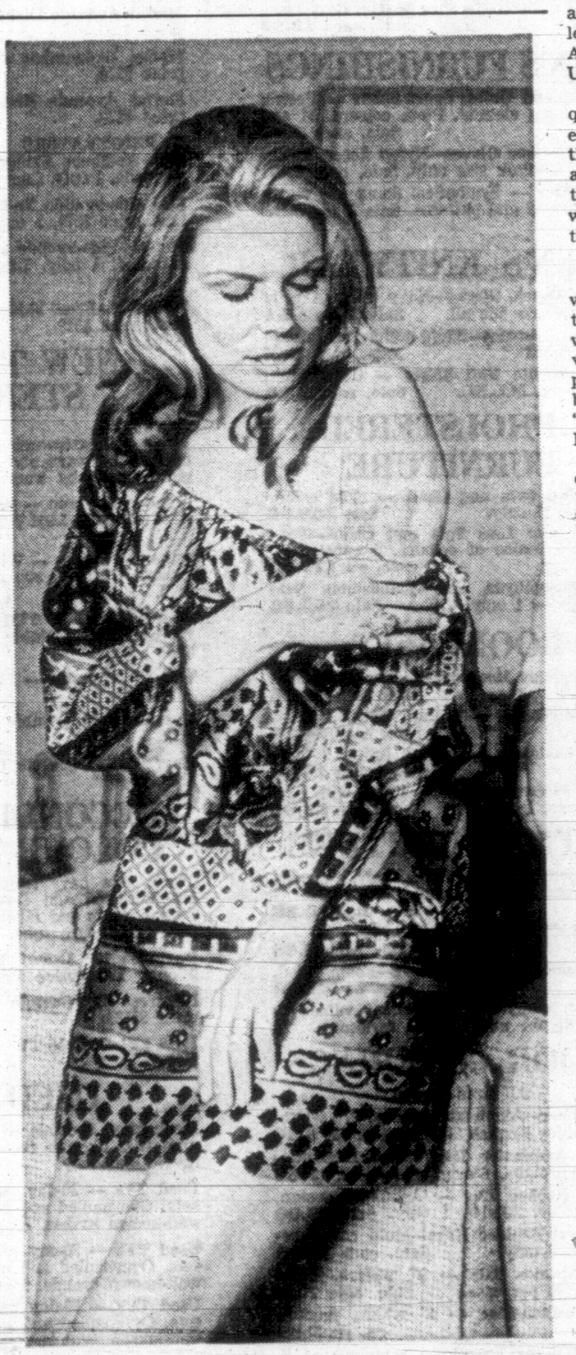
ANDY GRIFFITH RETURNS TO TV

NEW YORK — Andy Griffith is coming back to TV next season and CBS is just trying to figure out where to slot its new hit. A script has not been written, the series has not been completely cast but Andy is ready to begin the old grind as soon as his writer-producer Aaron Reuben finishes a script.

When Andy left his series while it was still riding high on the CBS rural programming crest, it was to embark on a movie career and TV was going to be a spot for a few guest shots or maybe an occasional special.

"It didn't work out," admitted Andy. "I guess I wasn't the boxoffice success Universal expected and I soon realized they wanted me to play the TV character except in feature length. The picture I made, Angel in My Pocket (tonight at 9 on Channel 5) I am not ashamed of. But it wasn't a smash and the movie business being what it is today we were both happy to call off our deal."



BRUISED BEAUTY is a key witness in a case on The Bold Ones, Sunday at 10 on Channel 5. Karen Houston (above) stars, as Burl Ives defends her husband.

Black Star Helps Industry Recruit

HOLLYWOOD — Every Sunday night on Mission: Impossible, undercover man Barney drills through walls, scuttles down elevator shafts or fingers delicate safes as TV's Willie Sutton, a good guy who could make a fortune if he ever crossed the street and joined the underworld.

The character of Barney is so handy with his fingers, writers had the man piece together a helicopter out of a huge packing case for a last minute escape, and fans accepted the ridiculous happening.

They've been brain-washed. Barney, with a drill, is simply Superman, the symbol of American know-how, and his image is being used by industry for another kind of door-opening.

★ ★ ★

Not long ago, Morris and Bobby Sherman of "Here Come The Brides," were back in Buffalo, N.Y., helping out on a telethon. While resting in a hospitality suite, Morris was approached by a Xerox spokesman with an invitation to come around and talk to executives about a business proposal. Now that actors are becoming senators and governors, why couldn't one do a little recruiting for big business? Xerox wanted Morris to tour black colleges in the South and talk to potential employees, find out their problems and report back.

Greg Morris the actor would be an icebreaker. He agreed after making sure the company was honest about job opportunities rather than mere tokenism, and went with a secretary, visiting two colleges to start with, Alabama A and M, and Tennessee State University.

The actor listened mostly to questions on job promotions, educational classes, opportunities for black administrators and executives. The recruiting talk had a nice ring to it, but were chances for rising up in the hierarchy real?

★ ★ ★

Morris had a ball talking with students, and he more than paid his way correcting white recruiters at job interviews who might use the polite, nice guy Junior Chamber of Commerce approach of "tell me about your life at home."

"Don't patronize, don't condescend," the actor reported. "Get down to facts. This is probably the first time a black man sits down with a white interviewer, and he doesn't want to talk about his home life. He needs to know his chances for a job, and its requirements. Basically, it boils down to 'Hey man, somebody cares.'"

The choice of Morris as an icebreaker is a beauty. Judging from the show, executives had no real line on Greg's outgoing ways. He is serious, stiff, correct, neat and the epitome of efficiency on the screen, but off, a different man with firm opinions and an ability to jazz up studio workers. The guy can talk a mile a minute, and he doesn't mince words.

★ ★ ★

Asked about white backlash, for instance, he fired back. "Bull. To say I believed in helping the black man 10 years ago, but not now is another cop out. If you believed back there you haven't changed.

"The black man is a blight on the white man's conscience," Greg continued. "And the same problem exists with the American Indian. The white man knows what he took away."

As Barney the driller, Greg has become a hero to his race, and he explains this simply with "the black map gets a special kind of tingle when he sees a black face on a TV commercial. Because of 'Mission' some will listen to me. At this point I'm just trying to get people to think."

FIRST SHIPMENT of B.C. art to San Francisco's B.C. House got off this week as a promotion of Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria. Tom Sherwood and Donna Denike of CAC were on hand when Colin Graham, right, packed Winter Landscape by Richard Ciccimarra, top, and Victoria Harbor by Brian Travers-Smith.

St. Jean Boasts This Secret Recipe; It Puts Succulence Into Suckleyi

By DON VIPOND

Armand St. Jean of Nanaimo has spent four years trying to win the lowly dogfish a place on the dinner table. He says he's made it.

St. Jean, 57, operates a custom cannery. He said Friday that all his profits recently have been plowed into developing his unique preparation for the populous little sand shark roundly cursed by fishermen.

●

Just what he does to the dogfish to make it tasty he isn't saying. That's a trade secret he hopes he can patent.

But Tuesday, unbelievers and doubters will have a chance to try Kahada when St. Jean holds a sort of community taste-in from noon to 5 p.m. at the Shoreline Hotel.

Kahada? That's Haida for dogfish. Let's face it, the common name hardly tends to start one drooling.

The Shoreline outing will feature 3,000 Kahada cutlets and an earlier government-sponsored taste test suggests some people are in for a pleasant surprise.

The federal fisheries department is understandably interested in seeing a neglected species become a commercial asset. It gathered 77 people together to compare unmarked samples of Kahada and lingcod when both had been deep-fried in batter, like the fish in fish and chips.

Almost half the test panel preferred Kahada and five of six said they would serve either to their families.

●

The department concludes that Kahada (it rhymes with Canada) should be able to compete successfully with lingcod in the fish and chips market at least.

Dogfish is the only fish in the world which has to be "treated" in the manner he has devised, St. Jean said Friday. One of the problems is it spoils quickly.

He says he mastered the secret to canning it three years ago and now could deliver it prepared and fresh-frozen anywhere in the world.

But he won't until he has done what he can to legally protect his processing technique.

St. Jean has just returned from a three-week visit to Japan. He took Kahada samples along and says "they want it."

In it's report the fisheries department notes the Pacific dogfish (Squalus suckleyi, if you don't care for the choice of names offered so far) has never been utilized to any extent for human consumption.

"In the past it was caught mostly for its liver which has a high content of vitamin A. After the development of synthetic vitamin A this fishery has declined on this coast from the third in importance during World War Two to a present level, where occasionally it is used for reduction into oil, meal and fish fertilizer."

●

Curtailment of commercial fishing and the fact dogfish have few, if any, natural enemies have permitted their numbers to increase significantly, says the report.

"We have 'em by the millions," says St. Jean.

SKULL FRACTURED

Redel Undergoes Surgery

Walter Redel, the B.C. lands official beaten up by Quebec City police two weeks ago, was in the operating room at Royal Jubilee Hospital at noon today.

He was undergoing surgery involving a cracked bone above the left eye, one of the injuries he suffered when jumped by two plainclothes detectives searching for a bank burgler.

A hospital spokesman would only say Redel's condition is "satisfactory."

Mrs. Redel said today her husband's stay in hospital is expected to be for five to 10 days.

The brow injury had not healed and was beginning to effect his eyelid, she said.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson dispatched a telegram to the Quebec government Friday asking why there had been no reply to his earlier letter requesting full details of an investigation into the incident Feb. 1.

Redel was a B.C. delegate to a conference in Quebec City and was on a Sunday morning stroll in the Lower Town when accosted by the two French-speaking officers, who he described as looking like a couple of thugs.

After being taken to a police station, he was left naked for three hours in a cell before being patched up by a doctor, grilled by four or five men and then released.

Peterson said Friday he has not received any reply to a letter written Feb. 4 to Quebec Justice Minister Remi Paul.

The British Columbia government wants "compensation for the extensive injuries suffered" by Redel, said Peterson.

In his telegram he asked for "a very early reply."

Art Will Put Lie To Outback Image

By AUDREY JOHNSON

For all a visitor to British Columbia House in London or San Francisco could tell, this coastal province of Canada could appear to be a real "outback," producing lumber, salmon and totem poles and little else.

There has been almost no clue to the fact that the province is also well populated with artists, writers and musicians.

But this is about to be changed, thanks initially to the interest of Victorian Mrs. W. G. Ellis.

SPACE AVAILABLE

Mrs. Ellis was appalled when on a visit to London, she realized there was no indication at B.C. House of the interest British Columbians have in the arts.

She passed on her concern to the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria and as a result a shipment was sent this week to San Francisco.

The CAC was advised by S. C. Turbis, Assistant Industry and Trade Commissioner, that B.C. House in San Francisco had wall space and window display area available and would be delighted to have paintings representing British Columbia.

VICTORIA ARTIST

CAC inquiries brought replies from Tony Emery of Vancouver Art Gallery and Colin Graham of Victoria, that both galleries had paintings by B.C. artists in their permenant collections that could be sent on a rotating basis.

Paintings shipped from Victoria Art Gallery this week were by Richard Ciccimarra and Brian Travers-Smith.

A letter was also received from Rear Admiral M. G. Stirling, Agent-General of B.C. in London, welcoming the possibility of displays of art and artifacts from this province.

The building has display windows on Regent Street as well as space inside.

However, there will be a delay in shipping the first items to London until renovations being made to B.C. House are completed.

Government backing includes paying the shipping charges.

It is anticipated subsequent shipments will include, in addition to paintings, items of sculpture and pottery and possibly book jackets, representing the work of B.C. authors.

Mammoth Babysitting Operation Is Really Creative Get-Together

By BOB MITCHELL

Each weekday morning, several hundred pre-school children are delivered to somebody else's house. They probably spend upwards of half their waking hours under the care of a substitute mother.

Another 60 or 70 kids are dropped off each day at centres at the Metropolitan and Centennial United Churches, to be picked up later in the afternoon.

What sounds like a mammoth babysitting operation is really much more. It's a day-care service operated by the Family and Children's Service.

★ ★ ★

Director Jane Gurr estimated during the last nine months between 400 and 500 children have been given day-care.

She believes one of the greatest needs of pre-schoolers is the socializing experience: getting to know other youngsters of the same age group, learning how to get along, to trust and to do without Mother.

'We come down heavily on the freely creative experience for children. By the time they get to Grade One they have more inner strength, they've learned how to cope with certain social situations."

★ ★ ★

There are several common misconceptions about what day care is and who it's for, Mrs. Gurr said. The most common of which is that it is babysitting service for uncaring parents or for poverty-stricken families with only one parent.

Certainly many of the children come from poor families, from one-parent families or from families where there is considerable emotional stress. But some are sent because their parents believe they should mix with other children and get used to being away from home.

★ ★ ★

The service also helps youngsters who, because of behavioral or physical handicaps have been unable to adjust to kindergarten or Grade One, and children of immigrant families who are just learning to speak English.

Parents, especially mothers, who were formerly tied to their homes are able to go to work, study or take employment-upgrading courses.

Staffs of six work with the children at the two church centres.

In their homes, day-care mothers are usually young women who prefer not to work outside their own house. They are also women who are genuinely fond of children and have the time and energy to devote to their needs.

A day-care home is licensed for a maximum of five children, ranging in age from three months up to about six years.

Ideally, said Mrs. Gurr, the homes should be located within the city on major traffic routes. But there are a few in outlying areas.

★ ★ ★

It's apparently a form of work many women like. A recent advertisement asking for applicants to start a new home in Esquimalt resulted in the Family and Children Service switchboard being swamped with calls.

The service is financed by a provincial government subsidy and by fees of parents who use it. Fees are on a sliding scale, based on ability to pay.

"Nobody is ruled out because of inability to pay," said Mrs. Gurr.

★ ★ ★

Some working mothers keep their youngsters in day-care on a part-time basis after the child begins school. Every day after classes the child goes to a neighbourhood home, thus relieving the mother of worry about what her youngster is doing.

The director said if there wasn't a day-care service parents would have to find sitters for their children, and she feels this could be harmful: "A child could have a different sitter every month, and that's dynamite for a kid."

Medical Head Retracts But Doesn't Retreat

Dr. Peter Banks, president of the medical staff at St. Joseph's Hospital, Friday retracted and apologized for a slashing attack on local politicians he made Thursday.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis asked for the retraction and apology during a two-hour discussion of the hospital's site feasibility study yesterday afternoon.

"I'll withdraw every remark I ever made about politicians," Banks said, "if that withdrawal can be coupled in some way with the foundations to get a hospital built."

But if Banks was retracting he wasn't retreating.

"If the politicians go on playing politics with people's lives by delaying hospital construction, then the souls of the people who pay with their lives will haunt them off the hustings," he said.

Banks admitted that he sometimes became emotional when talking about hospital beds.

"But doctors are impatient and emotional people," he said. "They deal each day with life and death.

"They can see Mrs. so-and-so with cancer of the breast and they can't get her into hospital. And they come to me and ask me what the politicians are doing. They say you are sitting around tables doing nothing.

"When I represent them, as I do here today, I speak a little too emotionally perhaps."

At a press conference Thursday night Banks said the medical profession was fed up with politicians who "sit on their arses" year after year doing nothing.

At the conclusion of the two-hour battle between St. Joseph's Hospital, regional district and architectural consultants, Banks said: "Now we've got it all out in the open and the reporter who got it out is to be congratulated. He was doing his job to ferret these things out.

"But it's out now and we've all had our say.

"Now let's stop bickering and get on and make a decision."

Curtis smilingly noted "Dr. Banks' conciliatory attitude today is encouraging."

Haddock Seeks Word On Health Linkup

Mayor Courtney Haddock said today he plans to contact Health Minister Ralph Loffmark to find out how long the minister needs to work out details of regionalization of health services.

Then, probably early next week, Haddock will ask city council to postpone its Feb. 23 deadline for withdrawal from the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health long enough for the provincial government's regionalization scheme to be readied.

Loffmark announced Friday the cabinet had approved a new cost-sharing formula for regional health boards.

With nine days left before the city's threatened pullout from the Metropolitan Health Board, Haddock said today he anticipated no difficulty in convincing council members of the need to stay in for a little longer.

"I'd like to give the provincial government a chance to work out a formula," Haddock said.

"Those people are busy in the legislature right now—they'll need a little time to work on it."

He said he would ask aldermen to postpone withdrawal from the Metropolitan Board of Health "a month or six weeks."

He added that he intended to contact Loffmark's office to find out just how long it would take to work out administrative details of regionalization.

Ald. Tom Christie, who last month headed the council withdrawal move, said Friday he will support postponing the Feb. 23 deadline if Loffmark puts his promise of regionalization in writing.

GIVEN A COUPLE MORE winters like this last one, the blacktail deer population of Vancouver Island and the mainland coast will make up its losses. That qualified prediction comes from Dr. James Hatter, director of British Columbia Fish and Wildlife service.

"A winter like this is just what we hoped for," said biologist Hatter. "We're expecting to find good survival of fawns born last spring."

Nature has been kind to the deer that weathered through the energy-sapping deep snows of early 1969. As if to make up for a death-rate that ran as high as 75 per cent in some areas, the big-eared lightfeet have found good and easily accessible forage.

★

While we were talking, I asked Dr. Hatter whether the cougar that share those woods are in any danger of extinction. Not in British Columbia, he said, although persistent hunting has reduced cougar numbers considerably in the United States.

Vancouver Island's big cats, which now rate as game animals rather than as vermin for which a provincial bounty was once paid, have fared much better.

★

The Fish and Wildlife people look to a day when the cougar will be further protected by a closed season and a bag limit complete with tags of the sort required by deer-hunters.

Those who were around in the bounty years may find that thought a little hard to digest. But in a changing world with no natural assets to waste, it makes sense.

I HAVE NEVER FULLY understood the workings of inflation, and at times I'm by no means sure that those who are guiding our descent into a bureaucrat-ridden welfare state are any too clear on the subject, either.

But this I do know. Canada's federal government is also Canada's most reckless, witless spender. There was the squandering of $55 million on a hydrofoil — an interesting toy, but one that a presumably economizing government could have managed very well without. There was the fantastic refit for the poor old Bonaventure, the aircraft carrier that nobody wants.

And now comes Information Canada, to the tune of over $7 million from a national budget which is ambitious enough without the addition of this highly dubious item.

Information Canada, we're told, is being set up to coordinate all other government information programs.

★

In private industry where expenses must be justified, any such arrangement as this might be judged a redundant duplication of effort . . . kind of like putting two hands on a one-man operation.

I won't deny that a certain amount of wheat turns up in the bales of government information chaff. But not enough. I suggest, to warrant what impresses me as mere spending for spending's sake.

A HOUSE BY DAY IS A busy place, what with the furnace turning itself on and off, the refrigerator humming when the mood strikes it, and the dryer taking over where the washer leaves off.

★

Some of these noises may persist even when day is done. But we acquired an extra voice back around Christmas, and it kept up puzzled.

It was a clicking too loud for clock or watch. It seemed to come from anywhere and everywhere. We'd forget about it for a while, then hear it again, and try to rationalize it.

The best theory I could come up with was that some passing towboat's chesty engine thumpings had set a pane of glass vibrating. Win was more inclined to blame late-night traffic on the road. Several times, we tried to track down the source.

Then last night, the hollow tick-tock started again.

"Try moving your wristwatch," Win said.

I reached out, pushed the watch to the other side of my night table, and at once the eerie sound stopped.

It was the watch, right enough, but with an assist from another source. A creature of habit, I'd automatically shucked it off each night and set it handy against a lamp base. The outward curve of the base had functioned as an amplifier, and given us that mysterious hollow knocking.

Tonight I'll find another parking place for the watch, and we'll sleep better.

★

That's it, except to thank Hebrides-born Mrs. Arthur Beadle of 3890 Douglas street for solving another mystery. Armed with the Gaelic, Mrs. Beadle interpreted the salution on that illustrated envelope as "Slante Nhor!" which in turn means "Big Strength!" or more freely, "Good Health."

A worthy toast, even though I can't begin to pronounce it.

Women Winning Says Handbook

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It's increasingly a woman's world. The U.S. government says so.

The femininist movement, which contends it is not so, had no immediate reaction.

There were 31.4 million women workers by the end of 1969, accounting for 38.5 per cent of the nation's labor force. This was more than double the 18.1 per cent share of the work force women had at the turn of the century.

The women's bureau in the labor department attributed the rise in female employment to two main factors—women continue to outnumber men, and barriers to female employment continue to fall.

This picture of the rising importance of the distaff side of the labor market was presented in the 1969 handbook of women workers released by the bureau, which is celebrating its 50th anniversary.

About 1.6 million women were added to the labor force in 1969, compared with only 700,000 men. Male workers rose to an even 50 million by the end of the year.

The bureau predicted female workers would number 36 million by 1980.

The chief factor in the rise in female employment, it said, has been the tendency of women to live longer than men. Men outnumbered women by 1.3 million in 1900, but there now are 5 million more women than men of working age.

Other factors include labor-saving devices that have simplified housekeeping, rising aspirations for a higher standard of living, and increased job opportunities for women. The report also cited the 1964 Civil Rights Act, which prohibits sex discrimination in employment.

"Finally, an evolution in social attitudes and values encouraged women to develop their abilities and talents to the fullest in paid work," it added.

But the handbook said the majority of women continue to be homemakers, regardless of whether or not they work.

DEAR ABBY: I have read your column for many years, and must admit that both my husband and I have found it quite informative as well as amusing at times.

Our problem is that we have children growing up who can read, and your column is the first thing they go for in the newspaper.

Abby, I don't mean to be a crank, but I do wish you would answer some of those letters personally instead of putting them in the paper. I refer to letters from 70-year-old women who are still interested in sex, letters about men who go for men, and also situations involving girls who are pregnant and unmarried. (I'm sure you know what I mean.)

I am aware that your correspondents do not always sign their names and addresses, but surely you must receive plenty of other letters that are not quite so objectionable to fill your space. Will you give it some thought? One Mother's Opinion

DEAR ONE: Perhaps the best way to answer your letter is by printing another mother's opinion:

DEAR ABBY: You may not know it, but your column has helped us to raise our children. We're not the kind of parents who could take our children into a room, close the door and tell them the facts of life. Over the years just about everything we've wanted to discuss with our children has come up in your column. V.D., unwed mothers, child molesting, homosexuality and believe it or not, I was wonedring how to tell our 4-year-old that my parents were getting divorced when an answer in your column said it so much better than I ever could have. So, thanks a heap, Abby. Love ya'. J. & A. in Salem, Ore.

DEAR ABBY: We have been married 26 years and my wife is one of the finest persons alive, bar none. However, when we were married, I was a private in the army, making only $21 a month, and all I could afford to buy her was a dinky, cheap wedding band which I have been ashamed of all these years. Whenever I mention buying her a better one, she says it isn't proper, and she likes this one.

Proper or not, I am going to buy her another one. I can more than afford it now. What do you suggest? I will abide by your decision. Sitting Pretty.

DEAR SITTING: Lucky you. "A virtuous woman—her price is above rubies." (Proverbs 12:4). But for all her sentimentality, she shouldn't deny you the pleasure of adorning her. Suggest that she take her original wedding band to a reputable, creative jeweler and ask him to design a lovely new elaborate ring, using the "cheap, dinky" band as the central theme. If she still says no, buy her a lovely diamond ring to wear alongside it.

DEAR ABBY: In this cowboy region, there appears to be a mistaken belief that the only doctors are the medical men. Would you be so kind as to correct this erroneous idea? A Doctor (Not M. D.)

DEAR DOCTOR: F. S. Thomas said it best in 1887, and I quote:

"Degrees are taken to be used. The degree or title becomes a part of one's name, and should be used just as much, and serves just as much to identify a person as his Christian name. In writing to a stranger, it indicates your attainments, and is a better introduction to him than a whole letter of explanation."

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700,, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

'Gladstone' Tradition Intrigues Students Here From Idaho

Studying a "foreign" government has been an enlightening experience for a group of students from the College of Idaho at Caldwell, who have been in Victoria this week as part of a six-week winter session on government in Canada.

The six men and four women are accompanied by Dr. George Wolfe, professor of political science.

"We have watched two sittings of the House," Dr. Wolfe said, "and at first we were surprised to see members with their feet up on their desks. Now we hear that this is one of the traditions your people have adapted from the British system — I understand Gladstone put his feet up and went to sleep when Disraeli spoke, too.

"But at least the members were there, whereas in our state capitals and in Washington, many don't even bother to attend."

One student noted the wider variety of personalities in elected office, which he considered an advantage.

Since Monday the students have worked in small groups, each assigned to a different aspect of Canadian government. Some attended the law courts, others spent mornings in discussion with members of several government departments.

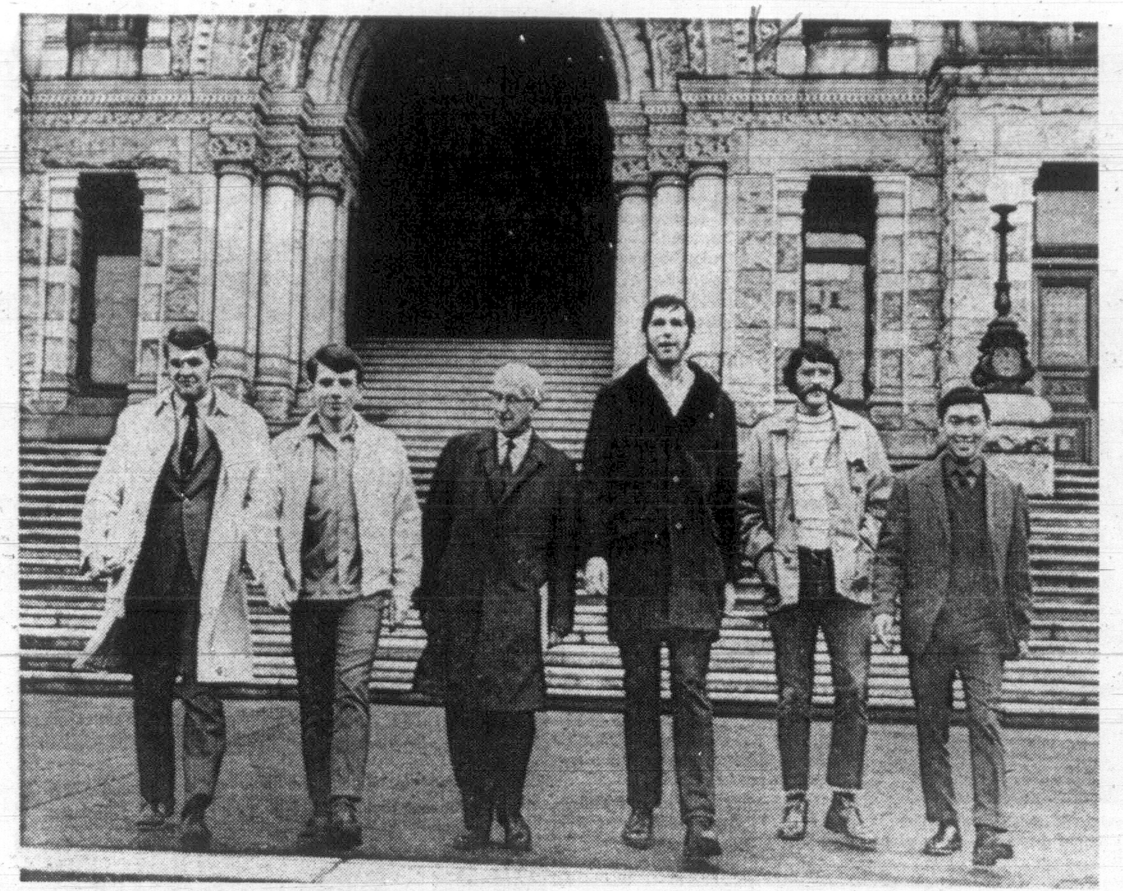
"We found everyone extremely helpful in answering our questions," Dr. Wolfe, said.

The entire group attended a meeting of city council one afternoon, and they hoped to meet Premier Bennett before leaving.

Each evening they had informal discussions with dinner speakers, including cabinet ministers, MLAs and professors.

The second and third year students are majoring in political science, economics or history.

They return to the U.S. today, and will be writing papers on the departments they have been studying, and on their impressions of the Canadian system.



The reason there are no girls in this picture is that they all went shopping. It was a free afternoon for the 10 students from Caldwell, Idaho, in Victoria to study Canadian government, so while most of the men attended a sitting of the legislature, the girls skipped class in favor of a shopping tour. In the group above, from left, are Rob Tribken, Fred Dinsmore, Dr. George Wolfe, Kent Pedersen, Bob Jarboe and Barry Fujishin. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Young People Aid Mothers' March

Returns from the Mothers March campaign in aid of the Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation reached $40,000 today, a 10 per cent increase over last year's $36,000.

Executive director Ray St. Denis attributes the increase to added impetus given by youth groups.

Among those who helped canvass the residential areas were members of the James Bay Athletic Association's junior football team, Job's Daughters Bethel No. 50; the Oak Bay United Young People's Group, the Oak Bay Junior High's Spade Club, the De Molay Signal Hill Chapter, St. Ann's Academy and First Douglas Boy Scouts Troop.

This year's target is $50,000.

"We're getting daily returns from the business canvass which began Feb. 3 and we're also hoping that people living in apartments will come through by sending donations to our office."

The address is 3943 D, Quadra.

Viewers Criticize Star's Hairdo

By JUDY KLEMESRED

NEW YORK — The woman in front of the television camera is usually famous, often glamorous, and almost always well-dressed. She should be. Dress designers court her to wear their clothes on camera, hoping for a credit at the end of the show. They also bestow upon her that hallowed honor to which so many women aspire — wholesale buying privileges.

Since her clothes are exposed along with her countenance, the TV woman often sets fashion trends. And she better look good. If she doesn't she'll hear about it from her fiercest critics: the viewers at home.

Barbara Walters, of N.B.C.'s "Today" show, is still getting complaint letters about the time she did a vacuum cleaner commercial while wearing a pair of wrinkled pantyhose.

On another show, she wore her hair pulled straight back from her forehead instead of falling loose around her ears. She got 250 letters from all over the country saying the style was "too severe."

Miss Walters, 35, wears mostly designer clothes that she buys retail at Bonwit Teller. She also borrows clothes that are returned to the designer after the show. Her favorite designer is Kasper of Joan Leslie, and he used to get a credit on her show when she wore his designs exclusively.

"Kasper is always after me to be fashionable," she said the other day in her apartment. "But I just don't feel like a fashion leader." "When your show is nationwide, you have to be a little conservative. I would never wear pants suits on the air, for example. I think the show has more dignity than that."

Like most TV women, she shies away from white clothes ("the color spills over on your face") and prints, polka dots and stripes, "because they bounce, and can be distracting to the eyes."

But her biggest on-camera problem "is where to hide the blankety-blank microphone." Concealing it under her dress often results in "peculiar growths," she said. So she usually just lets it hang around her neck.

Groovy, in a word, is the best way to describe the clothes Betsy Palmer wears on her "Girl Talk" show on A.B.C. She has worn pants suits, leather miniskirts with sweaters and boots on the show, and she is never without her solid gold peace medal, which says: "war is not healthy for children and other living things."

The slender, 43-year-old blonde has received fashion advice from her producer, who encourages her to dress in "a swinging way," and her eight-year-old daughter, Melissa, who recently told her that white gloves were "square."

The TV women who find it hardest to be fashionable are the news reporters who dash around town on story assignments. Pia Lindstrom of WCBS-TV said her major occupational hazards were ripped stockings ("from crawling under police barricades") and broken fingernails.

The 30-year-old Miss Lindstrom's habit of wearing pants suits to work was one of the reasons women employees at C.B.S. recently staged a "pants-in." They, too, wanted the pants privilege — even though most of them worked indoors all day.

"Another problem is hair blowing in your face while you're making a filmed news report," said Miss Lindstrom who is the daughter of actress Ingrid Bergman. Pia solved that problem by chopping off her long blond locks to shoulder length.

Chapter Installs New Members

Mrs. Roy Smillie was installed for her second term as president of the Navy League Chapter, IODE, at it's 57th annual meeting Friday in Eaton's board room.

Mrs. Smillie and the 1970 executive were installed by Municipal regent Mrs. V. H. V. Shepperd.

Other officers are Mrs. Roy Watson, first vice-regent; Mrs. W. F. Mawdsley, second vice-regent and membership; Mrs. Fred Webster, secretary, Mrs. F. J. Nobbs, treasurer; Mrs. M. W. B. Smith, education; Mrs. J. M. Crossan, Echoes; Mrs. C. E. Beirnes, services at home and abroad, and Mrs. T. H. English, publicity.

Councillors are Mrs. A. Stone Mrs. T. C. Davies and Mrs. E. Ward.

The chapter installed three new members to bring its total membership to 36. There were nine new members in 1969.

The members installed at the annual meeting are Mrs. J. D. Clark, formerly of the Roblin Assiniboine Chapter, Winnipeg; Mrs. F. V. Leonard; and Mrs. J. W. Ross, formerly of the Dr. Walter Murray Chapter, Saskatoon.

Treasurer Mrs. Nobbs reported that the chapter had total receipts of $754.25 and disbursements of $824.02 in 1969.

Mrs. Beirnes, chairman of services at home and abroad told the meeting that her committee had expenditures of $410.50. Funds were spent on clothing and bedding and donations were made to the Royal Jubilee Hospital cancer clinic and the Canadian Mental Health Services.

Among other services provided by the group were Christmas hampers and nursery bags.

Educational secretary Mrs. Smith reported that a $100 bursary was awarded to Petty Officer 1st Class Gerald Walker of Rainbow Sea Cadets. A $10 donation was made to the Central Juior Secondary School library.

Apple Slice, pictured above, is a versatile dessert that can be served plain, with ice cream or dressed for a party in whipped cream and a wedge of fresh apple. This is just one of many apple dessert recipes given below.

Tasty Apple Recipes Give Desserts Fresh Appeal

Fresh apples are tasty and apple pie is had to beat, but here are five recipes that give apples a new dessert appeal.

Apple Slice is a tasty square that goes well with coffee and can be dressed up with toppings to fit any occasion.

Dutch Apple Cake and Apple Crisp are best served hot from the oven.

Apple Butter and Apple Chutney are old-fashioned apple preserves.

APPLE SLICE

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
¾ cup sugar
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 to 4 medium-sized B.C. apples
¼ cup brown sugar
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
Granulated sugar

Sift flour, measure and sift together with baking powder and salt. Cream shortening; add sugar gradually, mixing until well blended. Add egg, beat well. Add vanilla. Add dry ingredients to creamed mixture. Blend together. (Mixture will be dry and crumbly.) Put half the cake mixture in an 8x8 inch cake pan, spread evenly and lightly pat down. Peel cooking apples and slice very thin. (A vegetable peeler will slice the apples more thinly than a knife). Place sliced apples over the cake mixture — there should be about a 1-inch layer of apple. Combine brown sugar and nutmeg, sprinkle over apples. Cover with remaining cake mixture, lightly pat down. Bake in 350 deg. F. oven for 40 minutes or until done. Remove from oven, sprinkle about 2 tablespoons granulated sugar over top of slice. When cool cut into squares.

DUTCH APPLE CAKE

¼ cup butter
½ cup sugar
1 egg, beaten
1½ cups sifted, all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
¾ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
3 cups peeled sliced apples
¼ cup brown sugar
2 tablespoons melted butter

Cream butter and sugar. Beat in egg. Sift dry ingredients and add alternatively with milk. Spread batter evenly in greased 8-inch square pan. Arrange apple slices in overlapping rows on top, pressing into batter slightly. Sprinkle with brown sugar and melted butter. Bake at 350 deg. F. until a skewer inserted comes out clean (40 to 50 minutes). Serve warm with cream. (Makes 6 servings.)

APPLE CRISP

6 cups sliced apples (about 2 pounds)
1 tablespoon lemon juice
⅓ cup sifted all-purpose flour
⅔ cup rolled oats
1 cup brown sugar
⅓ cup butter

Arrange apples in greased baking dish and sprinkle with lemon juice. Mix flour, oats and sugar. Cut in butter until mixture resembles coarse breadcrumbs. Sprinkle topping over apples. Bake at 375 deg. F. until apples are tender and topping lightly browned (35 to 40 minutes). (Makes 6 servings.)

FRESH APPLE BUTTER

6 pounds tart apples
3 cups water
Sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves

Cut apples into quarters. Do not core, peel or seed. Cover and cook in water until tender. Put apples and liquid through sieve or food mill. Measure apple pulp. For each cup of apple pulp, mix in ½ cup sugar. Mix in cinnamon and cloves. Cook and stir over medium heat until sugar dissolves. Cook, uncovered, over low heat stirring occasionally, until mixture is thick and smooth when a little is spooned into a cold plate. Pour into hot clean containers which have been rinsed with boiling water. Seal at once. (Makes about 2 quarts.)

APPLE CHUTNEY

5 cups peeled, cored, chopped apples
1 cup chopped green pepper
1 seeded lemon, chopped
1 small clove garlic, minced
½ cup chopped candied ginger
¼ cup slivered almonds
2 cups cider vinegar
1 pound brown sugar
2 teaspoons mustard seed
1½ teaspoons salt

Combine all ingredients in large saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until sugar dissolves. Simmer over low heat, stirring occasionally, until mixture thickens and mounds slightly when stirred with a spoon. Pour into hot jars (rinsed with boiling water). Seal at once. (Makes about 5 cups).

Panned Vegetables Retain Nutrients

Many of our favorite vegetables are nature's storehouses of minerals and vitamins. Careful cooking until "just tender" is essential to retain these nutrients as well as beauty of color, delicacy of flavor and crispness of texture.

The recommended method is stir-frying or panning in a fry pan with a tight fitting lid. It is an adaptation from the Chinese, who use great care and artistry in their vegetable cookery.

Panning is especially suited to young, tender vegetables which are high in moisture. Leafy vegetables such as chard or spinach are broken into pieces, and cabbage is shredded. Asparagus, string beans or celery are cut into thin diagonal pieces.

The prepared vegetables are placed in a fry pan containing melted butter, sprinkled with seasoning and tossed to coat with butter. They are covered with a tight fitting lid and heated quickly to form steam from the vegetable juices. Then the heat is reduced and cooking continues until the "just tender" stage.

It may be necessary to add a few tablespoons of water to prevent vegetables from sticking. They should be stirred frequently or shaken in the pan. The latter method is better because the steam will not be allowed to escape.

Vegetables cooked in this manner retain their natural color and nutrients because there is no liquid to discard. They are crisp-tender in texture and have a delicate buttery flavor.

For six servings place four tablespoons butter in a heated fry pan. Add the prepared vegetables and sprinkle with ¾ teaspoon salt. Reduce heat and cover tightly. Add two tablepsoons of water if vegetables lack moisture

The home economists of the Canada Department of Agriculture have been cooking many vegetables by this method and pass along the following timetable as a guide to serving this year's crop of Canadian-grown vegetables.

Vegetables supply us with minerals and vitamins necessary to health, but overcooking can destroy or remove them. The method of cooking described in the accompanying story minimizes this loss by cooking the vegetables as little as possible and without water. It's the next best thing to eating them raw.

VEGETABLES	Cooking Time in Minutes
Cabbage, shredded	8-10
Cauliflower, flowerets	15-20
Celery, sliced diagonally	10-12
Green or yellow beans, sliced diagonally or frenched	18-20
Green peppers, in 1-inch chunks or ½-inch strips	6
Broccoli, in serving size peices, stalks ¼-in. thick	18
Brussels sprouts	15-17
Spinach	2-3
Turnip, fingers or shredded	15-20

These vegetables are delicious served plain in their flavorful juices. However, if desired some lemon juice and chopped parsley may be sprinkled over them at serving time.

A very special panned combination of flavors is provided in this "Green Beans with Tomato, Onion and Green Pepper" recipe.

GREEN BEANS WITH TOMATO, ONION AND GREEN PEPPER

1 pound green beans
¼ cup butter
1 green pepper, medium
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon savory
1 large onion, sliced
3 small tomatoes, cut in eighths.

Trim, wash and cut beans in diagonal 1-inch slices. In melted butter, pan the beans, green pepper and savory in a covered fry pan for 10 minutes. Add the sliced onion and cook 4 minutes. Add the tomato and cook 1 minute. (Makes 6 servings.)

•

Stuffed Peppers Enhance Meal

Stuffed peppers make an attractive and different accompaniment for a casserole and if both require a 350 deg. F. oven, they can be baked together, saving preparation time.

To prepare peppers for stuffing cut them in half and remove the seeds and membranes. (The whole pepper won't hold as much filling and won't support it during cooking.) The cavity may be sprinkled with salt.

This same method and the same stuffings can be used for tomatoes as well. For tomatoes, just slice off the top, scoop out the pulp and drain.

BEEF STUFFING

Saute ¼ cup diced celery, ½ cup chopped onion in 1 tablespoon melted butter for about 5 minutes. Add ½ pound minced beef and brown. Remove from heat and add ½ cup soft stale breadcrumbs, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon tarragon, dash of pepper and ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. Fill 6 medium tomatoes or 3 medium-size green peppers with the beef mixture, Place stuffed vegetables in a greased casserole, cover and bake at 350 deg. F. until they are tender — about 40 minutes (for both the tomatoes and the peppers). (Makes 6 servings.)

CORN STUFFING

Mix 2 cups fresh or canned and drained kernel corn with ¾ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, ½ cup chopped onion. Fill 6 medium tomatoes or 3 medium-size green peppers with the mixture and top each with one teaspoon butter. Place the vegetables in a greased casserole, cover and bake at 350 deg. F. until tender, about 40 minutes. (Makes 6 servings.)

STUFFING AU GRATIN

Saute 1 cup each of chopped onion and celery in ¼ cup melted butter until onion is transparent, about 5 minutes. Add 1 cup sliced mushrooms and cook 2 to 3 minutes. Then add 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, ½ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Fill vegetables with the stuffing and place in greased baking dish. Bake the tomatoes at 350 deg. F., uncovered, until almost tender, about 30 minutes. Cover the green peppers and bake about 35 minutes. Sprinkle with ½ cup (2 ounces) grated cheddar cheese and bake both vegetables uncovered until cheese melts, about 5 minutes. (Makes 6 servings.)

MISS
FLORIDA

Secretary for a Day

Happy Vale[illegible]e's, Boss

A Canadian airline company recently offered a contest for secretaries that sent the winner to Florida for Valentine's Day. The prize trip will last four days in all and this raised one problem for the organizers:

"It isn't always easy for these girls to abandon their bosses," a spokesman said, "and in order to make the weekend possible, we had to find a suitable replacement."

The solution is a winner from the boss' point of view, too. The airline arranged for Miss Florida 1970 to come in to do the filing, dictation and typing.

"The boss may not be able to work at his normal rate of efficiency," said the spokesman," but he'll be the envy of everyone else in the company."

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

'God Is Dead' Cults Significant Phenomena

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Nearly four years ago, in April 1966, an issue of Time magazine asked on its front cover, "Is God Dead?" And in that issue there was a long article under the title, Toward a Hidden God.

The article dealt with the God-is-dead movement, a curious agitation of some theological academics in the U.S.A. which popular journalism had got hold of and magnified quite out of proportion. I had read quite extensively in the literature of the movement, and I had come to feel that it was mostly theological nonsense and that if we ignored it it would go away. Now my more carefully considered judgment is that it was mostly theological nonsense and that it does seem to have gone away.

* * *

But I do see now that ia was a significant religious and cultural phenomenon. The thinkers who seemed to be performing autopsies on God were in reality exposing, in an extravagantly dramatic way, some of the basic ills and failures of 20th-century Christianity.

We can take their tricky phrase, "the death of God," as pointing both to the death of their own faith and to the widespread trivialization of religion in our time, particularly in affluent North America.

That phrase can be taken seriously as a provocative way of saying that contemporary man is not inclined, by and large, to experience life in a religious way. Something of the thrust of the movement is indicated in this quip: "God is not dead—but we have carefully put him in a suburban rest home, where his children may visit him once a week."

* * *

A few weeks ago, on December, 26, 1969, Time asked another theological question on its front cover, "Is God Coming Back to Life?" The article inside has the title, "The New Ministry: Bringing God Back to Life." Much of this article is a discussion of the current ferment in the Church's professional leadership—and its general tone is one of cautious hopefulness.

I think that that question might have been better put in this way: "Is God coming back into life?" In other words, is there any significant evidence that contemporary man is more open now than he has been in recent years to experiencing life in a religious way?

* * *

I would answer that question "Yes"—but "Yes" said very cautiously. As a minister, a full-time professional in religion, I am, of course, inclined perhaps to see encouraging evidence more clearly than I see discouraging evidence. I do, however, suggest that the Church may now be entering one of the most creative periods of its whole history.

Dissatisfaction with its present condition, and intense longing for renewal and reformation, are in all parts of the Church generating new determination, new commitment, New enery. The recent Time article offers some pretty convincing evidence of that.

Unreality has infected much religious practice in our time. But a new sense of reality does seem to be emerging. It is firmly grounded in Christian tradition, but it refuses to let itself be hobbled by tradition. It is open and responsive to contemporary concerns and contemporary thought, but it does not unthinkingly capitulate to passing fads and fashions and prejudices.

* * *

Many people today are coming to see that Christianity is not simply an ongoing exercise in pious respectability, not simply a mild opiate for comfortable people—but that it has to do with things that really matter, with life's meanings and purposes, with relations among persons and groups and nations, with the compassion which is essential to the fully human existence.

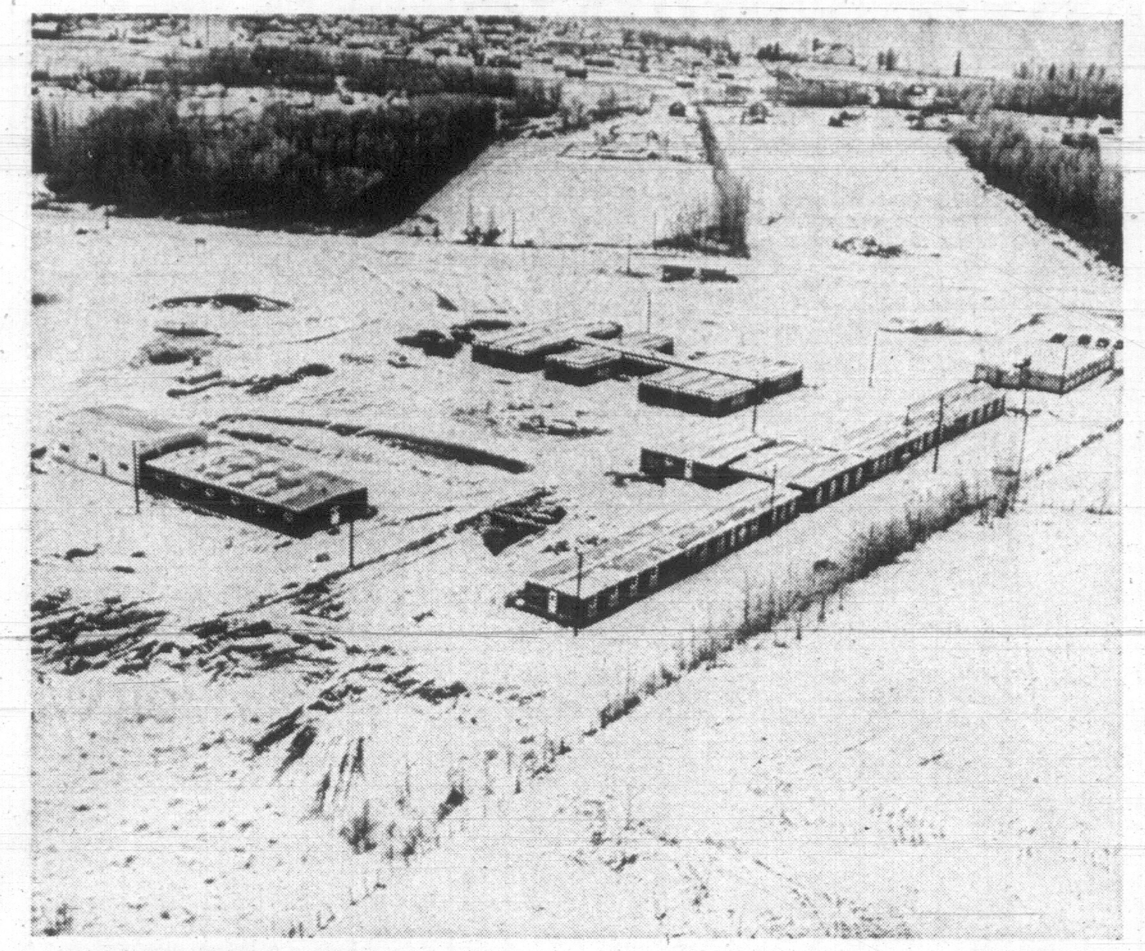
NewStart Embraces Family In Starting a New Life



NEWSTART HEADQUARTERS viewed from air shows offices and training centre for Indian and Metis adults at Lac la Biche, Alberta. As a result of the NewStart program, many native people are realizing the advantages of the white man's society. (CP Photo).

Indians, Metis Discover How to Meet Their Goals

By JIM NEAVES

LAC LA BICHE, Alta. (CP) — Using mobile facilities to move into northern Indian and Metis communities to provide adult education and trades training, a program called Alberta NewStart has whetted the native population's appetite to be where the action is.

Many underprivileged native people have come to realize through the NewStart program that more education is the key to a good job, a good life and a place in society.

They have seen the success achieved by the hard work of some of the program's early graduates.

Alberta NewStart basically is a federally-funded, privately incorporated company within the framework of the Canada NewStart program. It is aimed at reducing dependence on welfare and placing Indian and Metis people on a self-supporting basis.

The national program evolved from a federal-provincial conference in July, 1965, which approved a limited number of action-research projects.

Poverty Attacked

The Alberta program, directed by a five-man board of directors—one of whom is a native person—was designed to study the needs of residents in areas of slow economic growth, caused in part by their failure to adapt to the conditions of modern industrial society.

It was decided that the Alberta program would attack poverty through education.

"While the specified educational requirements may not always be necessary for adequate job performance, the significant fact is that educational attainment is so often a basic consideration in recruitment, employment and advancement," NewStart says.

While the Alberta program is basically tied to research, useful techniques have been developed to help qualify low-income people to help themselves.

Meeting more success than anticipated it includes these principles: Basic life skills and vocational skills development should be initiated in the environment familiar to each individual, preferably in his or her own community; the family should be considered the integral part and focus of the development programs; training should duplicate as closely as possible the conditions found in industry; learning and change should be a gradual process requiring a sequence of training leading to assimilation of necessary social and occupational skills.

Dropout Rate High

"It has been noted that where the male head of the family has had to leave home to enrol in vocational training courses the incidence of dropout was extremely high." NewStart says.

So the program was aimed at families in their own communities in a work-oriented environment with substantial emphasis on personal, social and community skills development in addition to education improvement.

Mobile training centres, in trailer units, were established early last year at Kikino, Fort Chipewyan, Janvier and Lac la Biche. The company's offices are at Lac la Biche, 100 miles north of Edmonton, and the training centre here was geared to accommodate young single adults before it was closed last December because of a federal reduction in the program's budget.

Entering the program, a family is "hired" by NewStart and training for the men is split between academic upgrading and basic trades instruction covering vocations such as welding, carpentry, plumbing and automobile mechanics.

The women are trained in home economics, personal grooming and raising a family in addition to taking academic subjects.

At the centres, all in remote areas, the aim is to raise academic

Travel to City

To enable the trainees to gain insight into the world of industry, commerce, learning institutions and life in larger communities, they are provided with orientation tours, mainly to Edmonton and Fort McMurray.

"Reports from trainees and staff indicated that such tours are of considerable value."

At Fort McMurray, NewStart owns 16 modern, furnished homes located within a four-block area. They are provided to the families that "graduate" from the mobile centres in the remote areas to the vocational training centre. Single students are housed in dormitories.

NewStart employs four women counsellors at Fort McMurray who are in constant communication with the trainees' families. The program has shown that counselling is a prime requirement for Indian and Metis people who move into predominantly white—and in many cases prejudiced—communities.

A job placement officer has been hired. Of Metis origin himself, he is receiving good response from prospective employers of course graduates.

Experience also has shown that counselling is needed after a native graduate is employed. It is intended that regular contact be maintained with the employers who are willing to provide help to NewStart to aid in future curriculum and program development.

But whatever the individual trainee's vocational needs, interests and talents may be, NewStart's over-all objective is to provide integrated instruction for his or her requirements for successful participation in both economic and social spheres in the Canadian way of life.

"This will embrace all the essentials from basic education and technology to personal grooming, health, home economics and management, budgeting, interpersonal relationships, the psychology of self-reliance and both social and personal responsibility," said Vincent Burk, NewStart's public and personnel relations director at Lac la Biche.

"In short, the learner should become as well as a successful earner, a happy and culturally fulfilled human being secure in the sense of quality and personal worth."

Most of the trainees come from welfare situations. It has been estimated that welfare costs are about seven times as much for Indian people compared with the rest of Canada's population.

At its inception the NewStart program involved 37 family groups at the Kikino, Janvier and Fort Chipewyan centres. Eleven of the families have moved to Fort McMurray and there now are 40 families in the initial program at the local community level.

Change Inevitable

Indicative of the growing interest is that there is a waiting list of 30 families at Fort Chipewyan, 375 miles north of Edmonton.

Many native people are accepting that change is inevitable in their historic, cultural way of life if they are to survive in a white man's world.

Culturally Indians believe they should co-operate with rather than outdo their fellow man, while white society has taught and stressed competition, particularly winning the race.

The NewStart program has shown native people they can retain much of their culture while at the same time accepting some of the white man's ways.

Matwine Lemaigre, 62, at Janvier, expressed his feelings through an interpreter:

"The NewStart program is resulting in improvements and I would have liked to see it here a long time ago because the people are getting to know something else," he said.

Chief David Janvier, 32, who has led the Janvier band during the last three years, is attending the mobile unit to raise his education to the Grade 6 level and is aiming at taking a heavy equipment operator's course. He and his wife, Yvonne, 27, who also is attending, have four children.

"I would like to see more of our people going into the program," he said.

Old Frame Girls' School Bowing to Apartments

The private school for girls modestly concealed behind a board fence at 1684 Fort St. is going to disappear forever.

The wooden buildings that have housed St. Margaret's for 62 years will be torn down later this year, and the land they occupied will be developed for apartment buildings.

The school itself will take on a new existence in buildings of concrete and glass now under construction on 30 acres of land near Blenkinsop Lake.

The $500,000 project, designed by the firm of Sager and Marshall, will ultimately have an enrolment of 300 students, 60 of them in residence.

COMPLETION DATE

The school has 225 students, 40 of them residential.

Principal Mrs. Lorna T. French said the two new buildings should be completed by the end of June. Students will move in at the beginning of the new term in September.

Construction of a new gymnasium will be delayed until the school's board of governors can finance it, she said, probably by selling part of the recently-acquired property.

Main feature of the new buildings will be improved and additional space for the school's educational activities.

There will be two science laboratories instead of the present one; the two-storey residence building will have a basement art studio with a kiln for baking ceramics; and a sound-proof music room.

The classroom-administration building (one floor only), was designed to keep corridor space to a minimum. Adjacent rooms will simply open into each other.

There will be no public address in the school, Mrs. French said.

"It's a sad state of affairs when we can't deliver a message with our own two legs. To me a PA system smacks too much of Big Brother."

Library books, now shelved in two separate rooms, will be stacked on mobile cases for use by classes in a new resource centre.

The principal believes students should have alternatives to regular fine arts and university-oriented courses. So the school offers courses in commerce, home economics and child care.

The St. Margaret's board of governors has already set an enrolment limit in order to preserve an atmosphere of closeness through small numbers.

ATMOSPHERE

"We all know one another," said Mrs. French. "That's why we don't want to go beyond 300."

She said in advising the architect on the disign of the residence, she wanted it to have the atmosphere of a "home away from home", and not merely be a showpiece for the money invested in it.

"I want it to be a place where kids can romp around and not have to take their shoes off."

Students have already requested that some of the old school furniture be used to complement modern lines of the new buildings.

Mrs. French said the school has been operating with minor financial losses in recent years. To keep the school out of the red the board of governors sold a piece of the Fort St. property.

SALARIES LOW

Day-time tuition ranges from $420 for grade one to $630 for grade 12 students. All resident students pay $1,800 a year.

The high cost (relatively speaking) of attending the school is in sharp contrast to the low salaries for those who teach there. Mrs. French said regardless of their qualifications the school's 13 teachers are paid about half of what teachers in public schools receive.

"I hope we never have to close," she said. "I've become very involved with the school and the kids here in the last few years."

'Hero' Fined For Deed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Although his lawyer said he should get a medal, William A. Branconnier of Winnipeg had to pay $15.50 in costs and was given a six-months suspended sentence Thursday when he pleaded guilty to wilful damage of a stamp machine.

Winnipeg magistrate John J. Enns was told that Mr. Branconnier put two quarters in a stamp machine in suburban Charleswood on Jan. 25.

The machine was out of order, and when no stamps were forthcoming, Mr. Branconnier lost his temper.

He went home for a hacksaw and then went to work on the machine.

One bolt connecting it to the wall was severed and another was partially gone when the RCMP arrived.

In entering the plea for a medal, defence lawyer Sam Minuk said:

"Everyone in the county has been beaten by one of these machines.

"If I weren't afraid of the consequences of the law, I would have done the same thing myself on occasion."

STAMP NEWS

Biological Program Theme of New Issue

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

Canada's participation in the International Biological Program will be recognized by a 6-cent stamp to be released Feb. 18 by the Canada Post Office.

"The biological basis of productivity and human welfare" is the theme of the five-year program which began on July 1, 1967. The following excerpt from an official announcement in part tells what is represented on this commemorative:

◆

"Probably the most important process which determines biological productivity is photosynthesis. This is the process which, directly or indirectly, provides all living systems with the necessary energy for growth and metabolism. In designing Canada's stamp, the artist has, therefore, symbolized the productivity theme of IBP by a microscopic view of the inside of a leaf, the familiar light-capturing organ where photosynthesis takes place. The thin section of leaf tissue which is depicted shows many cells containing tiny green bodies, called chloroplasts. The chloroplasts absorb light and convert a small percentage of it into sugar." In addition, leaf veins are evident in the design.

◆

This adhesive was designed by Israel Charney, ARC, of Montreal. The British American Bank Note Co., Ottawa, printed it in green, blue and light orange by one color steel engraving and two color photogravune. Also, it measures 40mm by 24mm.

Seven stamps were released by Israel Jan. 21. One marks the 20th anniversary of an event known as Operation Magic Carpet: the transplantation (by air) of about 45,000 Yemenite Jews from Yemen to Israel. The second honors the 50th anniversary of the defence of Tel Hai against Arabs, and it features a portrait of Joseph Trumpeldor (1880-1920), the noted soldier and Zionist who helped defend Tel Hal. The work done by the National Reserves Authority is commemorated by the remaining five adhesives, which portray five of Israel's natural assets.

A portrait of Vladimir Ilyich Lenin (d. 1924) is on a 50-franc stamp placed on sale Jan. 25 by the Federal Republic of Cameroon. It observes the 100th anniversary of his birth.

Papua and New Guinea released four multicolors Feb. 11 in their national heritage series. They prominently delineate the following: 5c, the Ambun Stone (prehistoric); 10c, a Masawa canoe of the Kula circuit; 25c, a 17th century map of New Guinea, made by Luis Vaez de Torres; and 30c, HMS Basilisk.

◆

Sometime this year, the United States will issue a 6-cent definitive, bearing, I believe, a portrait of Dwight D. Eisenhower (1890-1969).

Regional architecture is the theme of four multicolor pictorials issued by the United Kingdom Feb. 11. The denominations and types of architecture illustrated are: 5d, Fife harling; 9d, Cotswold limestone; 1s, Welsh stucco; and 1s 6d, Ulster thatch. Reproduced on each stamp top right hand corner is a silhouette portrait of H.M. Queen Elizabeth II. This set was photogravure printed by Harrison and Sons, Limited. David Gentleman designed the 5d and 9d stamps, and the 1s and 1s 6d were done by Sheila Robinson.

On Feb. 2, Trinidad and Tobago came out with 5c, 6c, 15c, 30c and 40c pictorials publicizing their annual carnival.

9 IN MEMORIAM

DOBELL—In loving memory of Doris who left us on February 14, 1969.
"Always remembered."
—Dobell Family.

DOBELL—In loving memory of our very dear friend, Doris Winnifred Dobell, who passed away February 14, 1969.

Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear;
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach;
Sweet to remember her who once was here,
And who, though absent is just as dear.

—Always remembered by Gordon, Gladys, Peggy and Nancy Beale.

JOHNSON—In loving memory of my dear husband, Fred who passed away Feb. 14, 1969.

The pearly gates were opened
A gentle voice said "Come."
And with farewells unspoken
He gently entered home.

—Lovingly remembered by wife Jean.

KITCH—In loving memory of my dear husband, Carl, who passed away Feb. 14, 1969.
—Lovingly remembered by his wife, Yvonne, and relatives.

ROBERTS—In loving memory of my dear husband, Jack, who passed away Feb. 14, 1962.

Eight years have passed since that sad day
When one I loved was called away,
God took him home, it was His will,
But in my heart, he liveth still.

—Ever remembered by his loving wife Flo.

ROCKETT—In loving memory of my dear husband, Fred, who passed away on Feb. 14, 1969.

To hear his voice, to see him smile,
To be together in the same old way, would be my greatest wish today.
Fond memories bring consolation.

—Sadly missed by Margaret and family.

Here are a couple of GMC Handi-Vans that must go. Both are long wheelbase models, with heavy-duty axles, springs and brakes. One is a 250 six, the other a 307 eight. The six has windows all around, the eight has them in rear and side doors, and both have three-speed automatics and six-ply truck tires.
We are prepared to make an attractive deal on these; why not come in and talk about it?

Arctic Stand Under Attack

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau's attitude on Arctic sovereignty was called "mealy-mouthed" Friday as the Commons opposition held up an oil and gas bill, saying its provisions throw ownership of the Arctic into doubt.

The bill would amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act of last June 27 to extend it not only to the Yukon and Northwest Territories but to lands offshore other Canadian coasts.

Bud Orange (L—Northwest Territories), parliamentary secretary to Resources Minister J. J. Greene, said 500,000,000 acres offshore now are under exploration permits.

Mr. Orange said the [illegible]ment will allow the federal government to set up pollution and other controls.

However, the bill failed to get second reading as Conservatives argued that it throws into question Arctic sovereignty by setting a 200-metre depth limit.

HARSH WORDS USED

It was Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin (Peace River) who used the term "mealy-mouthed' 'in assaulting the government.

The Conservatives battled for:

—A clear statement of sovereignty over the Arctic before debate continues on the bill.

—A clear statement on the state of federal-provincial negotiations on offshore oil rights.

A motion by Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) to have second reading delayed until a sovereignty statement is made was ruled out of order.

Gordon Aiken (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka) then moved that the bill get second reading in six months—a parliamentary way of killing it.

"Surely your sovereignty doesn't depend on how deep the water goes," Mr. Aiken said, unfurling a marine charts of Arctic waters.

GOVERNMENT REPLIES

Government House Leader Donald S. Macdonald said it was the opposition that was throwing doubt on Arctic sovereignty.

The government had never done this.

New Democrats opposed the Conservative position and said [illegible] important the bill be [illegible]d.

Pat Mahoney (L—Calgary South) said the oil industry anxiously awaits clarification of jurisdiction and regulation.

Mr. Mahoney said a revision of regulations is desirable but conservation of oil and gas resources mightn't be the best aim.

"The momentum of exploration and development must be maintained," Mr. Mahoney said. "Oil demand could very well slacken in 10 or 20 years. It has happened to other industries —coal is an example — and it could happen to petroleum.

"The automobile is a prime target in the campaign against pollution. With this impetus there is every likelihood of a breakthrough in automobile power source that will level off the demand for petroleum in the foreseeable future."

Leeds Still Leads, Ties Tottenham

LONDON (CP) — Peter Lorimer whipped in a shot from 25 yards today and earned Leeds United a point in a 1-1 draw at Tottenham that kept the defending champions at the top of the English League soccer standings.

Leeds was a goal down at half-time against a Tottenham team again without Jimmy Greaves.

Two minutes before half-time, Tottenham took the lead on a goal from a Leeds defender. Terry Cooper deflected a free kick from Dennis Bond into his own goal.

Everton, still chasing the title, was held to a 2-2 draw at home by Arsenal.

Waterfront Worker Dies Here

Funeral services were held in St. Barnabas Church Friday for Herbert W. Look, 1319 Bond, one of Victoria's well-known waterfront personalities.

He served 42 years with the Canadian Pacific Railway. He came to Victoria in 1940, working as a CPR policeman at the docks until he retired as sergeant in 1964.

Born in Somerset, England, Look lived in Revelstoke, Brandon and Winnipeg before coming to Victoria.

Many of his fellow-members of the CP Pensioners' Association were at today's service, which was followed by cremation.

Look is survived by his wife Eveline; his son, Robert of Coquitlam, and two sisters, Mrs. M. Patterson and Miss T. Look, both living in England.

'Indian's Pride Died With Riel'

HALIFAX (CP) — The day that Louis Riel died in 1885 was the day the Indians and Metis of Canada lost their pride, Senator J. Harper Prowse of Edmonton told the Canadian Club here this week.

The Liberal senator, whose great-grandfather was a P.E.I. senator and whose mother was a native of Halifax, spoke to the group on the theme Louis Riel —a judgment of history.

Since the rebellion of 1885, the Indian and Metis have been looked on as the bad people, lazy, shiftless, and savages, he said.

GUN MAKES SOUR NOTE

LIVERPOOL, England (UPI) — The Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra and the Huddersfield Choral Society are ending a 15-year association on a sour note.

The final straw for the choral society, which complained of "indifference" in the musicians, came during a recent performance of Handel's Messiah when singers noticed two members of the orchestra sitting back and chewing gum.

Plastic Totems For Museum

OTTAWA — Four reinforced plastic totem poles, copies of totem poles from the Skeena River area of British Columbia, have been set up at the National Museum of Man in Ottawa.

The totem poles were constructed after experiments with a latex moulding process proved successful last summer. The four moulds were subsequently returned to the museum and cast.

Three poles, from the Kitselas Village, are 10-foot-high interior columns used to support massive roof beams.

The fourth is a clan history pole from the Kitwanga village.

Vegetable Garden Plan Provides Best Return

By JACK BEASTALL

Jack

Planning the vegetable garden is something we read about but rarely put into practice. occasionally we make a half-hearted attempt to draw up a plan, depending on memory for past successes and failures, but memory proves most unreliable.

Since each garden requires a made-to-measure plan to suit existing conditions, no set plan will suit every garden.

The culture required by given vegetables will be the same in all gardens, therefore dictates to some extent the location the plants should occupy.

Onions are spoiled if water reaches their roots after the bulbs have reached full size and area ready for ripening. They must be sown, or the seedlings planted, well away from any crop needing copious watering in July and August.

On sloping ground always locate the onions at the highest point so that water applied to other crops will not flow downhill to the onions.

★ ★ ★

Lettuce does best in full sun during the cooler days of spring and fall, but will soon bolt to seed when exposed to 12 hours of sun on a summer day.

If lettuce is planted between maturing cabbage, in the raspberry bed or the north side of beans or peas, just enough shade will be present for luxurious growth during the hottest weeks.

Brassicas, the collective name for plants of the cabbage family, require a firmly packed soil for their roots of success is to be achieved. This condition can be obtained by setting out small plants in walks where the soil is firm. No loosening of the soil is necessary; just cut off the weeds with a hoe.

Make a hole just large enough with a trowel to take the roots, then firm the loosened soil closely around the stem with the end of the trowel handle.

Cabbages and their close relations do not like freshly manured soil, doing best where manure has been added for a crop the previous season. They also need a soil to which some hydrated lime has been added.

Cauliflower, although a close relative, is an exception, preferring a richer soil than cabbage, but still no recently applied manure, rather an area manured in spring for early crops.

Tips For Home Gardeners

Parsnips, leeks, the winter and spring cabbage, sprouts and kale remain in the soil all winter to be used as needed.

These should be located in a group rather than dotted here and there all over the vegetable plot, and the group should be close to a main path for accessibility in wet, blustery weather.

Turnips are not an unqualified success in local gardens. They need a fairly rich soil and fast growing conditions to prevent a woody texture and hot flavor.

It seems best to sow the small white Milan type turnip in late April or early May, using the roots in summer. In mid-July sow the pruple-top Laurentian type for use from the time the roots reach the size of tennis balls.

★ ★ ★

After carrots reach maturity the roots tend to split, also the longer they are in the ground the greater the losses to carrot rust-fly. Frequent small sowings are better for the home garden than one sowing to last a season.

Squash and similar vine crops can be accommodated in a small garden if trained to fences or trellises, the fruits supported in net bags if necessary.

Pole beans can be grown teepee fashion on a circle of poles securely tied together at the top. This method conserves space, lessens shadow on other crops, and forms a sturdy structure that withstands strong winds.

Corn is a wind pollinated crop, therefore is sown in a square block, never in a straight row.

The most important step in planning is to work out a schedule for sowing that will maintain a steady supply of fresh vegetables throughout the year, rather than too much for a few weeks and too little at other times.

★ ★ ★

The whole idea of a home vegetable garden is to supply the needs of the family it serves; it may be one cabbage, two lettuce, a pound of carrots or beets, and a couple of servings of beans in a week.

To have more than these quantities ready to harvest usually means wasted space, time and labor.

It is worth noting how the producers of canned vegetables stress the "garden fresh flavor" of their products, indicating garden fresh vegetables to be superior and desirable.

★ ★ ★

To obtain a steady supply sow just enough seed of the faster growing vegetables to give a two ro three week supply, and repeat the sowing every two weeks.

There is nothing to substantiate the all too common belief that vegetable seed must be sown in spring and at no other time of year. We can sow according to our needs from April to mid-July outdoors, and in coldframes, under cloches, or any protective structure for the rest of the year.

●

WEEK'S WORK

Abutilon seed (Flowering-maple) sown indoors now, and grown along in rich soil can be planted out for summer to grow and flower.

A sowing of hardy annuals now outdoors where they are to flower may be rewarding.

Those resenting root disturbance and most likely to succeed in cool weather are Shirley-poppy, mignonette Sweet-sultan and larkspur. Prepare the soil well, and firm moderately.

If fuchsias and geraniums in storage are showing growth, and you have a good indoor growing place ready for them, cut back all branches to about two inches. Repot, and keep in 55 to 60 deg. F. with a little water. New shooots on both can be taken as cuttings when two to three inches long.

A root of rhubarb can be covered with a box or barrel. Heap compost or manure around outside to add heat.

Sow in bed of covered coldrame, a few seed of early summer cabbage, red cabbage, early cauliflower.

Gassie Jack Rises Again

VANCOUVER — Four businessmen who own mine buildings in the city's historic Gastown area planned to erect a seven-foot copper statue of Gassy Jack Deighton this week.

Deighton ran the first hotel in the area when the city was first beginning to grow.

Larry Killam, Howard Meakin, Bob Saunders and Ian Rogers, all of Town Group Ltd., commissioned the statue by sculptor Verne Simpson as a Valentine's Day gift to the area.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

British Engineer Founded Ottawa

By BOB BOWMAN

Ottawa was originally called Bytown after Colonel John By, a British engineer who was sent there to build a canal from the Ottawa River to Lake Ontario. He arrived on Feb. 14, 1826. The purpose of the canal was to provide a route from Montreal to Lake Ontario that would be farther away from the U.S. border than the St. Lawrence River.

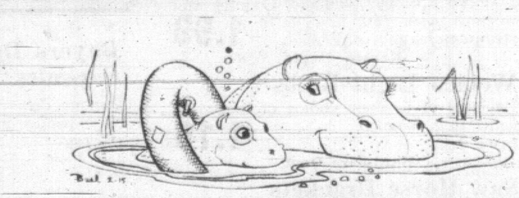
Although Colonel By did not begin his work until 1826, the route was surveyed in 1783 following the American Revolutionary War. However, nothing was done until after the War of 1812 when the plan was revived. Upper Canada was keen to have the canal built but would not pay for it or even accept a British loan of 70,000 pounds. Finally Britain agreed to build the canal and Royal Engineers were sent out to do the work.

The Rideau Canal, as it was called, was completed in 1832 when a steamer made the trip from Kingston to Bytown and the route was busy in the summer months until nearly 1900 when railways made it unnecessary. Ironically, it was never used for military purposes because Canada and the U.S.A. have not been at war against each other since the War of 1812. The "Trent incident" scare of 1861, when Britain rushed 14,000 troops to defend Canada against an expected U.S. attack, took place during the winter months when the Rideau Canal was closed.

Today the canal is used only by pleasure boats. The route includes a number of beautiful lakes.

Bytown was renamed Ottawa in 1855 and was chosen as the capital of Canada by Queen Victoria in 1857. The decision was so unpopular that it led to the defeat of the Macdonald-Cartier government, only it regained power in a few days through a tricky political manoeuvre known as the "double-shuffle." Even so it is said that Macdonald was not confident until shortly before Confederation that Ottawa would continue to be the capital of Canada.

The Wonderful World of Animals



By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is it true that the hippopotamus is born in the water?—R.F.

DEAR R.F.: Yes, the baby ones are ... And, not surprisingly, they must surface within a VERY short time to breathe or forget the whole thing.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: What will the requirements be for taking my cat into Norway with me this summer?—D.S.

DEAR D.S.: Norway is not the easiest country to tour with a pet in tow. In fact, regulations practically prohibit pet entry. Those that make it at all enter as exceptions and require a health certificate validated by the Norwegian consul, plus a six to nine month quarantine before the poor pet is allowed to join its owner. These regulations make pet-packing prohibitive in Norway.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: Penny and Peter, our two parakeets, are going on five years of age. They have done well in raising young birds in the past years. Can we still expect more of the same from them this year or are they getting too old?—J. McT.

DEAR J.McT.: For purposes of procreation, a hen parakeet Penny's age must be considered past her prime. She might still produce a family but she'd be one pooped parakeet by the time her fledglings had flown the coop. Surprisingly, Peter's prime lasts a little longer. This could be a banner year for him providing he could find some young (but not too young) chick who could bring out the best in him.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: If my pet ducks happened to swallow some left over lead from my Dad's old shotgun shell, will this hurt them? I think Cheese and Quackers did this so that's why I'm wondering.—R.T.

DEAR R.T.: It may already be too late to "de-lead" that pair; but at least get them in to the doctor for a try. Lead shot doesn't have to have powder behind it to be fatal to waterfowl. In fact, estimates are that ducky deaths from lead pellets which originally missed their marks run three per cent of the entire wild duck population. One of the not-so-early symptoms of lead poisoning in your duck would be a change in the tone of Quackers' "quacker."

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: You have written about using flea collars and indicate they are effective. But dangerous? Do you advise their use or not? If so, what precautions?—T.A.

DEAR T.A.: Yes I would recommend the use of plastic flea feline and canine collars under certain conditions, as follows: Use cat-sized collars on small dogs to reduce the amount of potentially toxic chemical (dichlorvos) exposure. Fasten collars loosely to allow air circulation between collar and skin. Use collars on cats permitted outside only if the collar is cut through and repaired so it will break apart with a strong pull. (This will keep the cat from strangling himself if the collar catches on something.) Open the package and "air out" the collar for 48 hours before putting it on the animal. Check the skin under the collar daily for the first couple of weeks. If the skin shows any sign of reddening (indicating hypersensitivity), remove the collar at once. If the animal becomes sluggish during the first few days, remove the collar just in case it is causing a generalized, adverse reaction.

Hydro Talk Bar Protested

The second procedural dispute in the legislature in two days touched off a heated row between the government members and the opposition Friday.

Defiance of a ruling by Deputy Speaker Herb Bruch by Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) and a walk-out by all but two of the NDP and Liberal MLAs highlighted the argument.

Thursday a vote supported by all but one of the government members upheld a previous ruling that members could not discuss B.C Hydro and transit rates.

FREEDOM STIFLED

Opposition members charged Friday that the ruling and the vote stifled their freedom of speech in the legislature and challenged the decisions.

Macdonald, speaking in the budget debate, announced he would speak on hydro rates and started to say that transit rates would have to go up this year because the government was losing money.

Ed Smith (SC—North Peace River) arose on a point of order to point out that he had been overruled Thursday when he tried to talk on the same subject. Bruch agreed.

Macdonald then said "freedom of speech will be infringed in this legislature over my dead body."

BENNETT SPOKE

Though Bruch asked the MLA to sit down, Macdonald said he intended to proceed. He said that Premier Bennett had been allowed to speak without interference when he mentioned B.C. Hydro in the budget speech.

When Macdonald persisted, Bruch asked, "Does the member intend to defy?"

"Yes," Macdonald answered.

Speaker William Murray then took over the chair from Bruch, and Macdonald proceeded to say that the matter of transit rates affects the whole question of traffic congestion and pollution before he was called to order.

Murray upheld the ruling that the rates could not be discussed because of an intended amendment to the B.C. Power and Hydro Authority Act, and because of a resolution made by Liberal leader Patrick McGeer asking for an investigation into capital financing and rate structure of the corporation.

Riot Defendants Cited For Contempt of Court

CHICAGO (AP) — The case of seven men charged with conspiring to incite rioting during the 1968 Democratic national convention went to the jury Saturday and the judge then cited several defendants for contempt of court.

U.S. District Court Judge Julius J. Hoffman ordered the jury of 10 women and two men to begin their deliberations.

Then he announced he would take up the matter of contempt against the defendants and their lawyers during the trial, and began reading contempt citations against them.

It was not immediately known how many defendants were cited or what the penalties would be.

Hoffman spent about two hours instructing the jurors.

He told them they must first determine whether any of the defendants was a member of a conspiracy that planned the violence during the convention in Chicago in August, 1968.

"If you find that a conspiracy existed and during the existence of a conspiracy, one of the alleged overt acts was committed by a member of that conspiracy, that is sufficient to find all members of the conspiracy guilty.

"When persons enter into the unlawful agreement, they become agents for one another," the judge said.

Final arguments in the case were heard Friday.

Charged with conspiracy to incite rioting are Jerry Rubin, Abbie Hoffman, David T. Dellinger, Rennard C. Davis, Thomas E. Hayden, Lee Weiner and John R. Froines.

If convicted, each man faces a $20,000 fine and a maximum of 10 years in prison.

Battle Anticipated At Premiers' Meet

Inflation Strategy Big Issue

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada's two wars—against inflation and pollution — will dominate next week's federal-provincial conference here.

And while there is unanimous agreement that both must be won, federal officials expect to meet considerable resistance to their strategy, particularly in the inflation area.

Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Friday that consumer credit, rents and professional fees will be discussed in the framework of both levels of government when he meets with the 10 provincial premiers beginning Monday.

THREE AREAS

He has already singled out three provinces — Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia — as operating in an inflationary economy, and has hinted at the possibility of federal measures aimed specifically at them.

But if such tactics are advanced, there is little question but that these three premiers will react adversely and vigorously.

The prices and incomes commission has indicated it favors a broad, national approach to the entire inflation problem, but this approach, too, will not be met with unanimous favor.

The slower-growth provinces such as the Maritimes have already argued that they do not contribute to inflation, yet nationwide measures against it hit them the hardest.

The prices and incomes

MAN JAILED 6 MONTHS FOR SHOOTING SWAN

NANAIMO — A 21-year-old man has been sentenced to six months in jail for killing a swan.

"It's hard to believe anyone could be so low," Provincial Court Judge William Philpott said in passing sentence on David John Bull, 329 Prideaux St.

"As far as I'm concerned this is one of the most despicable thinks I've had to deal with," the judge added.

Bull, an optical technician, said he had gone to Bowen Park to shoot another type of bird for food and killed the mute swan by accident but the judge said he had sneaked out in the dead of night and shot "an innocent bird."

Bull was also placed on two years' probation and banned from possession of firearms or ammunition for five years and he was warned that a contravention of this restriction could result in five years' imprisonment.

Judge Philpott made reference to civic-minded andividuals who strive to provide places of beauty for universal enjoyment but are thwarted by destructive vandals.

"People like you should not be allowed to go free among decent people because you do nothing but go out and spoil," the judge concluded.

Hospital Board Blasts Altering of Report

By JIM HUME

Former Mayor Hugh Stephen was aware that two pages were removed from a hospital site feasibility study before it went to the regional district hospital board, Dr. Alex Wood, chairman of St. Joseph's Hospital Board, said Friday night.

And consulting architect, F. S. Brodie, admitted that he had not told the regional district representatives of the deletion during discussions on the report because "we were aware the (St. Joseph's) board was very nervous about this, and that's why we didn't say anything."

The remarks were made during a two-hour Regional Hospital District investigation directed by North Saanich Mayor James Cumming, in an attempt to find out why Thompson, Berwick, Pratt and Partners, the Vancouver firm that prepared the report changed their opinion on street routing.

TWO PAGES

The change came to light earlier this week when the Times revealed that two pages had been removed from a feasibility study presented to the regional district and that a third page had been substantially edited.

In the first copy of the study presented to St. Joseph's board, the architects stated they were in "complete disagreement" with the proposal to extend Belleville Street through the new hospital site.

They strongly recommended

Report Said Yes-No City Paid Both Ways

It cost $5,000 to get a "yes" and $5,000 to get a "no" — that is how Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock described the $10,000 St. Joseph's Hospital site feasibility study.

He made the comment during a stormy confrontation between regional hospital district officials, members of the St. Joseph's Hospital board and two representatives of Thompson, Berwick, Pratt and Partners, authors of the study.

The first version of the study stated that the architects were in total disagreement with a proposal to extend Belleville Street through the hospital site.

The "total disagreement" section was later removed.

"We've spent $10,000 of the taxpayers money to get a report," Haddock said. "That works out at $5,000 for a 'yes' and $5,000 for a 'no'."

★ ★ ★

Following the meeting Haddock said he was fearful that by withholding vital information from regional officials the hospital program for the region could be set back 10 years.

Taxpayers are scheduled to vote later this year on a massive $45 million acute care hospital referendum.

Haddock said the events of this week had now made it virtually impossible to hold the vote this year.

Victoria—City in Search of an Identity

Friday afternoon. Late. And it is raining that soft meddlesome rain that Victoria has some days. Rain that seems like it never began and will probably never end.

Jack Scott got up from his desk here in the Times office, pulled on his rain coat, stubbed out a cigarette and went out into the rain to have his picture taken.

The photographer took him back to Blanshard Street and made his picture with the still-barren, raw-looking, low-income housing development as a backdrop. No grass has been planted there yet; heavy trucks have made ruts in the mud.

Blanshard Street — it must be the world's shortest freeway — was quiet; the rush for home hadn't begun; Scott looked a little tired.

"How long have you been in the newspaper business, Jack?"

"One hundred and twenty-three years."

Jack Scott had lit another cigarette. His hair is handsomely grey. He looks like he might be a shade overweight. He is slowly recovering from the East.

The East in this case is Toronto. Scott has had a career that makes young guys entering the newspaper business hungry, frustrated, that makes them lie awake nights scheming.

In Toronto he is to begin writing a column for the biggest daily newspaper in Canada but he has broken his leg and is in bed for seven months. He comes back to his home of 20 years on a quiet beach on Saltspring Island — and renews a long love affair with Victoria.

He is 55 and when you're 55 bones can be slow to mend. And there is even less time to waste.

Back there in the East, the freeways are never quiet, they roar all day and all night like the river at the gates of Hell.

"I began wondering what the hell I was doing it for," he says.

And he thought "stuff it." And he came to Victoria. And he came for probably the same reason that every one of us who isn't native-born (how many of those are there, anyway?) came here.

Because it isn't "there."

He's been "there." Started on the News Herald in Vancouver when he was 15 — 40 years ago.

He went to war. Came back to the Vancouver Sun. The biography reads like this:

"Scott, long a featured columnist with the Vancouver Sun comes most recently from five years abroad as a roving correspondent for the Toronto Daily Star. He spent two years as the first resident Canadian correspondent in Latin America and later headed the London bureau of the Star covering Britain, Europe and the Middle East ... He is a winner of the National Newspaper Award for a series on race relations in South Africa and the Bowater Award for a series on developing nationalism within French Canada. Other assignments have included the Mau-Mau rebellion in Kenya, coverage of the Arab-Israeli war (the six-day one), revolutions in South Africa and the "missile crisis" in Fidel Castro's Cuba."

And he's in Victoria?

Yes, covering another rumble — the one this place is making as it's dragged "into the 20th century, reluctantly."

But this story could have more significance for him than any other he has written:

"I was looking to find out what this place is where I plan to spend the rest of my days."

And so that Friday afternoon photograph has added significance, because those low-income houses (almost like little high rises, eh?) and that freeway (it's been called the freeway to nowhere, eh?) are a long way from afternoon tea in silver pots and the duck pond by Beacon Hill — a long way from the postcard picture of Victoria an awful lot of Victorians think this place is.

Call it emergence. Or about-to emergence. Or thinking-about emergence.

He has produced a remarkable document, this reporter, an eight-part series about

FIRST SHIPMENT of B.C. art to San Francisco's B.C. House got off this week as a promotion of Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria. Tom Sherwood and Donna Denike of CAC were on hand when Colin Graham, right, packed Winter Landscape by Richard Ciccimarra, top, and Victoria Harbor by Brian Travers-Smith.

Art Will Put Lie To Outback Image

By AUDREY JOHNSON

For all a visitor to British Columbia House in London or San Francisco could tell, this coastal province of Canada could appear to be a real "outback," producing lumber, salmon and totem poles and little else.

There has been almost no clue to the fact that the province is also well populated with artists, writers and musicians.

But this is about to be changed, thanks initially to the interest of Victorian Mrs. W. G. Ellis.

SPACE AVAILABLE

Mrs. Ellis was appalled when on a visit to London, she realized there was no indication at B.C. House of the interest British Columbians have in the arts.

She passed on her concern to the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria and as a result a shipment was sent this week to San Francisco.

The CAC was advised by S. C. Turbis, Assistant Industry and Trade Commissioner, that B.C. House in San Francisco had wall space and window display area available and would be delighted to have paintings representing British Columbia.

VICTORIA ARTIST

CAC inquiries brought replies from Tony Emery of Vancouver Art Gallery and Colin Graham of Victoria, that both galleries had paintings by B.C. artists in their permenant collections that could be sent on a rotating basis.

Paintings shipped from Victoria Art Gallery this week were by Richard Ciccimarra and Brian Travers-Smith.

A letter was also received from Rear Admiral M. G. Stirling, Agent-General of B.C. in London, welcoming the possibility of displays of art and artifacts from this province.

The building has display windows on Regent Street as well as space inside.

However, there will be a delay in shipping the first items to London until renovations being made to B.C. House are completed.

Government backing includes paying the shipping charges.

It is anticipated subsequent shipments will include, in addition to paintings, items of sculpture and pottery and possibly book jackets representing the work of B.C. authors.

St. Jean Boasts This Secret Recipe; It Puts Succulence Into Suckleyi

By DON VIPOND

Armand St. Jean of Nanaimo has spent four years trying to win the lowly dogfish a place on the dinner table. He says he's made it.

St. Jean, 57, operates a custom cannery. He said Friday that all his profits recently have been plowed into developing his unique preparation for the populous little sand shark roundly cursed by fishermen.

•

Just what he does to the dogfish to make it tasty he isn't saying. That's a trade secret he hopes he can patent.

But Tuesday, unbelievers and doubters will have a chance to try Kahada when St. Jean holds a sort of community taste-in from noon to 5 p.m. at the Shoreline Hotel.

Kahada? That's Haida for dogfish. Let's face it, the common name hardly tends to start one drooling.

The Shoreline outing will feature 3,000 Kahada cutlets and an earlier government-sponsored taste test suggests some people are in for a pleasant surprise.

The federal fisheries department is understandably interested in seeing a neglected species become a commercial asset. It gathered 77 people together to compare unmarked samples of Kahada and lingcod when both had been deep-fried in batter, like the fish in fish and chips.

Almost half the test panel preferred Kahada and five of six said they would serve either to their families.

•

The department concludes that Kahada (it rhymes with Canada) should be able to compete successfully with lingcod in the fish and chips market at least.

Dogfish is the only fish in the world which has to be "treated" in the manner he has devised, St. Jean said Friday. One of the problems is it spoils quickly.

He says he mastered the secret to canning it three years ago and now could deliver it prepared and fresh-frozen anywhere in the world.

But he won't until he has done what he can to legally protect his processing technique.

St. Jean has just returned from a three-week visit to Japan. He took Kahada samples along and says "they want it."

In it's report the fisheries department notes the Pacific dogfish (Squalus suckleyi, if you don't care for the choice of names offered so far) has never been utilized to any extent for human consumption.

"In the past it was caught mostly for its liver which has a high content of vitamin A. After the development of synthetic vitamin A this fishery has declined on this coast from the third in importance during World War Two to a present level, where occasionally it is used for reduction into oil, meal and fish fertilizer."

•

Curtailment of commercial fishing and the fact dogfish have few, if any, natural enemies have permitted their numbers to increase significantly, says the report.

"We have 'em by the millions," says St. Jean.

SKULL FRACTURED

Redel Undergoes Surgery

Walter Redel, the B.C. lands official beaten up by Quebec City police two weeks ago, was in the operating room at Royal Jubilee Hospital at noon today.

He was undergoing surgery involving a cracked bone above the left eye, one of the injuries he suffered when jumped by two plainclothes detectives searching for a bank burgler.

A hospital spokesman would only say Redel's condition is "satisfactory."

Mrs. Redel said today her husband's stay in hospital is expected to be for five to 10 days.

The brow injury had not healed and was beginning to effect his eyelid, she said.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson dispatched a telegram to the Quebec government Friday asking why there had been no reply to his earlier letter requesting full details of an investigation into the incident Feb. 1.

Redel was a B.C. delegate to a conference in Quebec City and was on a Sunday morning stroll in the Lower Town when accosted by the two French-speaking officers, who he described as looking like a couple of thugs.

After being taken to a police station, he was left naked for three hours in a cell before being patched up by a doctor, grilled by four or five men and then released.

Peterson said Friday he has not received any reply to a letter written Feb. 4 to Quebec Justice Minister Remi Paul.

The British Columbia government wants "compensation for the extensive injuries suffered" by Redel, said Peterson.

In his telegram he asked for "a very early reply."

Mammoth Babysitting Operation Is Really Creative Get-Together

By BOB MITCHELL

Each weekday morning, several hundred pre-school children are delivered to somebody else's house. They probably spend upwards of half their waking hours under the care of a substitute mother.

Another 60 or 70 kids are dropped off each day at centres at the Metropolitan and Centennial United Churches, to be picked up later in the afternoon.

What sounds like a mammoth babysitting operation is really much more. It's a day-care service operated by the Family and Children's Service.

★ ★ ★

Director Jane Gurr estimated during the last nine months between 400 and 500 children have been given day-care.

She believes one of the greatest needs of pre-schoolers is the socializing experience: getting to know other youngsters of the same age group, learning how to get along, to trust and to do without Mother.

'We come down heavily on the freely creative experience for children. By the time they get to Grade One they have more inner strength, they've learned how to cope with certain social situations."

★ ★ ★

There are several common misconceptions about what day care is and who it's for, Mrs. Gurr said. The most common of which is that it is babysitting service for uncaring parents or for poverty-stricken families with only one parent.

Certainly many of the children come from poor families, from one-parent families or from families where there is considerable emotional stress. But some are sent because their parents believe they should mix with other children and get used to being away from home.

★ ★ ★

The service also helps youngsters who, because of behavioral or physical handicaps have been unable to adjust to kindergarten or Grade One, and children of immigrant families who are just learning to speak English.

Parents, especially mothers, who were formerly tied to their homes are able to go to work, study or take employment-upgrading courses.

Staffs of six work with the children at the two church centres.

In their homes, day-care mothers are usually young women who prefer not to work outside their own house. They are also women who are genuinely fond of children and have the time and energy to devote to their needs.

A day-care home is licensed for a maximum of five children, ranging in age from three months up to about six years.

Ideally, said Mrs. Gurr, the homes should be located within the city on major traffic routes. But there are a few in outlying areas.

★ ★ ★

It's apparently a form of work many women like. A recent advertisement asking for applicants to start a new home in Esquimalt resulted in the Family and Children Service switchboard being swamped with calls.

The service is financed by a provincial government subsidy and by fees of parents who use it. Fees are on a sliding scale, based on ability to pay.

"Nobody is ruled out because of inability to pay," said Mrs. Gurr.

★ ★ ★

Some working mothers keep their youngsters in day-care on a part-time basis after the child begins school. Every day after classes the child goes to a neighbourhood home, thus relieving the mother of worry about what her youngster is doing.

The director said if there wasn't a day-care service parents would have to find sitters for their children, and she feels this could be harmful: "A child could have a different sitter every month, and that's dynamite for a kid."

Medical Head Retracts But Doesn't Retreat

Dr. Peter Banks, president of the medical staff at St. Joseph's Hospital, Friday retracted and apologized for a slashing attack on local politicians he made Thursday.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis asked for the retraction and apology during a two-hour discussion of the hospital's site feasibility study yesterday afternoon.

"I'll withdraw every remark I ever made about politicians," Banks said, "if that withdrawal can be coupled in some way with the foundations to get a hospital built."

But if Banks was retracting he wasn't retreating.

"If the politicians go on playing politics with people's lives by delaying hospital construction, then the souls of the people who pay with their lives will haunt them off the hustings," he said.

Banks admitted that he sometimes became emotional when talking about hospital beds.

"But doctors are impatient and emotional people," he said. "They deal each day with life and death.

"They can see Mrs. so-and-so with cancer of the breast and they can't get her into hospital. And they come to me and ask me what the politicians are doing. They say you are sitting around tables doing nothing.

"When I represent them, as I do here today, I speak a little too emotionally perhaps."

At a press conference Thursday night Banks said the medical profession was fed up with politicians who "sit on their arses" year after year doing nothing.

At the conclusion of the two-hour battle between St. Joseph's Hospital, regional district and architectural consultants, Banks said: "Now we've got it all out in the open and the reporter who got it out is to be congratulated. He was doing his job to ferret these things out.

"But it's out now and we've all had our say.

"Now let's stop bickering and get on and make a decision."

Curtis smilingly noted "Dr. Banks' conciliatory attitude today is encouraging."

Haddock Seeks Word On Health Linkup

Mayor Courtenay Haddock said today he plans to contact Health Minister Ralph Loffmark to find out how long the minister needs to work out details of regionalization of health services.

Then, probably early next week, Haddock will ask city council to postpone its Feb. 23 deadline for withdrawal from the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health long enough for the provincial government's regionalization scheme to be readied.

Loffmark announced Friday the cabinet had approved a new cost-sharing formula for regional health boards.

With nine days left before the city's threatened pullout from the Metropolitan Health Board, Haddock said today he anticipated no difficulty in convincing council members of the need to stay in for a little longer.

"I'd like to give the provincial government a chance to work out a formula," Haddock said.

"Those people are busy in the legislature right now—they'll need a little time to work on it."

He said he would ask aldermen to postpone withdrawal from the Metropolitan Board of Health "a month or six weeks."

He added that he intended to contact Loffmark's office to find out just how long it would take to work out administrative details of regionalization.

Ald. Tom Christie, who last month headed the council withdrawal move, said Friday he will support postponing the Feb. 23 deadline if Loffmark puts his promise of regionalization in writing.

GIVEN A COUPLE MORE winters like this last one, the blacktail deer population of Vancouver Island and the mainland coast will make up its losses. That qualified prediction comes from Dr. James Hatter, director of British Columbia Fish and Wildlife service.

"A winter like this is just what we hoped for," said biologist Hatter. "We're expecting to find good survival of fawns born last spring."

Nature has been kind to the deer that weathered through the energy-sapping deep snows of early 1969. As if to make up for a death-rate that ran as high as 75 per cent in some areas, the big-eared lightfeet have found good and easily accessible forage.

★

While we were talking, I asked Dr. Hatter whether the cougar that share those woods are in any danger of extinction. Not in British Columbia, he said, although persistent hunting has reduced cougar numbers considerably in the United States.

Vancouver Island's big cats, which now rate as game animals rather than as vermin for which a provincial bounty was once paid, have fared much better.

★

The Fish and Wildlife people look to a day when the cougar will be further protected by a closed season and a bag limit complete with tags of the sort required by deer-hunters.

Those who were around in the bounty years may find that thought a little hard to digest. But in a changing world with no natural assets to waste, it makes sense.

I HAVE NEVER FULLY understood the workings of inflation, and at times I'm by no means sure that those who are guiding our descent into a bureaucrat-ridden welfare state are any too clear on the subject, either.

But this I do know. Canada's federal government is also Canada's most reckless, witless spender. There was the squandering of $55 million on a hydrofoil — an interesting toy, but one that a presumably economizing government could have managed very well without. There was the fantastic refit for the poor old Bonaventure, the aircraft carrier that nobody wants.

And now comes Information Canada, to the tune of over $7 million from a national budget which is ambitious enough without the addition of this highly dubious item.

Information Canada, we're told, is being set up to co-ordinate all other government information programs.

★

In private industry where expenses must be justified, any such arrangement as this might be judged a redundant duplication of effort . . . kind of like putting two hands on a one-man operation.

I won't deny that a certain amount of wheat turns up in the bales of government information chaff. But not enough. I suggest, to warrant what impresses me as mere spending for spending's sake.

A HOUSE BY DAY IS A busy place, what with the furnace turning itself on and off, the refrigerator humming when the mood strikes it, and the dryer taking over where the washer leaves off.

★

Some of these noises may persist even when day is done. But we acquired an extra voice back around Christmas, and it kept up puzzled.

It was a clicking too loud for clock or watch. It seemed to come from anywhere and everywhere. We'd forget about it for a while, then hear it again, and try to rationalize it.

The best theory I could come up with was that some passing towboat's chesty engine thumpings had set a pane of glass vibrating. Win was more inclined to blame late-night traffic on the road. Several times, we tried to track down the source.

Then last night, the hollow tick-tock started again.

"Try moving your wrist-watch," Win said.

I reached out, pushed the watch to the other side of my night table, and at once the eerie sound stopped.

It was the watch, right enough, but with an assist from another source. A creature of habit, I'd automatically shucked it off each night and set it handy against a lamp base. The outward curve of the base had functioned as an amplifier, and given us that mysterious hollow knocking.

Tonight I'll find another parking place for the watch, and we'll sleep better.

★

That's it, except to thank Hebrides-born Mrs. Arthur Beadle of 3890 Douglas street for solving another mystery. Armed with the Gaelic, Mrs. Beadle interpreted the salution on that illustrated envelope as "Slante Nhor!" which in turn means "Big Strength!" or more freely, "Good Health."

A worthy toast, even though I can't begin to pronounce it.

Hydro Talk Bar Protested

The second procedural dispute in the legislature in two days touched off a heated row between the government members and the opposition Friday.

Defiance of a ruling by Deputy Speaker Herb Bruch by Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) and a walk-out by all but two of the NDP and Liberal MLAs highlighted the argument.

Thursday a vote supported by all but one of the government members upheld a previous ruling that members could not discuss B.C Hydro and transit-rates.

FREEDOM STIFLED

Opposition members charged Friday that the ruling and the vote stifled their freedom of speech in the legislature and challenged the decisions.

Macdonald, speaking in the budget debate, announced he would speak on hydro rates and started to say that transit rates would have to go up this year because the government was losing money.

Ed Smith (SC—North Peace River) arose on a point of order to point out that he had been overruled Thursday when he tried to talk on the same subject. Bruch agreed.

Macdonald then said "freedom of speech will be infringed in this legislature over my dead body."

BENNETT SPOKE

Though Bruch asked the MLA to sit down, Macdonald said he intended to proceed. He said that Premier Bennett had been allowed to speak without interference when he mentioned B.C. Hydro in the budget speech.

When Macdonald persisted, Bruch asked, "Does the member intend to defy?"

"Yes," Macdonald answered.

Speaker William Murray then took over the chair from Bruch, and Macdonald proceeded to say that the matter of transit rates affects the whole question of traffic congestion and pollution before he was called to order.

Murray upheld the ruling that the rates could not be discussed because of an intended amendment to the B.C. Power and Hydro Authority Act, and because of a resolution made by Liberal leader Patrick McGeer asking for an investigation into capital financing and rate structure of the corporation.

Riot Defendant Jailed For Contempt of Court

CHICAGO (AP)—David T. Dellinger, 54, the oldest of seven men on trial for conspiracy to incite rioting during the 1968 Democratic convention, was sentenced today to two years, six months and 13 days in prison on 32 counts of contempt of court.

CHICAGO (AP) — The case of seven men charged with conspiring to incite rioting during the 1968 Democratic national convention went to the jury today and the judge then cited several defendants for contempt of court.

U.S. District Court Judge Julius J. Hoffman ordered the jury of 10 women and two men to begin their deliberations.

Then he announced he would take up the matter of contempt against the defendants and their lawyers during the trial, and began reading contempt citations against them.

It was not immediately known how many defendants were cited or what the penalties would be.

Hoffman spent about two hours instructing the jurors.

He told them they must first determine whether any of the defendants was a member of a conspiracy that planned the violence during the convention in Chicago in August, 1968.

"If you find that a conspiracy existed and during the existence of a conspiracy, one of the alleged overt acts was committed by a member of that conspiracy, that is sufficient to find all members of the conspiracy guilty.

Charged with conspiracy to incite rioting are Jerry Rubin, Abbie Hoffman, David T. Dellinger, Rennard C. Davis, Thomas E. Hayden, Le-Weiner and John R. Froines.

Killin' a swan deserves a heavy penalty. Killin' a lake or a countryside sh'd git even more.

Battle Anticipated At Premiers' Meet

Inflation Strategy Big Issue

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada's two wars—against inflation and pollution — will dominate next week's federal-provincial conference here.

And while there is unanimous agreement that both must be won, federal officials expect to meet considerable resistance to their strategy, particularly in the inflation area.

Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Friday that consumer credit, rents and professional fees will be discussed in the framework of both levels of government when he meets with the 10 provincial premiers beginning Monday.

THREE AREAS

He has already singled out three provinces — Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia — as operating in an inflationary economy, and has hinted at the possibility of federal measures aimed specifically at them.

But if such tactics are advanced, there is little question but that these three premiers will react adversely and vigorously.

The prices and incomes commission has indicated it favors a broad, national approach to the entire inflation problem, but this approach, too, will not be met with unanimous favor.

The slower-growth provinces such as the Maritimes have already argued that they do not contribute to inflation, yet nationwide measures against it hit them the hardest.

The prices and incomes

MAN JAILED 6 MONTHS FOR SHOOTING SWAN

NANAIMO — A 21-year-old man has been sentenced to six months in jail for killing a swan.

"It's hard to believe anyone could be so low," Provincial Court Judge William Philpott said Friday in passing sentence on David John Bull, 329 Prideaux St.

"As far as I'm concerned this is one of the most despicable things I've had to deal with," the judge added.

Bull, an optical technician, said he had gone to Bowen Park to shoot another type of bird for food and killed the mute swan by accident but the judge said he had sneaked out in the dead of night and shot "an innocent bird."

Bull was also placed on two years' probation and banned from possession of firearms or ammunition for five years and he was warned that a contravention of this restriction could result in five years' imprisonment.

Judge Philpott made reference to civic-minded individuals who strive to provide places of beauty for universal enjoyment but are thwarted by destructive vandals.

"People like you should not be allowed to go free among decent people because you do nothing but go out and spoil," the judge concluded.

Hospital Board Blasts Altering of Report

By JIM HUME

Former Mayor Hugh Stephen was aware that two pages were removed from a hospital site feasibility study before it went to the regional district hospital board, Dr. Alex Wood, chairman of St. Joseph's Hospital Board, said Friday night.

And consulting architect, F. S. Brodie, admitted that he had not told the regional district representatives of the deletion during discussions on the report because "we were aware the (St. Joseph's) board was very nervous about this, and that's why we didn't say anything."

The remarks were made during a two-hour Regional Hospital District investigation directed by North Saanich Mayor James Cumming, in an attempt to find out why Thompson, Berwick, Pratt and Partners, the Vancouver firm that prepared the report, changed their opinion on street routing.

TWO PAGES

The change came to light earlier this week when the Times revealed that two pages had been removed from a feasibility study presented to the regional district and that a third page had been substantially edited.

In the first copy of the study presented to St. Joseph's board, the architects stated they were in "complete disagreement" with the proposal to extend Belleville Street through the new hospital site.

They strongly recommended

Report Said Yes-No City Paid Both Ways

It cost $5,000 to get a "yes" and $5,000 to get a "no" — that is how Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock described the $10,000 St. Joseph's Hospital site feasibility study.

He made the comment during a stormy confrontation between regional hospital district officials, members of the St. Joseph's Hospital board and two representatives of Thompson, Berwick, Pratt and Partners, authors of the study.

The first version of the study stated that the architects were in total disagreement with a proposal to extend Belleville Street through the hospital site.

The "total disagreement" section was later removed.

"We've spent $10,000 of the taxpayers money to get a report," Haddock said. "That works out at $5,000 for a 'yes' and $5,000 for a 'no'."

★ ★ ★

Following the meeting Haddock said he was fearful that by withholding vital information from regional officials the hospital program for the region could be set back 10 years.

Taxpayers are scheduled to vote later this year on a massive $45 million acute care hospital referendum.

Haddock said the events of this week had now made it virtually impossible to hold the vote this year.

Victoria—City in Search of an Identity

Friday afternoon. Late. And it is raining that soft meddlesome rain that Victoria has some days. Rain that seems like it never began and will probably never end.

Jack Scott got up from his desk here in the Times office, pulled on his rain coat, stubbed out a cigarette and went out into the rain to have his picture taken.

The photographer took him back to Blanshard Street and made his picture with the still-barren, raw-looking, low-income housing development as a backdrop. No grass has been planted there yet; heavy trucks have made ruts in the mud.

Blanshard Street — it must be the world's shortest freeway — was quiet; the rush for home hadn't begun; Scott looked a little tired.

"How long have you been in the newspaper business, Jack?"

"One hundred and twenty-three years."

Jack Scott had lit another cigarette. His hair is handsomely grey. He looks like he might be a shade overweight. He is slowly recovering from the East.

The East in this case is Toronto. Scott has had a career that makes young guys entering the newspaper business hungry, frustrated, that makes them lie awake nights scheming.

In Toronto he is to begin writing a column for the biggest daily newspaper in Canada but he has broken his leg and is in bed for seven months. He comes back to his home of 20 years on a quiet beach on Saltspring Island — and renews a long love affair with Victoria.

He is 55 and when you're 55 bones can be slow to mend. And there is even less time to waste.

Back there in the East, the freeways are never quiet, they roar all day and all night like the river at the gates of Hell.

"I began wondering what the hell I was doing it for," he says.

And he thought "stuff it." And he came to Victoria. And he came for probably the same reason that every one of us who isn't native-born (how many of those are there, anyway?) came here.

Because it isn't "there."

He's been "there." Started on the News Herald in Vancouver when he was 15 — 40 years ago.

He went to war. Came back to the Vancouver Sun. The biography reads like this:

"Scott, long a featured columnist with the Vancouver Sun comes most recently from five years abroad as a roving correspondent for the Toronto Daily Star. He spent two years as the first resident Canadian correspondent in Latin America and later headed the London bureau of the Star covering Britain, Europe and the Middle East ... He is a winner of the National Newspaper Award for a series on race relations in South Africa and the Bowater Award for a series on developing nationalism within French Canada. Other assignments have included the Mau-Mau rebellion in Kenya, coverage of the Arab-Israeli war (the six-day one), revolutions in South Africa and the "missile crisis" in Fidel Castro's Cuba."

And he's in Victoria?

Yes, covering another rumble — the one this place is making as it's dragged "into the 20th century, reluctantly."

But this story could have more significance for him than any other he has written:

"I was looking to find out what this place is where I plan to spend the rest of my days."

And so that Friday afternoon photograph has added significance, because those low-income houses (almost like little high rises, eh?) and that freeway (it's been called the freeway to nowhere, eh?) are a long way from afternoon tea in silver pots and the duck pond by Beacon Hill — a long way from the postcard picture of Victoria an awful lot of Victorians think this place is.

Call it emergence. Or about-to emergence. Or thinking-about emergence.

He has produced a remarkable document, this reporter, an eight-part series about

ISLAND ROUNDUP

Man Jailed 4 Years

PORT ALBERNI — Robert Henry Woodward, 27, was sentenced to four years in prison Friday when he pleaded guilty to four charges involving theft and drugs.

Woodward was arrested after RCMP officers seized a large quantity of narcotics in a raid on a McKenzie Road house Wednesday.

Three of the four charges related to a break-in at a drug store, Peter Eng[illegible] Prescriptions Ltd., and adjacent doctors' offices last Dec. 30. Heroin, morphine, cocaine, novocaine, opium, barbiturates and amphetamines worth about $1,000 were stolen in the burglary.

Const. Richard Davis said Friday the raid yielded about 40 per cent of the drugs stolen and police also recovered a stolen pearl and diamond ring worth an estimated $600.

A further 40 per cent of the drugs were located at a Vancouver address Thursday.

Davis and Const. Edward Roe conducted a month-long investigation prior to Friday's court appearance.

Woodward received a two-year sentence for the break-in, three years for possession of a barbituate for the purpose of trafficking and four years for possession of a narcotic, codeine, for the purpose of trafficking.

In an unrelated case which arose in January, he was sentenced to one month for possession of marijuana.

All sentences are to be served concurrently.

NANAIMO — The city has the right to tax Malaspina College, a three-man court of revision has decided in a ruling made public Friday.

Ken Wall, who owns the former hospital building that houses the college, appeared in court Tuesday to appeal a city assessment of his property.

Three members of the court were chairman Russ Inkster, Royal Sargeant and Frank Rowbottom.

Wall's counsel David Williams of Duncan argued that under the Public Schools Act school boards can lease land. And since there exists a lease of the building, the college is a "creature of the board."

Douglas Greer, counsel for Nanaimo, pointed out the Public Schools Act also states unless a building is actually occupied by the school board, it is not exempt from taxation.

DUNCAN — The Society for Pollution and Environmental Control here received a cheque for $663 from Salt Spring Island anti-pollution society.

The gift qas the remains of a fund raised for an unsuccessful attempt to keep Malaview Estates from getting a permit to dump partially-treated sewage into Trincomali Channel.

Salt Spring will decide whether to form its own SPEC chapter at a meeting to be held in Ganges, Feb. 24. Another branch already has been formed at Lake Cowichan.

The SPEC branch here also set up its "buddy sustem" this week. Under the system, members will collect newspaper and magazine articles on pollution and send them to a "buddy" in federal and provincial governments.

Vice-president Jim Egan said the articles were much more likely to be read than if the reader had to sift through hundreds of pages of other material.

Membership chairman Art Morton said there had been no real membership drive so far but 170 members now were paid which indicated more than 200 belonged because some were held by families.

Horn said among the members were four lawyers who were drafting ways in which the society could attack polluters through the law.

Office Union Approves Pay Hike

Office and technical workers on Vancouver Island have approved a new two-year contract that will give them salary increases ranging from 8 to 15 per cent retroactive to July 1, 1969.

Members of the Office and Technical Employees Union, Local 115, employed at credit unions in Lake Cowichan, Duncan, Port Alberni and Campbell River are affected by the new contract.

Other agreements coming out of negotiations included standard job classification, improved welfare plan and severance pay and vacations (four weeks after 10 years service, three weeks after three years service).

Island Cows Add $13 M To Economy

DUNCAN — Although dairying may not be as important to Vancouver Island as the forest industry, it contributes over $13 million a year to the economy, the Chamber of Commerce was told this week.

Case Van Jaarsveld, an official of the Vancouver Island Dairymen's Association and a Cowichan Valley dairy farmer for 20 years, said the $13 million probaly generated a like amount indirectly.

Feed companies, dairy plants, equipment dealers and even concrete firms all benefit from the dairymens' investment in the communities of the island, he said.

"We want to make you businessmen more aware of our contribution and especially as it relates to the better returns that island dairymen receive if consumers purchase locally-produced products."

He said island firms such as Palm Dairies, Northwestern Creameries and Island Farms depend on local business.

"We are being threatened by packaged milk products coming in from the mainland.

"We are not looking for a shoulder to cry on but can you afford to lose us?"

Rathie To Head Fund Board

Education Mister Donald Brothers said in the legislature William Rathie, former Vancouver mayor, will head the board that divides up the province's lump sum operating grant to B.C.'s universities.

Rathie was defeated in the Aug. 27 provincial election when he ran as the Social Credit candidate for Vancouver-Point Grey, the riding which includes the University of B.C.

Brothers said UBC Dean S. N. F. Chant, who has headed the advisory board that divides the operating money—$77,000,000 is proposed this year—wants to be relieved.

RETURNS FROM HAWAII

My recent trip to Hawaii was most interesting, educational and enjoyable.

Leaving Seattle by Continental Air Lines to Honolulu which had a Walt Disney travel film, five channel tape recordings by earphones to each seat and five seats across.

Checked in at the Reef Tower Hotel with a lovely corner room with two balconies and beautiful view. I made a new 16-mm. color film of the most important places of interest, then went to the Hawaiian Airlines office and received my Senior Citizens card, which gave me reduced fares to all the islands. This will be issued to you by producing your Air Canada Club 65 card or birth certificate.

The balance of this film was made of the Hawaiian Islands and will be shown to clubs. I then flew by Western Airlines to San Deigo, stayed at the El Cortez Hotel, took in Balboa Park and the zoo; thence by Greyhound to El Central and up the beautiful Imperial Valley — land of early vegetables—then on to Indio, the land of the date palms, grapefruits, oranges and lemon groves. Here I stayed at the well-preserved, old Indio Hotel.

Next day, on the Motel Six at Palm Springs, with the warm air of summer and a very busy place at this time of the year.

Then on again by Greyhound to Los Angeles and to the much-expanded Disneyland, with its many new attractions. Here I saw the making of Walt Disney film, "Kids of the Kingdom," to be shown on TV (NBC) March 22.

Now aboard the bus and along the beautiful coast route to Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo and San Francisco. Here I stayed at the Hilton Hotel, next to the Airport Terminal; then boarded Qantus Airline for Vancouver and home.

Let me plan your Easter Tour—this will be most interesting. With 30 years' experience in the travel business, phone me any evening.

Next week, same page of your newspaper, my trip to England in mid-May. Come along and enjoy the fun.

FIRST SHIPMENT of B.C. art to San Francisco's B.C. House got off this week as a promotion of Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria. Tom Sherwood and Donna Denike of CAC were on hand when Colin Graham, right, packed Winter Landscape by Richard Ciccimarra, top, and Victoria Harbor by Brian Travers-Smith.

Art Will Put Lie To Outback Image

By AUDREY JOHNSON

For all a visitor to British Columbia House in London or San Francisco could tell, this coastal province of Canada could appear to be a real "outback," producing lumber, salmon and totem poles and little else.

There has been almost no clue to the fact that the province is also well populated with artists, writers and musicians.

But this is about to be changed, thanks initially to the interest of Victorian Mrs. W. G. Ellis.

SPACE AVAILABLE

Mrs. Ellis was appalled when on a visit to London, she realized there was no indication at B.C. House of the interest British Columbians have in the arts.

She passed on her concern to the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria and as a result a shipment was sent this week to San Francisco.

The CAC was advised by S. C. Turbis, Assistant Industry and Trade Commissioner, that B.C. House in San Francisco had wall space and window display area available and would be delighted to have paintings representing British Columbia.

VICTORIA ARTIST

CAC inquiries brought replies from Tony Emery of Vancouver Art Gallery and Colin Graham of Victoria, that both galleries had paintings by B.C. artists in their permenant collections that could be sent on a rotating basis.

Paintings shipped from Victoria Art Gallery this week were by Richard Ciccimarra and Brian Travers-Smith.

A letter was also received from Rear Admiral M. G. Stirling, Agent-General of B.C. in London, welcoming the possibility of displays of art and artifacts from this province.

The building has display windows on Regent Street as well as space inside.

However, there will be a delay in shipping the first items to London until renovations being made to B.C. House are completed.

Government backing includes paying the shipping charges.

It is anticipated subsequent shipments will include, in addition to paintings, items of sculpture and pottery and possibly book jackets representing the work of B.C. authors.

St. Jean Boasts This Secret Recipe; It Puts Succulence Into Suckleyi

By DON VIPOND

Armand St. Jean of Nanaimo has spent four years trying to win the lowly dogfish a place on the dinner table. He says he's made it.

St. Jean, 57, operates a custom cannery. He said Friday that all his profits recently have been plowed into developing his unique preparation for the populous little sand shark roundly cursed by fishermen.

•

Just what he does to the dogfish to make it tasty he isn't saying. That's a trade secret he hopes he can patent.

But Tuesday, unbelievers and doubters will have a chance to try Kahada when St. Jean holds a sort of community taste-in from noon to 5 p.m. at the Shoreline Hotel.

Kahada? That's Haida for dogfish. Let's face it, the common name hardly tends to start one drooling.

The Shoreline outing will feature 3,000 Kahada cutlets and an earlier government-sponsored taste test suggests some people are in for a pleasant surprise.

The federal fisheries department is understandably interested in seeing a neglected species become a commercial asset. It gathered 77 people together to compare unmarked samples of Kahada and lingcod when both had been deep-fried in batter, like the fish in fish and chips.

Almost half the test panel preferred Kahada and five of six said they would serve either to their families.

•

The department concludes that Kahada (it rhymes with Canada) should be able to compete successfully with lingcod in the fish and chips market at least.

Dogfish is the only fish in the world which has to be "treated" in the manner he has devised, St. Jean said Friday. One of the problems is it spoils quickly.

He says he mastered the secret to canning it three years ago and now could *deliver it prepared and fresh-*frozen anywhere in the world.

But he won't until he has done what he can to legally protect his processing technique.

St. Jean has just returned from a three-week visit to Japan. He took Kahada samples along and says "they want it."

In it's report the fisheries department notes the Pacific dogfish (Squalus suckleyi, if you don't care for the choice of names offered so far) has never been utilized to any extent for human consumption.

"In the past it was caught mostly for its liver which has a high content of vitamin A. After the development of synthetic vitamin A this fishery has declined on this coast from the third in importance during World War Two to a present level, where occasionally it is used for reduction into oil, meal and fish fertilizer."

•

Curtailment of commercial fishing and the fact dogfish have few, if any, natural enemies have permitted their numbers to increase significantly, says the report.

"We have 'em by the millions," says St. Jean.

SKULL FRACTURED

Redel Undergoes Surgery

Walter Redel, the B.C. lands official beaten up by Quebec City police two weeks ago, was in the operating room at Royal Jubilee Hospital at noon today.

He was undergoing surgery involving a cracked bone above the left eye, one of the injuries he suffered when jumped by two plainclothes detectives searching for a bank burgler.

A hospital spokesman would only say Redel's condition is "satisfactory."

Mrs. Redel said today her husband's stay in hospital is expected to be for five to 10 days.

The brow injury had not healed and was beginning to effect his eyelid, she said.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson dispatched a telegram to the Quebec government Friday asking why there had been no reply to his earlier letter requesting full details of an investigation into the incident Feb. 1.

Redel was a B.C. delegate to a conference in Quebec City and was on a Sunday morning stroll in the Lower Town when accosted by the two French-speaking officers, who he described as looking like a couple of thugs.

After being taken to a police station, he was left naked for three hours in a cell before being patched up by a doctor, grilled by four or five men and then released.

Peterson said Friday he has not received any reply to a letter written Feb. 4 to Quebec Justice Minister Remi Paul.

The British Columbia government wants "compensation for the extensive injuries suffered" by Redel, said Peterson.

In his telegram he asked for "a very early reply."

Mammoth Babysitting Operation Is Really Creative Get-Together

By BOB MITCHELL

Each weekday morning, several hundred pre-school children are delivered to somebody else's house. They probably spend upwards of half their waking hours under the care of a substitute mother.

Another 60 or 70 kids are dropped off each day at centres at the Metropolitan and Centennial United Churches, to be picked up later in the afternoon.

What sounds like a mammoth babysitting operation is really much more. It's a day-care service operated by the Family and Children's Service.

★ ★ ★

Director Jane Gurr estimated during the last nine months between 400 and 500 children have been given day-care.

She believes one of the greatest needs of pre-school*ers is the socializing experi*ence: getting to know other youngsters of the same age group, learning how to get along, to trust and to do without Mother.

'We come down heavily on the freely creative experience for children. By the time they get to Grade One they have more inner strength, they've learned how to cope with certain social situations."

★ ★ ★

There are several common misconceptions about what day care is and who it's for, Mrs. Gurr said. The most common of which is that it is babysitting service for uncaring parents or for poverty-stricken families with only one parent.

Certainly many of the children come from poor families, from one-parent families or from families where there is considerable emotional stress. But some are sent because their parents believe they should mix with other children and get used to being away from home.

★ ★ ★

The service also helps youngsters who, because of behavioral or physical handicaps have been unable to adjust to kindergarten or Grade One, and children of immigrant families who are just learning to speak English.

Parents, especially mothers, who were formerly tied to their homes are able to go to work, study or take employment-upgrading courses.

Staffs of six work with the children at the two church centres.

In their homes, day-care mothers are usually young women who prefer not to work outside their own house. They are also women who are genuinely fond of children and have the time and energy to devote to their needs.

A day-care home is licensed for a maximum of five children, ranging in age from three months up to about six years.

Ideally, said Mrs. Gurr, the homes should be located within the city on major traffic routes. But there are a few in outlying areas.

★ ★ ★

It's apparently a form of work many women like. A recent advertisement asking for applicants to start a new home in Esquimalt resulted in the Family and Children Service switchboard being swamped with calls.

The service is financed by a provincial government subsidy and by fees of parents who use it. Fees are on a sliding scale, based on ability to pay.

"Nobody is ruled out because of inability to pay," said Mrs. Gurr.

★ ★ ★

Some working mothers keep their youngsters in day-care on a part-time basis after the child begins school. Every day after classes the child goes to a neighbourhood home, thus relieving the mother of worry about what her youngster is doing.

The director said if there wasn't a day-care service parents would have to find sitters for their children, and she feels this could be harmful: "A child could have a different sitter every month, and that's dynamite for a kid."

Medical Head Retracts But Doesn't Retreat

Dr. Peter Banks, president of the medical staff at St. Joseph's Hospital, Friday retracted and apologized for a slashing attack on local politicians he made Thursday.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis asked for the retraction and apology during a two-hour discussion of the hospital's site feasibility study yesterday afternoon.

"I'll withdraw every remark I ever made about politicians," Banks said, "if that withdrawal can be coupled in some way with the foundations to get a hospital built."

But if Banks was retracting he wasn't retreating.

"If the politicians go on playing politics with people's lives by delaying hospital construction, then the souls of the people who pay with their lives will haunt them off the hustings," he said.

Banks admitted that he sometimes became emotional when talking about hospital beds.

"But doctors are impatient and emotional people," he said. "They deal each day with life and death.

"They can see Mrs. so-and-so with cancer of the breast and they can't get her into hospital. And they come to me and ask me what the politicians are doing. They say you are sitting around tables doing nothing.

"When I represent them, as I do here today, I speak a little too emotionally perhaps."

At a press conference Thursday night Banks said the medical profession was fed up with politicians who "sit on their arses" year after year doing nothing.

At the conclusion of the two-hour battle between St. Joseph's Hospital, regional district and architectural consultants, Banks said: "Now we've got it all out, in the open and the reporter who got it out is to be congratulated. He was doing his job to ferret these things out.

"But it's out now and we've all had our say.

"Now let's stop bickering and get on and make a decision."

Curtis smilingly noted "Dr. Banks' conciliatory attitude today is encouraging."

Haddock Seeks Word On Health Linkup

Mayor Courtney Haddock said today he plans to contact Health Minister Ralph Loffmark to find out how long the minister needs to work out details of regionalization of health services.

Then, probably early next week, Haddock will ask city council to postpone its Feb. 23 deadline for withdrawal from the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health long enough for the provincial government's regionalization scheme to be readied.

Loffmark announced Friday the cabinet had approved a new cost-sharing formula for regional health boards.

With nine days left before the city's threatened pullout from the Metropolitan Health Board, Haddock said today he anticipated no difficulty in convincing council members of the need to stay in for a little longer.

"I'd like to give the provincial government a chance to work out a formula," Haddock said.

"Those people are busy in the legislature right now—they'll need a little time to work on it."

He said he would ask aldermen to postpone withdrawal from the Metropolitan Board of Health "a month or six weeks."

He added that he intended to contact Loffmark's office to find out just how long it would take to work out administrative details of regionalization.

Ald. Tom Christie, who last month headed the council withdrawal move, said Friday he will support postponing the Feb. 23 deadline if Loffmark puts his promise of regionalization in writing.

Arthur Mayse . . .

GIVEN A COUPLE MORE winters like this last one, the blacktail deer population of Vancouver Island and the mainland coast will make up its losses. That qualified prediction comes from Dr. James Hatter, director of British Columbia Fish and Wildlife service.

"A winter like this is just what we hoped for," said biologist Hatter. "We're expecting to find good survival of fawns born last spring."

Nature has been kind to the deer that weathered through the energy-sapping deep snows of early 1969. As if to make up for a death-rate that ran as high as 75 per cent in some areas, the big-eared lightfeet have found good and easily accessible forage.

★

While we were talking, I asked Dr. Hatter whether the cougar that share those woods are in any danger of extinction. Not in British Columbia, he said, although persistent hunting has reduced cougar numbers considerably in the United States.

Vancouver Island's big cats, which now rate as game animals rather than as vermin for which a provincial bounty was once paid, have fared much better.

★

The Fish and Wildlife people look to a day when the cougar will be further protected by a closed season and a bag limit complete with tags of the sort required by deer-hunters.

Those who were around in the bounty years may find that thought a little hard to digest. But in a changing world with no natural assets to waste, it makes sense.

I HAVE NEVER FULLY understood the workings of inflation, and at times I'm by no means sure that those who are guiding our descent into a bureaucrat-ridden welfare state are any too clear on the subject, either.

But this I do know. Canada's federal government is also Canada's most reckless, witless spender. There was the squandering of $55 million on a hydrofoil — an interesting toy, but one that a presumably economizing government could have managed very well without. There was the fantastic refit for the poor old Bonaventure, the aircraft carrier that nobody wants.

And now comes Information Canada, to the tune of over $7 million from a national budget which is ambitious enough without the addition of this highly dubious item.

Information Canada, we're told, is being set up to co-ordinate all other government information programs.

★

In private industry where expenses must be justified, any such arrangement as this might be judged a redundant duplication of effort . . . kind of like putting two hands on a one-man operation.

I won't deny that a certain amount of wheat turns up in the bales of government information chaff. But not enough. I suggest, to warrant what impresses me as mere spending for spending's sake.

A HOUSE BY DAY IS A busy place, what with the furnace turning itself on and off, the refrigerator humming when the mood strikes it, and the dryer taking over where the washer leaves off.

★

Some of these noises may persist even when day is done. But we acquired an extra voice back around Christmas, and it kept up puzzled.

It was a clicking too loud for clock or watch. It seemed to come from anywhere and everywhere. We'd forget about it for a while, then hear it again, and try to rationalize it.

The best theory I could come up with was that some passing towboat's chesty engine thumpings had set a pane of glass vibrating. Win was more inclined to blame late-night traffic on the road. Several times, we tried to track down the source.

Then last night, the hollow tick-tock started again.

"Try moving your wrist-watch," Win said.

I reached out, pushed the watch to the other side of my night table, and at once the eerie sound stopped.

It was the watch, right enough, but with an assist from another source. A creature of habit, I'd automatically shucked it off each night and set it handy against a lamp base. The outward curve of the base had functioned as an amplifier, and given us that mysterious hollow knocking.

Tonight I'll find another parking place for the watch, and we'll sleep better.

★

That's it, except to thank Hebrides-born Mrs. Arthur Beadle of 3890 Douglas street for solving another mystery. Armed with the Gaelic, Mrs. Beadle interpreted the salution on that illustrated envelope as "Slante Nhor!" which in turn means "Big Strength!" or more freely, "Good Health."

A worthy toast, even though I can't begin to pronounce it.

GUM MAKES SOUR NOTE

LIVERPOOL, England (UPI) — The Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra and the Huddersfield Choral Society are ending a 15-year association on a sour note.

The final straw for the choral society, which complained of "indifference" in the musicians, came during a recent performance of Handel's Messiah when singers noticed two members of the orchestra sitting back and chewing gum.

Plastic Totems For Museum

OTTAWA — Four reinforced plastic totem poles, copies of totem poles from the Skeena River area of British Columbia, have been set up at the National Museum of Man in Ottawa.

The totem poles were constructed after experiments with a latex moulding process proved successful last summer. The four moulds were subsequently returned to the museum and cast.

Three poles, from the Kitselas Village, are 10-foot-high interior columns used to support massive roof beams.

The fourth is a clan history pole from the Kitwanga village.

Vegetable Garden Plan Provides Best Return

By JACK BEASTALL

Jack

Planning the vegetable garden is something we read about but rarely put into practice. Occasionally we make a half-hearted attempt to draw up a plan, depending on memory for past successes and failures, but memory proves most unreliable.

Since each garden requires a made-to-measure plan to suit existing conditions, no set plan will suit every garden.

The culture required by given vegetables will be the same in all gardens, therefore dictates to some extent the location the plants should occupy.

Onions are spoiled if water reaches their roots after the bulbs have reached full size and area ready for ripening. They must be sown, or the seedlings planted, well away from any crop needing copious watering in July and August.

On sloping ground always locate the onions at the highest point so that water applied to other crops will not flow downhill to the onions.

* * *

Lettuce does best in full sun during the cooler days of spring and fall, but will soon bolt to seed when exposed to 12 hours of sun on a summer day.

If lettuce is planted between maturing cabbage, in the raspberry bed or the north side of beans or peas, just enough shade will be present for luxurious growth during the hottest weeks.

Brassicas, the collective name for plants of the cabbage family, require a firmly packed soil for their roots of success is to be achieved. This condition can be obtained by setting out small plants in walks where the soil is firm. No loosening of the soil is necessary; just cut off the weeds with a hoe.

Make a hole just large enough with a trowel to take the roots, then firm the loosened soil closely around the stem with the end of the trowel handle.

Cabbages and their close relations do not like freshly manured soil, doing best where manure has been added for a crop the previous season. They also need a soil to which some hydrated lime has been added.

Cauliflower, although a close relative, is an exception, preferring a richer soil than cabbage, but still no recently applied manure, rather an area manured in spring for early crops.

Parsnips, leeks, the winter and spring cabbage, sprouts and kale remain in the soil all winter to be used as needed.

These should be located in a group rather than dotted here and there all over the vegetable plot, and the group should be close to a main path for accessibility in wet, blustery weather.

Turnips are not an unqualified success in local gardens. They need a fairly rich soil and fast growing conditions to prevent a woody texture and hot flavor.

It seems best to sow the small white Milan type turnip in late April or early May, using the roots in summer. In mid-July sow the pruple-top Laurentian type for use from the time the roots reach the size of tennis balls.

* * *

After carrots reach maturity the roots tend to split, also the longer they are in the ground the greater the losses to carrot rust-fly. Frequent small sowings are better for the home garden than one sowing to last a season.

Squash and similar vine crops can be accommodated in a small garden if trained to fences or trellises, the fruits supported in net bags if necessary.

Pole beans can be grown teepee fashion on a circle of poles securely tied together at the top. This method conserves space, lessens shadow on other crops, and forms a sturdy structure that withstands strong winds.

Corn is a wind pollinated crop, therefore is sown in a square block, never in a straight row.

The most important step in planning is to work out a schedule for sowing that will maintain a steady supply of fresh vegetables throughout the year, rather than too much for a few weeks and too little at other times.

* * *

The whole idea of a home vegetable garden is to supply the needs of the family it serves; it may be one cabbage, two lettuce, a pound of carrots or beets, and a couple of servings of beans in a week.

To have more than these quantities ready to harvest usually means wasted space, time and labor.

It is worth noting how the producers of canned vegetables stress the "garden fresh flavor" of their products, indicating garden fresh vegetables to be superior and desirable.

* * *

To obtain a steady supply sow just enough seed of the faster growing vegetables to give a two ro three week supply, and repeat the sowing every two weeks.

There is nothing to substantiate the all too common belief that vegetable seed must be sown in spring and at no other time of year. We can sow according to our needs from April to mid-July outdoors, and in coldframes, under cloches, or any protective structure for the rest of the year.

Tips For Home Gardeners

WEEK'S WORK

Abutilon seed (Flowering-maple) sown indoors now, and grown along in rich soil can be planted out for summer to grow and flower.

A sowing of hardy annuals now outdoors where they are to flower may be rewarding.

Those resenting root disturbance and most likely to succeed in cool weather are Shirley-poppy, mignonette Sweet-sultan and larkspur. Prepare the soil well, and firm moderately.

If fuchsias and geraniums in storage are showing growth, and you have a good indoor growing place ready for them, cut back all branches to about two inches. Repot, and keep in 55 to 60 deg. F. with a little water. New shooots on both can be taken as cuttings when two to three inches long.

A root of rhubarb can be covered with a box or barrel. Heap compost or manure around outside to add heat.

Sow in bed of covered coldrame, a few seed of early summer cabbage, red cabbage, early cauliflower.

Gassie Jack Rises Again

VANCOUVER — Four businessmen who own mine buildings in the city's historic Gastown area planned to erect a seven-foot copper statue of Gassy Jack Deighton this week.

Deighton ran the first hotel in the area when the city was first beginning to grow.

Larry Killam, Howard Meakin, Bob Saunders and Ian Rogers, all of Town Group Ltd., commissioned the statue by sculptor Verne Simpson as a Valentine's Day gift to the area.

Hydro Talk Bar Protested

The second procedural dispute in the legislature in two days touched off a heated row between the government members and the opposition Friday.

Defiance of a ruling by Deputy Speaker Herb Bruch by Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) and a walkout by all but two of the NDP and Liberal MLAs highlighted the argument.

Thursday a vote supported by all but one of the government members upheld a previous ruling that members could not discuss B.C Hydro and transit rates.

FREEDOM STIFLED

Opposition members charged Friday that the ruling and the vote stifled their freedom of speech in the legislature and challenged the decisions.

Macdonald, speaking in the budget debate, announced he would speak on hydro rates and started to say that transit rates would have to go up this year because the government was losing money.

Ed Smith (SC—North Peace River) arose on a point of order to point out that he had been overruled Thursday when he tried to talk on the same subject. Bruch agreed.

Macdonald then said "freedom of speech will be infringed in this legislature over my dead body."

BENNETT SPOKE

Though Bruch asked the MLA to sit down, Macdonald said he intended to proceed. He said that Premier Bennett had been allowed to speak without interference when he mentioned B.C. Hydro in the budget speech.

When Macdonald persisted, Bruch asked, "Does the member intend to defy?"

"Yes," Macdonald answered.

Speaker William Murray then took over the chair from Bruch, and Macdonald proceeded to say that the matter of transit rates affects the whole question of traffic congestion and pollution before he was called to order.

Murray upheld the ruling that the rates could not be discussed because of an intended amendment to the B.C. Power and Hydro Authority Act, and because of a resolution made by Liberal leader Patrick McGeer asking for an investigation into capital financing and rate structure of the corporation.

Riot Defendant Jailed For Contempt of Court

CHICAGO (AP)—David T. Dellinger, 54, the oldest of seven men on trial for conspiracy to incite rioting during the 1968 Democratic convention, was sentenced today to two years, six months and 13 days in prison on 32 counts of contempt of court.

CHICAGO (AP) — The case of seven men charged with conspiring to incite rioting during the 1968 Democratic national convention went to the jury today and the judge then cited several defendants for contempt of court.

U.S. District Court Judge Julius J. Hoffman ordered the jury of 10 women and two men to begin their deliberations.

Then he announced he would take up the matter of contempt against the defendants and their lawyers during the trial, and began reading contempt citations against them.

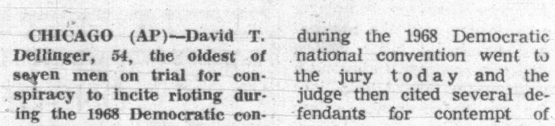
It was not immediately known how many defendants were cited or what the penalties would be.

Hoffman spent about two hours instructing the jurors.

He told them they must first determine whether any of the defendants was a member of a conspiracy that planned the violence during the convention in Chicago in August, 1968.

"If you find that a conspiracy existed and during the existence of a conspiracy, one of the alleged overt acts was committed by a member of that conspiracy, that is sufficient to find all members of the conspiracy guilty.

Charged with conspiracy to incite rioting are Jerry Rubin, Abbie Hoffman, David T. Dellinger, Rennard C. Davis, Thomas E. Hayden, Le-Weiner and John R. Froines.



Killin' a swan deserves a heavy penalty. Killin' a lake or a countryside sh'd git even more.

Battle Anticipated At Premiers' Meet

Inflation Strategy Big Issue

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada's two wars—against inflation and pollution — will dominate next week's federal-provincial conference here.

And while there is unanimous agreement that both must be won, federal officials expect to meet considerable resistance to their strategy, particularly in the inflation area.

Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Friday that consumer credit, rents and professional fees will be discussed in the framework of both levels of government when he meets with the 10 provincial premiers beginning Monday.

THREE AREAS

He has already singled out three provinces — Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia — as operating in an inflationary economy, and has hinted at the possibility of federal measures aimed specifically at them.

But if such tactics are advanced, there is little question but that these three premiers will react adversely and vigorously.

The prices and incomes commission has indicated it favors a broad, national approach to the entire inflation problem, but this approach, too, will not be met with unanimous favor.

The slower-growth provinces such as the Maritimes have already argued that they do not contribute to inflation, yet nationwide measures against it hit them the hardest.

The prices and incomes

MAN JAILED 6 MONTHS FOR SHOOTING SWAN

NANAIMO — A 21-year-old man has been sentenced to six months in jail for killing a swan.

"It's hard to believe anyone could be so low," Provincial Court Judge William Philpott said Friday in passing sentence on David John Bull, 329 Prideaux St.

"As far as I'm concerned this is one of the most despicable things I've had to deal with," the judge added.

Bull, an optical technician, said he had gone to Bowen Park to shoot another type of bird for food and killed the mute swan by accident but the judge said he had sneaked out in the dead of night and shot "an innocent bird."

Bull was also placed on two years' probation and banned from possession of firearms or ammunition for five years and he was warned that a contravention of this restriction could result in five years' imprisonment.

Judge Philpott made reference to civic-minded individuals who strive to provide places of beauty for universal enjoyment but are thwarted by destructive vandals.

"People like you should not be allowed to go free among decent people because you do nothing but go out and spoil," the judge concluded.

Hospital Board Blasts Altering of Report

By JIM HUME

Former Mayor Hugh Stephen was aware that two pages were removed from a hospital site feasibility study before it went to the regional district hospital board, Dr. Alex Wood, chairman of St. Joseph's Hospital Board, said Friday night.

And consulting architect, F. S. Brodie, admitted that he had not told the regional district representatives of the deletion during discussions on the report because "we were aware the (St. Joseph's) board was very nervous about this, and that's why we didn't say anything."

The remarks were made during a two-hour Regional Hospital District investigation directed by North Saanich Mayor James Cumming, in an attempt to find out why Thompson, Berwick, Pratt and Partners, the Vancouver firm that prepared the report, changed their opinion on street routing.

TWO PAGES

The change came to light earlier this week when the Times revealed that two pages had been removed from a feasibility study presented to the regional district and that a third page had been substantially edited.

In the first copy of the study presented to St. Joseph's board, the architects stated they were in "complete disagreement" with the proposal to extend Belleville Street through the new hospital site.

They strongly recommended

Report Said Yes-No City Paid Both Ways

It cost $5,000 to get a "yes" and $5,000 to get a "no" — that is how Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock described the $10,000 St. Joseph's Hospital site feasibility study.

He made the comment during a stormy confrontation between regional hospital district officials, members of the St. Joseph's Hospital board and two representatives of Thompson, Berwick, Pratt and Partners, authors of the study.

The first version of the study stated that the architects were in total disagreement with a proposal to extend Belleville Street through the hospital site.

The "total disagreement" section was later removed.

"We've spent $10,000 of the taxpayers money to get a report," Haddock said. "That works out at $5,000 for a 'yes' and $5,000 for a 'no'."

★ ★ ★

Following the meeting Haddock said he was fearful that by withholding vital information from regional officials the hospital program for the region could be set back 10 years.

Taxpayers are scheduled to vote later this year on a massive $45 million acute care hospital referendum.

Haddock said the events of this week had now made it virtually impossible to hold the vote this year.

Victoria—City in Search of an Identity

Friday afternoon. Late. And it is raining that soft meddlesome rain that Victoria has some days. Rain that seems like it never began and will probably never end.

Jack Scott got up from his desk here in the Times office, pulled on his rain coat, stubbed out a cigarette and went out into the rain to have his picture taken.

The photographer took him back to Blanshard Street and made his picture with the still-barren, raw-looking, low-income housing development as a backdrop. No grass has been planted there yet; heavy trucks have made ruts in the mud.

Blanshard Street — it must be the world's shortest freeway — was quiet; the rush for home hadn't begun; Scott looked a little tired.

"How long have you been in the newspaper business, Jack?"

"One hundred and twenty-three years."

Jack Scott had lit another cigarette. His hair is handsomely grey. He looks like he might be a shade overweight. He is slowly recovering from the East.

The East in this case is Toronto. Scott has had a career that makes young guys entering the newspaper business hungry, frustrated, that makes them lie awake nights scheming.

In Toronto he is to begin writing a column for the biggest daily newspaper in Canada but he has broken his leg and is in bed for seven months. He comes back to his home of 20 years on a quiet beach on Saltspring Island — and renews a long love affair with Victoria.

He is 55 and when you're 55 bones can be slow to mend. And there is even less time to waste.

Back there in the East, the freeways are never quiet, they roar all day and all night like the river at the gates of Hell.

"I began wondering what the hell I was doing it for," he says.

And he thought "stuff it." And he came to Victoria. And he came for probably the same reason that every one of us who isn't native-born (how many of those are there, anyway?) came here.

Because it isn't "there."

He's been "there." Started on the News Herald in Vancouver when he was 15 — 40 years ago.

He went to war. Came back to the Vancouver Sun. The biography reads like this:

"Scott, long a featured columnist with the Vancouver Sun comes most recently from five years abroad as a roving correspondent for the Toronto Daily Star. He spent two years as the first resident Canadian correspondent in Latin America and later headed the London bureau of the Star covering Britain, Europe and the Middle East . . . He is a winner of the National Newspaper Award for a series on race relations in South Africa and the Bowater Award for a series on developing nationalism within French Canada. Other assignments have included the Mau-Mau rebellion in Kenya, coverage of the Arab-Israeli war (the six-day one), revolutions in South Africa and the "missile crisis" in Fidel Castro's Cuba."

And he's in Victoria?

Yes, covering another rumble — the one this place is making as it's dragged "into the 20th century, reluctantly."

But this story could have more significance for him than any other he has written:

"I was looking to find out what this place is where I plan to spend the rest of my days."

And so that Friday afternoon photograph has added significance, because those low-income houses (almost like little high rises, eh?) and that freeway (it's been called the freeway to nowhere, eh?) are a long way from afternoon tea in silver pots and the duck pond by Beacon Hill — a long way from the postcard picture of Victoria an awful lot of Victorians think this place is.

Call it emergence. Or about-to emergence. Or thinking-about emergence.

He has produced a remarkable document, this reporter, an eight-part series about
